This is not an imaginary case, and with slight variations, not an uncommon one. But business men and employers generally weigh very carefully the actions and words of their employes, and the so-called "knocker's" reputation is a bar to steady employment. Our advice to young men changing their positions from one firm to another is : Don't be a "knocker," leave your employers in a friendly way, and though your heart may be filled with revengeful thoughts, keep a curb on your tongue. If you feel that you cannot say any good things of them, don't say anything to the contrary,—there must be something good about the house and its dealings after all, or they wouldn't be where they are, or do the business they are doing. Get another job and "saw wood" for your new employers, and use your own saw; don't throw too many knotted pieces on your neighbor's wood pile, those knotted pieces make the best fire once they get started, and they don't burn away as fast as your own clear-cut sticks. Winter coming along, you might wish you had kept the knotted pieces yourself—remember about the "Chickens coming home to roost." Don't try to build up your own reputation at the expense of someone else in your line of business—don't be a knocker. Don't slur the reputation of your old employers. What is it that Shakespeare says :

"He that steals my purse, steals trash, but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him, and makes me poor indeed."

DON'T BE A "KNOCKER."

LIMA BEANS.

AN article of food which is attracting considerable attention in the Ontario market at the present time is the lima bean from Southern California. This bean was comparatively well known five years ago, but owing to the subsequent easing in the ruling price of beans in Ontario the higher priced article was crowded out of the market. In the interval Lima beans became cheaper and two years ago provisioners found it advisable to reintroduce them on account of their manifestly superior qualities. The flavor is mild and entirely different from the strong, stringent taste which is characteristic of the commoner varieties of beans; the consistency is soft and mealy.

The demand has exceeded all expectations, and at the present time all the leading commission firms are carrying fair-sized stocks to supply the fancy trade. The only drawback apparently to large consumption of this kind of bean is its high price, the retail quotation being three pounds for 25c. as against 4c. a pound for ordinary white or mixed beans.

Lima beans are grown mostly in Ventura County, and San-Louis-Obisto, northeast of Los Angeles, Cal., where they are cultivated by small rachers who work from one to five acres of beans. The bean king of the district who died recently had a large tract of 1,200 acres devoted to bean culture. The crop largely depends on the amount of moisture; in a season of drouth beans are poor, with lots of rain the yield is usually good. Last season's crop was below the average, one result of which is that Lima beans are 30c. a hundred higher than they were four weeks ago.

TRADING STAMPS.

"COMMERCE is not gambling the money of nations for a stake to be won by some and lost by others. All parties gain by just and liberal commerce," said the illustrious Daniel Webster.

This is essentially true to-day. The elusive phantom of hope which beckons on some business men to try and get something for nothing is a just cause for alarm. In the Province of Quebec lotteries have been stamped out by law, but the gambling propensity of the French-Canadian is well known. He loves a game of chance and is none the less honest on this account. We would remind him, moreover, that there is not an iota of race prejudice felt or intended when we remark about trading stamps as they exist in the Province of Quebec and especially Montreal.

With the approach of May the first considerable interest is being shown in the law supposed to go into force then for the regulation of trading stamps in the Province of Quebec. The trading stamp in Toronto died a natural death some time ago. The leading company doing a trading stamp business in Montreal at the present time is the Traders' Advertising Co., owned and controlled by one of the oldest and most reputable furniture houses in the land. This firm declares that trading stamps are legitimate commerce; they do their business in a very simple open manner and defy criticism as to their methods. Grocers, they claim are using the stamps extensively with good effect, and J. Wilder who is the backbone of this concern, states that he will fight the opposition to trading stamps as used by his company, to the bitter end. He states in fact that if necessary he will carry it to the Privy Council, to prove that his methods are not only reliable and correct, but in every way devoid of the gambling element. At the same time a lot of smaller companies exist who perhaps may not have the grasp of the higher branches of the stamp business and who will have to close their doors on May 1st.

Retail grocers all over Montreal use the trading stamps, and it may be mentioned that a lot of gratuitous advertising is given poor schemes by certain sections of people opposed to trading stamps. The result is, they have a larger hold than ever on the community. We do not pretend to fight them. We merely say that any such scheme, if good, will live, despite opposition, and if bad it will have its day and disappear like other shams and delusions. We would say, however, that any grocer who endeavors to cover the cost of trading stamps by raising prices or reducing quality is making serious blunders. Such action only places a premium on better service without altering the conditions of competition.

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

THE recent action of the Dresden Sugar Beet Company, Dresden, Ont., in dismantling their factory and returning to the United States marks a crisis in the beet sugar industry of Ontario. Four large and well equipped institutions have been erected within the last year or two at Wiarton, Dresden, Berlin and Wallaceburg respectively, in which no less than $2,000,000 were invested. The Wiarton factory has failed, the Dresden plant is closed, and the remaining two are continuing the effort to establish themselves under difficulty.

Supplies of beets have been short, one factory with a capacity of 75,000 tons having received only 20,000 tons last year. Supplies at the present time are on the increase, but not rapidly enough to be equal to the capacity of the factories. Another difficulty, which by the way was in no small degree responsible for the closing of the Dresden industry, was the proximity of the Dresden and Wallaceburg plants to one another. It is to be regretted that the Dresden firm were not successful in establishing themselves in a more favorable situation, which might have gone a long way to render their removal from Canada unnecessary.

In the dilemma the Ontario Government have been asked to come to the rescue. At the time of the inception of the beet sugar industry in the province the legislature passed an act giving the newly established factories a bounty for three years amounting to $225,000. Again they have responded promptly with the promise of an additional $150,000 and will extend the percentage from three years to five. By this time it is hoped, the beet sugar industry will be well on its feet and firmly established.

Government aid in itself, however, will not save what promises to become an important industry. Farmers evidently need to have it impressed on them once more that big profits are to be had from beet raising. One prominent sugar beet firm has already taken this matter into its own hands and are sending a representative through the country to talk to the farmers on the cultivation of sugar beets. The same firm is also making special arrangements for cheap transportation of sugar beets and return of the pulp. It is reported that one Ontario farmer last year planted 9 1-2 acres and raised 189 tons of beets, on which he realized, after deducting cost of freight and seed, the sum of $822.86. Besides, beet pulp from the factory is good fodder, thus making the factory an auxiliary to the dairying industry. In this connection, the opinion of an American sugar beet expert is worthy of consideration. Interviewed by The Grocer on the sugar beet situation, he remarked that conditions in Ontario were more favorable to the successful cultivation of sugar beets than in any state in the Union, principally because of the adaptibility of the soil and the excellent condition of the country roads for marketing; and it must not be forgotten that the beet sugar industry is thriving in several of the United States at the present time.

But one objection to sugar beet growing has been raised by Ontario farmers who have tried the experiment, namely, that the crop requires very close and constant attention through cultivation.

The sugar beet industry in Ontario has proved so far to be in a measure "better in the promise than in the performance" after the style of Peck-sniff's horse. The situation simmers down to this: Does the country require such an industry and can the country support its needs? There is only one answer to both of these questions: logically there is only one conclusion, the beet sugar industry must sooner or later be successfully launched.

EGGS STILL FIRM AND RISING.

THE egg market remained very strong up to the evening of March 28, when the rise during the day of a cent and in some places a cent and a half fell away, leaving 21 and 22 cents the ruling price, though as high as 23 cents was paid for some specials. Arrivals from outside points have not been so large as expected and hence the firmness. Possibly there will be a lull after Easter and holders may be sorry for the sudden jump just at the time when the demand was so stimulated.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, March 31, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery market is showing signs of sprucing up, with trade generally on the increase. Grocers are well satisfied with last week's business. Canned goods are firm and stocks are rapidly decreasing . Sugar is firm, and one or two Montreal refiners have advanced the price. Syrups and molasses are in good demand but the market is uncertain. Indian and Ceylon teas are firmer, and in good demand. Coffee is firm, having advanced ½c, but buyers are holding for lower prices. Spices are firm and in fair demand. Tapioca is firmer, and the demand for it and rice at firm prices continues steady. Prunes are moving freely, and there is an increasing demand for dried apricots and peaches.

CANNED GOODS.

The market in canned goods is brisk with firm prices. One packer says canned beans are practically exhausted from the packers' hands; they are selling at $1 per doz. There is likely to be a strong market in all canned goods before the new stock can be placed on the market. Even now supplies are scarce in some lines, peas and corn being short, and stocks of tomatoes are being rapidly reduced. The demand for canned fruits and jellies is beginning as usual at this season. SUGAR.

Again we have to record an advance of 1-16 in raw sugars. There have been large sales, totalling it is said 180,000 bags at 2 5-16 c. and f. New York, which is equivalent to 3.67 duty paid. There are still buyers on this basis, but sellers are now asking 2⅜. At the moment refiners are unwilling to concede higher prices, preferring to wait a little before paying the further advance. By far the larger proportion of recent sales have been made to the Arbuckle refinery, the balance being made to the Howell refinery, while the trust took nothing. Part of these sugars are now loading in Cuba, and it would seem as if further sales would have to be for May shipment. Stocks in the United States and Cuba continue light, being altogether only 377.766 tons or about 120,000 tons less than for the same period last year. With the statistical position so strong, and refiners at U. S. Atlantic ports holding barely 4 weeks' supplies, the indications are favorable to a further advance in Cuban sugar, especially as 88 Cuban beet sugar has advanced 8s 6d per cent., basis f. o. b. Hamburg, which is fully ⅛ above New York parity. The situation, however, is more or less uncertain, since if European prices were to advance much further heavy sowings might result, as a higher price for roots would stimulate planting. The present expectation is that there will be a reduction of 7½ per cent. in sowing, but this estimate is as yet unreliable. The strongest and most reliable factor in inducing higher values will be the world's increased consumption, which it is anticipated may amount to fully 800,000 tons this year.

New York refiners advanced prices on March 24 5c per 100 lbs. for sugar in bbls., and 10c per 100 lbs. for sugar in bags. So far this advance has not been followed by Canadian refiners and the local market remains practically in the same condition as was recorded in last advice, with little business doing and deliveries on contracts only fair. Indications point to continued steadiness in the market. Our quotations are as follows :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup and molasses market continues uncertain and unsatisfactory. Neither producers nor dealers are willing to accept prices on any basis until the tariff war is settled. It is reported that the settlement will be according to the higher basis. One thing is certain, low prices will not soon be seen again. There is a good demand for syrups and molasses. TEAS.

The tea market continues firm with good demand for green and black and the lower grades of Indian and Ceylons. The Indian and Ceylon markets are strengthening steadily. Everybody is curious to know how the Japan market, which opens next month, is going to go. If the war is protracted Japan tea is likely to go sky-high, and Indian and Ceylon to advance materially in price.

In the London markets many invoices from higher districts showed a preferable flavor and for such higher prices were forthcoming. A telegram from Colombo advises shipments to Great Britain from March 1 to 15 at 3½ million lbs., or 7½ for the current month, about the same as last year. Deliveries of all teas continue on a free scale from January 1 to date these were 4½ million pounds ahead of 1903.

Telegrams from Calcutta give entries for export to the United Kingdom for the first half of March as 1,250,000 lbs., as against 548,000 lbs. for the same period last year.

A fair spirit is showing in Ceylons without material change. Competition, however, is not so brisk as it has been, and some irregularity is noted in fair to medium goods without much point in cup. Common kinds rule steadily.

In Indians, more hesitation is shown in bidding freely up to last prices, and occasionally a fractional decline has been made, particularly in common grades. Medium and fine broken Pekoes and fannings show a great deal of unevenness, May sellers having decided not to let teas go except at the highest point previously reached. Exports of Indian teas from the British Empire to Canada for the month ending February 29 were 70,706 lbs., as against 20,717 lbs. for the same period in 1903; of Ceylons, 217,551 lbs., as against 128,028 lbs. in February, 1903, and of China 33,728 lbs. as against 30,511 lbs. for the corresponding period last year. Our quotations are as follows :

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues steady with prices firm. An advance of ½c is noticed since last report. Rios are in big demand, but not much business is being done on the street as prospective buyers are looking for lower prices. Nothing certain can be predicted concerning future prices until the extent of the Brazil coffee crop is known. We quote the following prices :

SPICES.

The spice market shows signs of improvement. Prices are holding firm and the demand for spices of all kinds continues fair. The only feature to record is the high price of cloves, which is steadily advancing, being 100 per cent. higher than a year ago. Our quotations are as follows :

RICE AND TAPIOCA

The tapioca market holds firm, with a slight advance in price from last week's quotations. Prices are likely to remain firm as there is no disguising the fact that tapioca has been ridiculously low, so low that it has not paid the producer. The market will likely fluctuate to a considerable extent, owing to alterations in the price of silver, and to conditions of war in the far East. The rice market continues firm, with a 3 per cent. reduction of prices coming on April 1. The war in the East may have the effect of firming the rice market. Our quotations are as follows :

EGGS.

Eggs—The Easter demand is on, which, of course, means a much larger consumption, but the supplies have not been as large as last week. This is probably due to the bad condition of the roads and will not last long. There are lots of eggs but the farmers cannot get in with them. A big drop in the price is to be expected immediately after Easter. Meantime prices have advanced 1 cent. We quote :

Fish.

The fish market continued fairly active, although the conclusion of Lent will see a marked falling off in the demand. Stocks promise to last out until new supplies arrive. The feature of this week's fish market is a further easing in the price of oysters. Our quotations are as follows :

Green Fruits.

The green fruit trade is improving steadily and local establishments are beginning to assume their usual air of Spring activity. The demand for California navel oranges continues brisk; stocks are plentiful, but are beginning to show signs of waste. The season for navels is unlikely to last longer than six weeks, after which time their place will be taken by California seedlings, California Mediterranean sweets, and late Valencias. Stocks of Valencia oranges are good quality with fair demand and firmer prices. Mexican oranges find a ready sale, although stocks are not as good quality as usual. The last shipment of marmalade oranges for the season is about due; the demand for this stock is not likely to last much longer. Lemons are plentiful and good quality, with demand only fair and prices for 360s slightly easier. Pineapples are plentiful, although stocks are not so large as last year; the demand for pines is increasing steadily. More stocks are coming in barrels than usual this year. The demand for bananas is brisk, and last week's prices remain unchanged. The market for apples is slow. Supplies of Florida tomatoes are coming plentifully; the demand continues good and prices are slightly easier. The demand for cranberries is small with ruling prices low. Strawberries are beginning to arrive in the market more freely, and it is expected that within a few weeks a brisk demand for them will be created. We quote the following prices :

Vegetables.

The vegetable trade is quiet this week, with roots, particularly parsnips and carrots, hard to obtain. Cabbage is also scarce, with some frozen stock showing on the market. The demand for onions continues fair, with firm prices, although a few Valencias are offering at less than quotation prices. The demand for California celery is good, with stocks plentiful and prices slightly easier. Radishes, rhubarb and green onions are scarce, and in big demand. The demand for Florida spinach, which was new on the market last week is improving. Cauliflowers are noticed on the local market this week for the first time this season, and are offering at $3.50 per case. Our quotations are as follows :

Seeds.

The demand for seeds has been considerably curtailed on account of the last two or three days of cold weather. With the return of favorable weather conditions the seed trade will improve. Already farmers are beginning to market seed more freely. Last week's prices remain unchanged. Our quotations are as follows :

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

There is nothing special in the market this week, barring a weaker tone in wheat. Manitoba wheat No. 1 hard is 1½c weaker; Manitoba Northern No. 1 is 2c weaker, and No. 2 ½c weaker, respectively, while red and white are each 1c weaker. Oats are 1c easier. Our quotations are as follows :

FLOUR.

The flour market is somewhat firmer as a result of the increase in prices of wheat during the past week, and very little has been selling on that account. Deliveries are slow on account of the break-up in the country roads. Last week's quotations remain unchanged. We quote the following prices :

BREAKFAST FOODS.

The market in breakfast foods continues steady with firm prices. The break-up of the country roads will have a tendency to stiffen the market. Prices are unlikely to become easier in the near future. Last week's quotations continue unchanged. We quote the following prices :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, March 30, 1904.

Groceries.

GENERAL business is reported in a very satisfactory condition. Collections are reported fair and the fine days have stirred things up well. Sugar has kept its stand and remains very firm with no hope of it being abandoned. In fact one very large importer stated that he expected still further advances. He, too, believed that beet sugar would be dear all Summer. Tea of all kinds remains firm and the demand is still good for Japans and Ceylons. The reason given for the stiffening of the Congou teas is that the Siberian railway has been closed to ordinary traffic and a large stock of tea has been locked up at Dalny. The Russian Government too, bought large quantities in the London and Colombo markets and as a result further hardening set in. No doubt this will be maintained all through as the local dealers expect no depreciation in values. Changes in the markets have been immaterial and the usual weakening of eggs at Easter has taken place. A somewhat alarming report regarding maple sugar and fruit has been circulated in the trade. One was that maple sugar would be very scarce and the other was that buds and trees were killed by frost and other severities of the Winter so that the fruit crop would not be very promising. Canners are very much concerned over this latter report which is said to be well founded. It is learned that the combination of canners have bought up two more small factories, one at Brighton and the other not far away, this information was given accidentally and was no doubt not intended for immediate publication. The advance in tapioca is dealt with in a special article and is well maintained. New strawberries are reported good at the price, 40c, and show less evidence of water than previous receipts.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is very strong and as the price has again advanced in New York it is anticipated that some advances may take place here any day. One prominent dealer states that Halifax dealers are getting abundance of West Indian sugar and that there is no large quantity going to London. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

No special change was noted in the market this week, but considerable activity has been going on in all lines. A short paragraph got wrong in a correspondent's report last week regarding Porto Rico molasses, when it referred to a war in molasses being on in St. John, N.B. This was denied in Montreal. There was only a slight misunderstanding and what made the article look queer was that in one place it said a firm in St. John had secured a consignment of Porto Rico molasses and a few lines further down declared that no Porto Rico molasses had arrived yet. As a matter of fact the very first new Porto Rico molasses new crop only reached New York last Friday, so that there is not likely to be much in Canada yet. We quote:

COFFEE.

Heavy decreases are reported in European stocks of coffee. This is said to be owing to the lateness of the different Central American crops and also to much smaller shipments from Brazil, as prices there have been above the European parity for some time. The local market is still strong and the demand is first rate. We quote:

TEA.

The tea market is solid as a rock and the more stocks get cleaned up the better prices are likely to become. The demand for Japan teas is kept very strong and the additional fact of there being no change in Congous, has accentuated the interest in the medium teas of all descriptions. Good demand for all grades is reported from Colombo and an advance is reported all round. London is strong and good trading. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

Splendid demand has marked all kinds of canned goods this week and especially tomatoes, peas, beans, corn, etc. In fact there is a shortage of corn and a noticeable advance in tomatoes is expected within a few days. Old stocks are fading rapidly and new packs will be watched with interest. As indicated last week a decided advance is anticipated in salmon and in certain lines of canned fruits high prices are likely owing to reported shortage in the coming crops. California asparagus is 15 per cent higher than last year owing to shortage of the crop.

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Pronounced activity has reigned in Valencia raisins this week and the demand has been good all over. Prunes have taken a jump too, and are selling well. Dates still remain low and the demand keeps up. A word of warning comes from abroad regarding shipments of currants. It is to the effect that shipments from Greece are on a moderate scale, and the position would indicate that the supplies remaining in that country would have to be absorbed by markets other than Great Britain. Further, it has been reported that the crop in Smyrna amounts to fully 60,000 tons which is larger than the previous largest crop. Locally apple rings and evaporated goods are slightly dearer. Figs have sold freely and so have plums. We quote:

Green Fruits.

Noticeable activity has been carried on prior to Easter holidays and strawberries have been selling well at 40c. Large quantities of California celery had a fine demand at good prices. Some exceptional Easter specials were on the market, such as Bermuda new potatoes, new cabbage, asparagus, pineapples, cauliflowers, etc. Spinach was selling at $4 a barrel while the new potatoes were quoted at $9 per barrel. Prices in ordinary fruits remained the same. Lemons are going down every day owing largely to the immense arrivals in New York. It will not be long now before Italian fruit will be to hand and anxiously buyers are watching the Mediterranean boats to note their possible arrival in Montreal. We quote:

With three fast days this week and Good Friday the demand for fresh fish should be very active. Local dealers expect quite a rush. All frozen herring are off the market and tommy cods are also out. Fresh steak cod is 6c per lb, and fresh halibut is selling freely at 10c. Country Produce.

EGGS.

Down went the price of eggs just as soon as the bright weather and the fading of the snow allowed new arrivals to get to the dealer. The market kept pretty steady nevertheless and the price still lingers around 20 to 21c. The egg market is too tricky just now, to merit much of a drop without watching the daily market reports very accurately.

BEANS.

The bean market has hardened a little and the demand has been fairly good. Primes sold at $1.35 a bushel in car lots; smaller lots sold at $1.50 and lots of five barrels at $1.55; hand picked sold at $1.60 to $1.65.

HONEY.

Comb honey maintained its price steadily and white clover was quoted at 14 to 16c, buckwheat remains at 6 to 7c and the extracted white clover is still easy at 8 to 9c.

POTATOES.

The marked decline in potatoes has been kept up and they are selling at 70 to 75c for good stock, carlots on track, or at 80 to 90c a bag, with plenty of offerings.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Maple sugar products will no doubt be scarce, said Mr. Small, one of the biggest local dealers. One of the reasons given is that the snow fall had been so heavy that it was next thing to impossible to get around in the bush and snow would not be gone until the season would be practically over. However, reports from Beauce County away below Quebec, where immense quantities of the local supply comes from, states that the trees are in good shape and a good supply is expected. From the Eastern Townships there is still hope of a good supply. We quote:

Flour and Feed.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, March 28, 1904.

WHOLESALE houses are now pushing sales with energy, but the usual Spring buying demand is delayed by the backwardness of the weather. Conditions appear about a month later than usual; the rivers and smaller harbors are still ice bound and trade generally is not in advance of previous seasons, still quite a quantity of goods are moving, especially in the direction of the mining and manufacturing towns of the province, in all of which there is much activity. The farmers of the Annapolis Valley have realized over one million dollars from apple shipments to the markets of Great Britain so far this season, and there are still some thirty thousand barrels to go forward. The distribution of this money has boomed trade in "the valley," but not to the extent it would have done had there not been a shortage the previous season, so that a good deal of this year's profits have been absorbed in paying the bills of the former year. The debauch in stock speculation which preceded the slump in Dominion Iron and Steel is still felt and it is now apparent that the capital of some merchants was impaired to a much more serious extent than had been supposed. The mayor of Halifax and a few others in this city cleaned up sixty thousand dollars some weeks ago by going "short" on cotton, but it is hoped this will not tempt merchants to enter the stock market again to the neglect of their legitimate business. It was just such lucky strikes as this that a year or so ago led a number to the verge of ruin.

The uncertainty of the lumber market with a possibility of another drop in prices gives rise to considerable misgivings regarding the marketing of the season's cut. Business men consider that unless the market strengthens it will have a material effect on business during the coming Summer and Winter, as operators will not make preparations for lumbering next year on so large a scale as would otherwise be the case. The cut the past Winter was a heavy one in these provinces. The river driving will be late this season owing to the great amount of ice in the lakes and this will delay shipments of lumber.

The new ruling of the United States Treasury Board to the effect that the brine in the barrel has to be included in the weight of pickled fish, has increased the duty demanded by about fifty per cent., and will materially affect the fish trade in this province unless set aside. A strong sentiment has sprung up in the New England States against the new ruling and Senator Lodge undertook to have it rescinded, but was told that the only way this could be done was by a reference to the courts. In the opinion of many good lawyers the ruling will not stand.

The markets are firm and for the most part unchanged. Flour has been coming forward more freely and is a little easier in consequence. The price of molasses has declined. Canned goods are moving very freely. Salmon have again advanced. Bran and middlings are up another 50c per ton. Rolled oats have again advanced 20c. Eggs are in better supply at 22c., but dairy products are without change. Dry, pickled and smoked fish are high and the market is lightly supplied with the fresh article. Lard has advanced ½c.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., March 25.

THE wholesale trade here and all shippers interested in the Yukon trade are very much interested, not to say exercised, this week over the order received by the collector of customs at this port, J. M. Bowell, instructing him as to shipments for Dawson via St. Michael. The order, signed by John McDougald, Commissioner of Customs, is as follows :

"You are advised that the instructions issued in Feb., 1903, for the free entry of Canadian goods carried by foreign vessels from points in B. C., via St. Michael into the Yukon, have not been renewed for the present year.

"Canadian goods desired to be admitted free into the Yukon via St. Michael should therefore be carried only in vessels entitled to participate in the coasting trade of Canada.

"Customs certificates are to be granted accordingly."

The order is dated Ottawa, March 15, and goes into effect at once. The instructions which have not been renewed allowed of the direct shipment of goods via St. Michael from this port and Victoria, to be delivered in Dawson, free of duty. The fact is that it was a practical coasting trade privilege granted to the vessels engaged in the St. Michael trade, there being no Canadian or British bottoms engaged in that trade. As a matter of fact the steamer Alpha, which made a trip three or four years ago, and then ran the gauntlet of the U. S. customs at Nome, is the only Canadian vessel which ever carried cargo to Nome.

The real cause of disturbance among the merchants and shippers is that the privilege of calling here for Dawson bound goods, which is now granted to American vessels, is on exactly the same basis as that to vessels going to St. Michael. Indeed it is more strictly coasting according to the shipping regulations. There is no hint that the privilege of carrying goods from B. C. ports to Skagway for shipment to Dawson will be withdrawn, but it might follow very readily. Were that to happen, the only steamers which are now in the Northern trade are those of the C. P. R. coasting service, and they would be totally inadequate to the task of carrying such a large amount of goods as goes into the Yukon Territory in a short season.

That there will be a large direct loss of trade for B. C. and Canada through the new order is the general conviction. Men who know the trade well point out that in many lines, such as feed for horses, and other rough goods, it will pay to buy in the U. S., pay the duty and then send the goods round by way of St. Michael, as the freight rates that way are very much lower than by the other route into Dawson over the White Pass Railway and down the Yukon River. It is felt that the only beneficiaries under the new regulations will be the C. P. R. and the White Pass and Yukon people. The big trading and transportation companies of Dawson own their own river steamers on the lower Yukon and have many trading posts down the river in Alaska as well as at Nome, so that they take delivery of the goods shipped that way, at St. Michael, transferring them to their river steamers for the haul up the Yukon. They cannot afford to throw these steamers away, and they do not feel like paying the high prices which are to be paid on the other route. The wholesale trade here feels that if this order is followed by another taking away the privilege of shipping in other steamers from here to Skagway, it will seriously hamper trade for not only is the river service of the White Pass unable to cope with the heavy traffic in the late season, but the C. P. R. coasting service is not by any means equal to the task of carrying from here to Skagway all the goods ordered here.

There is a point in connection with the trade to the Yukon which is worth noting. The White Pass Railway people are striving to get as much as possible of the shipping done early in the season, but it must be remembered that the merchants in the Yukon District cannot afford to buy away ahead, and especially on certain lines such as produce, any more than can people any where else.

One of the B. C. flouring mills, that of the Columbia Flouring Mills Co., at Enderby, in the Okanagan district, has secured large orders from Japan for flour as a direct result of exhibits at the recent industrial exhibition at Osaka, Japan, a year ago. C. Thomas, representing the company, was in Vancouver last week making arrangements for some large shipments which will go out on the Empress of Japan in three weeks' time. The flour made at these mills is all from Manitoba No. 1 hard wheat ground in transit, practically. The Enderby mills have a capacity of 300 bbls. per day, and the same cars which bring the wheat in from the plains take the flour out and on to the Coast for shipment.

In addition to the plant run by them at Claxton, in the North, Wallace Bros. the canners, will this year establish another plant on the Naas River for the freezing and packing of fresh salmon for export. They have made the business a success in connection with their Claxton cannery and now enlarge their field of operations.

A shipment of 5,000 cases of canned salmon for Japan from Puget Sound went out on the Empress of India on Monday. The stocks from local canneries have been shipped long ago to the British and Australian markets. Large orders for salt salmon for Japan are expected by local salmon packers this year as a consequence of the war.

The authorization of fish traps, news of which has just been wired from Ottawa, creates a great deal of interest in local cannery and fishing circles. It is not altogether accepted with good grace by some of the canners, as they feel that the holders of what are supposed to be the choice fish-trap sites on Beecher Bay, Vancouver Island, west of Victoria, will have an advantage over others. It will also tend to draw some of the salmon canning industry to Vancouver Island, the headquarters for the industry having been in Vancouver and on the Fraser River hitherto.

The C. P. R. steamship Tartar, which arrived in port this week from the Orient had a very large cargo, of which there was a considerable proportion of rice and tea. The importations of the former article have been unusually heavy owing to the expectation that that export may be prohibited from Japan ere long. There were 13,085 sacks of rice in the Tartar's cargo, nearly 325 tons. Tea was represented in 4,856 packages. An odd shipment from China was 281 sacks of peanuts, which are usually supposed to come from the Southern States. Camphor from Formosa, and other staples were included in the manifest in smaller quantities, the cargo being made up of matting, silk, bamboo furniture, curios and Chinese merchandise, that is, provisions and articles of food imported by Chinese resident in this country. There were over 2,000 packages of such goods.

Local market conditions are quiet this week. Flour shows no change here, some retailers still selling at the price which they would have to pay in car lots viz., $6 per bbl. They evidently had stocks on hand before the last rise.

In canned vegetables there is hardly the movement that might be expected at this season. Prices are still about the same, a little lower than Eastern basis. There is not much likelihood of any one having to re-order. The dried fruit situation is strong. Apricots have gone up ½c and are now very firm at 11½c. Peaches and other lines are about 6½c, but peaches will go up in sympathy with apricots.

Lard has moved up a little, tierces being now quoted to the trade at 10½c and 5s at 11 to 11½c.

In produce the butter market is still pretty bare, the stocks being replenished from California at a quotation of about 27 to 30c. Eggs are coming in pretty freely from local sources, for local consumption, but importations for northern and interior shipments come yet from California and Oregon. There were quite a large number of egg orders North on the Princess May when she sailed on the 21st.

In fruit the orange market is brightening up, demand from the interior being better and local consumption larger. There is a little firmer tendency in the California market but prices are still low. Local houses quote for fancy navels $2.75 to $3 per case with other grades down to $2. Bananas are selling at $2.75 to $3. Some Washington apples Deleware reds and Ben Davis are on the market at $1.75 to $2 to the trade.

In vegetables, onions are perhaps the most sought item just now. Very few local can be secured and they are quoted at 4½c. The stock of New Zealand silverskins will go up to 5c when it arrives next week. In fresh vegetables, cauliflowers are $1.25 to $1.40 per doz., cabbage 3 to 3½c per lb., celery 90c per doz., asparagus 16 to 18c lb., green peas 12c rhubarb 10 to 12c, ripe tomatoes $2.75 per 20 lb. crate. These are imported from Louisiana and Florida. Green cucumbers, grown in hot houses in California are selling at $2.25 to $3 per doz. here which makes them at least 25c each to the consumer. Very few potatoes are offering and prices are firmer. Ashcrofts are up to $24 per ton again.

THE JAPAN TEA SUBSIDY.

THE Government tea subsidy not having been renewed, owing partly to the sudden dissolution of the Diet last year, and also to the protests of foreign firms, members of the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association will probably apply for the renewal of the subsidy through the next Diet if it is not considered that the opening of war is an inopportune time to make application for such assistance, says the Kobe Japan Chronicle of February 25.

It is worth while at the present moment to consider the actual results of the subsidy. The subsidy enabled Japanese tea exporters to consign tea to the care of their fellow-countrymen in America, but it is very doubtful if it would not have been far better for exporters to have dealt with foreigners, the latter having more practical experience and enjoying greater confidence in the trade. In forming a connection with foreign tea merchants in the American market, Japanese exporters would have found a good and lasting medium through which they would have disposed of their consignments to advantage.

By the abolition of this subsidy the representation of the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association in New York, Chicago and Montreal will probably be abolished. As the public are aware, the representatives were allowed to handle consignments, and were individually in an exceptionally favorable position as against unassisted undertakings, being in receipt of handsome salaries, with house and office expenses paid by the Association. They also had commissions on sales. It is now probable that they will establish themselves independently, and invite Japanese tea exporters to contribute capital to their undertakings. The work these representatives have hitherto been engaged in cannot be described as "business" in the ordinary competitive sense, because, apart from their lack of experience, the easy life induced by an ample salary with almost everything supplied out of the subsidy was not one to lead to an increase of business, and the experience they gained must consequently be of a skin-deep character. It will be from the moment they establish themselves that their true experience will begin, and it is worth while warning them not to repeat the practices alleged against them while representing the subsidized association, particularly observing the old proverb "Honesty is the best policy"; and to refrain from such advertisement inaccuracies as their statement, for instance, that "every pound of tea exported is carefully inspected by Government officials," when not an ounce was so inspected.

They, as well as all others connected with the business, must also carefuuly refrain in the future from such practices as the alleged declaring less weight or measurement than is actually the case. If the shipments made by Japanese exporting companies during the many years that have passed could be correctly estimated it would probably be found that tens of thousands of yen have been lost to shipping companies. This abuse was hinted at some time ago, and it is one that the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association should seriously consider with the object of correcting an abuse which is alleged to exist.

It is probable, however, that the representatives connected with the association will establish themselves as tea importers in America, dealing in the article in connection with Japanese refirers and exporters. Whether such a step is advantageous or not time will show, but it is believed that the cooperation of Japanese with foreign firms would be of greater benefit to the Japan tea trade.

It is surprising how the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association, which, according to a practical Kobe tea merchant, has made little progress since its organization, could have persuaded the Government to allow the subsidy. There seems to have been no return for the outlay of Y350,000 of Government money expended during five years. It has disappeared like smoke.

Since the receipt of the above communication, it has been learned that the subsidy is to be discontinued after next month. The Central Board of Tea Guilds is about to consider the future course to be taken. It is stated that the representatives in America will be recalled and that Mr. Mizutani, in charge of the Chicago branch, will arrive by the next mail to consult with the association as to the course to be taken.

WHY SOME GROCERS LOSE CUSTOMERS.

Because they possess no tact.

Because they are not prompt in making deliveries; fail to keep their promises; never are on time.

Because they overcharge good-pay customers to make up for losses on poor-pay customers.

Because they employ incompetent or impolite clerks, or both.

Because they substitute goods of poorer quality for brands they know the customer is partial to.

A LONDON VISITOR.

Mr. Arthur Sutcliffe, of Sutcliffe & Bingham, London, manufacturers of the "Kkovah" household products, was a visitor to Montreal during the past ten days. Mr. Sutcliffe's visit was only a flying one and he returns to London in a few days. The demand for high-class jellies and kindred products such as are manufactured by his firm, is on the increase, and though a satisfactory business has been done in Canada the outlook for increased trade is most encouraging. Mr. Sutcliffe honored The Grocer with a call.

Davidson & Co., in partnership with his son, Capt. R. Davidson. The firm have carried on an extensive business in Eastern Canada and especially in the Maritime Provinces, under the guidance and administration of deceased, whose reputation in business circles was always synonymous with sterling integrity.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, March 31, 1904.

Manitoba and Western Canada have been visited by another regular March blizzard which piled the snow to a height of 5 feet, practically paralyzing traffic along the railways. All shipments will be temporarily delayed as a result.

The market is practically at a standstill with no changes in price of any note.

Eggs are again very scarce and have advanced a little, the dealers holding at 30c to 32c for fresh gathered.

Sugars—The market remains firm no change since the 14th of March. Montreal granulated is quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows at $4.25.

Evaporated Dried Fruits—All lines remain firm with the exception of evaporated apples, which are quoted a little higher, 50 lb. boxes at 6¾c and 25 lb. boxes at 7¼c.

Flour—The local flour market remains strong and unchanged, with No. 1 patent at $2.75.

Cured Meats—The markets are firm at prices quoted last week and lard still holds its prices unchanged, 20 lb. pails pure at $2.15, 3 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 5 lb. pails $6.35, 10 lb. pails $6.50, and compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N.B., March 31, 1904.

SPRING is here at last. It will be sometime, however, before the snow outside the city disappears and the river is open. While a number of the Nova Scotia packets have come out of Winter quarters some are not out yet. All the branch railways are now open. There is still delay in getting Western shipments forward, notwithstanding the fact that the situation is much improved. The Winter port business is drawing to a close, after a particularly successful season. Late steamers will arrive about the middle of April. Local merchants find considerable fault with the terms on which the C.P.R. buy supplies. They think it strange and most unsatisfactory that such a corporation should buy on four months' time. The steamship companies outside of the C.P.R. as a rule paying cash. The demand from the steamers has brought a new line to the stock of our supply people, for although frogs' legs have been used for some years, very few have been brought here. Considerable local demand is now noticed. Markets show little change. Flour is weaker. Sugar is very firm. Fish are scarce and high. The comparatively free arrivals of new Barbadoes molasses, which may be looked upon as the opening of season, are of interest. Prices are low and in view of the prices which have ruled are very attractive. The outlook, however, is for low values. In spices, ginger is low, pepper high, and cloves very high. Rice, which is arriving from England freely, is low and while the market seems firmer, there is little change.

Oil—This has been a quiet market for some time, at least as far as changes in price go. It is not expected that burning oil will show much change at this season, when the demand falls off. Paint oils which have a free sale at this season, keep low, except turpentine. Lubricating oils receive much attention; with these it is a question of quality. Cod liver oil, which has ruled high, is much lower, though still well above the average.

Salt—The stock of Liverpool coarse salt held is large. There will be some direct shipments to the north shore as soon as navigation opens. Prices are unchanged. With the close of the Winter port season, which means the stopping of regular receipts, prices will be held firmer. In fine salt the season is yet early.

Canned Goods—The strong situation in regard to vegetables is the feature of the market. Fair stocks are held. In fruits, blueberries are firmer. Other lines are in fair supply. Salmon is unchanged, though the stock of Spring fish is not large, and full prices are asked. In domestic fish, haddies are about out of the market, a few sardines and kippered herring are offered. Clams are light stock. Oysters are very firm. Meats are firm at a slight advance.

Green Fruit—Two cars of Western apples have been received and have sold freely at full figures. Oranges are rather higher. Valencias are selling freely. Californias are being landed cheaper from Boston than they could be bought direct. Lemons show improved quality; prices are rather higher. Cranberries are high. The banana season is again open. The first car of green fruit is to hand.

Dried Fruit—There is little of interest in this line to report. Raisins are dull with full stocks held. There is some inquiry for small prunes; local prices are below the market. Apricots and peaches are high. Evaporated apples find only a fair sale. Dates are low. Currants are unchanged, the market is now being supplied from New York. Onions have large sale in our market. Valencias have been largely imported. Egyptians are shortly expected.

Sugar—There is a report that all is not satisfactory in the wholesalers' guild. It is said one large firm is about to withdraw from the sugar agreement. The effect of this on the agreement will be watched with interest. Prices are firm at the advance.

Molasses—New Barbadoes is more freely offered. Price is low, particularly when compared with the high figures which have ruled. Porto Rico offered is still held firm but the difference in price tends to sell the Barbadoes.

Fish—In fresh fish, the supply is light; in a retail way a few mackerel and even frozen salmon carried through the season are seen, but strictly fresh goods are scarce. The situation is somewhat helped by receipts of halibut. In dry cod the very high price is held. The market is bare of dry, pickled and smoked fish, and will be for some time; a few fresh gaspereaux are seen but the season is early yet.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour the market is not so firm. Ontarios show a rather lower range in prices. Oats and oatmeal are still high. Cornmeal is quoted this week rather lower. Feed has a good sale at full prices. Beans are unchanged. Barley and peas are light stock. Seeds are now being freely received. There is a noticeable improvement in the quality of timothy demanded, which is a welcome and healthy sign. Prices all round are low this year. This is particularly noticeable in alsike clover.

MONTREAL USES A MILLION EGGS A DAY.

"THERE are no less than 90,000 dozens or 1,080,000 eggs consumed in Montreal during the latter part of Holy week," says the Montreal Herald.

This almost incredulous number represents of course the maximum consumption for any period of similar length during the year and it must be borne in mind that people ordinarily eat more eggs during Lent than during any other season of the year.

The number of eggs eaten by Montrealers varies according to the time of year. For instance, it has been computed that in the months of May and June no less than 40,000 dozen eggs are daily put out of business. In June the consumption decreases to the healthy figure of 30,000 dozen daily and it continues on dwindling till the middle of August is reached, when it once more reaches the figures of the preceding May. After September matters gradually become quieter and quieter in eggdom until Easter time is reached when the egg question once more reaches a boiling point in almost every home.

A CANADIAN'S IDEA OF BERMUDA

F. D. COCKBURN, Montreal, and Eastern representative of Pugsley, Dingman & Co., Toronto, has just returned from a six weeks' trip to Bermuda.

"Canadian goods are not as much in evidence in the business houses as I would like to have seen," said Mr. Cockburn in an interview with The Grocer, "though I did come across some Canadian canned boods, Simcoe brand, and it did me good to see them. The general opinion of dealers with whom I spoke on the subject was that Canadian goods give splendid satisfaction, in fact they please better than United States packs. I am sorry to say, however, that some complaints were uttered as to misrepresentation of pack, etc., by certain Canadian manufacturers, and this policy can only do harm to Canadian trade. For instance, not enough care is being taken with our apple shipments and closer inspection should be made before shipping them. Some dealers stated that our flour does not stand the climate as well as United States makes, but this defect can no doubt be remedied by Canadian millers paying closer attention to the proper blending. It struck me as decidedly unpatriotic that the British garrison stationed on the island should be supplied with American eatables. Canada ought most certainly to supply British soldiers with food.

"Our imports from Bermuda are limited to potatoes, onions, bulbs and arrow root. I noticed a singular condition of the potato market when there, namely, that Bermuda merchants were buying Canadian potatoes in Halifax and sending their own there, as they could get more for Bermuda potatoes in Halifax and other Canadian cities than on the island, and it paid them to buy Canadian goods."

Mr. Cockburn expressed the opinion that with closer attention to that market on the part of Canadian manufacturers and shippers, a satisfactory business could be built up.

FLOUR AND FISH CONTRABAND OF WAR.

As the result of a recent conference between the Ministers of Marine and of Foreign Affairs at St. Petersburg, the following additional articles have been declared contraband of war: Provisions of all kinds destined for the Japanese army, including grain and fish products, beans, bean oil, parts of machines for the manufacture of weapons and ammunition.

FRENCH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The following Montreal gentlemen, prominent in the grocery trade of Canada, have been elected to fill vacancies in the French Chamber of Commerce, Montreal: President, A. Chouillou, of C. A. Chouillou & Co.; secretary, A. F. Revol, of Perrin, Freres & Cie.; councillor, H. Jonas, of H. Jonas & Co.

THE GROCER'S HEAVEN.

Last evening I was talking
With a grocer aged and gray,
When he told me of a dream he had,
I think 'twas Christmas day.

While snoozing in his office
This vision came to view,
For he saw an angel enter,
Dressed in garments white and new.

Said the angel, "I'm from Heaven:
The Lord just sent me down
To bring you up to glory
And put on your golden crown.

"You've been a friend to everyone,
And worked hard, night and day;
You've supported many thousands
And from few received your pay.

"So we want you up in glory
For you have labored hard,
And the good Lord is preparing
Your eternal, just reward."

Then the angel and the grocer
Started up towards glory's gate,
But when passing close to hades
The angel murmured, "Wait—

"I've a place I wish to show you;
It's the hottest place in Hell,
Where the ones who never paid you
In torment forever dwell."

And behold the grocer saw there
His old patrons by the score,
And, grabbing up a chair and fan,
He wished for nothing more.

He desired to sit and watch them
As they'd sizzle, singe and burn;
And his eyes would rest on debtors,
Whichever way they'd turn.

Said the angel, "Come on, grocer,
There are pearly gates to see."
But the grocer only muttered,
"This is heaven enough for me."

Were You Surprised?

These are the Figures:

About three months ago a firm in Ontario cancelled an order which had been given one of my travellers, and gave as a reason, when my traveller called again, that "They thought it was a mistake to buy from such a small firm."

They gave the order to a wholesale grocery firm.

How many wholesale grocers sell as much tea in a year as I sell every month---can't be very many. Total imports into Canada past two years have averaged less than 2,000,000 lbs. per month. Worth thinking about.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

A Breakfast Food Window.

A VERY striking and yet simply constructed window is the "Quaker Oats" display built by Sydney Heald for Dixi H. Ross & Co., Victoria, B. C. All through the Winter there have been hundreds of arrangements of breakfast foods, every grocery store having its half dozen or so, but it must be admitted that very few of them have been worthy of the space, and certain it is that the great majority have attracted no attention whatever. Too many window dressers have been satisfied with a simple design of stacking, showing perhaps considerable ingenuity in the shapes of the stacks; but the public is tired of such effects as can be obtained in this way, and various little "wrinkles" must be worked in to add interest.

A Breakfast Food Window—By Sydney Heald for Dixi H. Ross & Co. Victoria, B.C.

In his window Mr. Heald has shown that he appreciates this fact. He is a firm believer in one line displays, a necessary belief for the most successful window dresser to hold, but he also knows that there are just as great possibilities for effect in the one line window as in that which includes any number of lines. The ordinary style of stacking is carefully avoided, as this has long since ceased to attract, and a square outline design—straight stacking at the back and sides—has been substituted instead. This alone is preferable to triangular or circular forms; its very plainness and symmetry of design and lettering on the boxes being odd in effect. But the dresser of this window was not yet satisfied. He procured from the farmers who called at the store a sheaf of oats, and worked this into the display in such a way as to make a really surprising improvement. Two sheafs are placed in the centre sides, and surrounded at their bases with boxes of the food, presenting much the appearance of growing trees. Several smaller whisps of the grain are placed in other effective places.

Simple as it may seem, the two advertising pictures hanging over the back, one on each side of the large central card, add very much to the general effect by taking off a possible stiffness and monotony; the large signs hanging down the sides, visible only partially on one side, are also of value for the same reason.

Mr. Heald does his own sign-writing and the result is a credit to him. Too few window dressers attempt this, or when they do, produce very rough work, often with an idea that having had no experience, and considering themselves no artists in this respect, they think it useless to endeavor to do neat work. The lettering in this window is not only neatly done, but has an individuality that does not appear in the stereotyped signs so often used. The window dresser who does his own lettering off hand has a great advantage over the one who sticks to made-up letters, since he has any variety at hand and each possesses the attraction of freeness of outline and style. A large sign struck off from prepared letters has no message for many people, although it is valuable as compared with no signs.

The large overhead sign is attractive on account of its pictures, lettering and the arrangement of the oats. The lower central signs are interesting because of the well known cuts of faces having the smile that won't come off. Electric lights down the sides of the windown, which is 8x12 feet, make the arrangement a good one for night use.

Possible improvements might have been made by using frosted incandescent lights, as they make the light softer and more agreeable when exposed to view; the floor would have been perhaps better if the solid filling had not been used, but instead a few small stacks or arrangements of the packages over a yellow or red crepe paper foundation; and the word "for" in the lower sign would look more in place if printed after "pkts," although the idea in using this position is plain.

Mr. Heald considers that the window dressing adopted by his firm is a prominent cause of the success of the business, and says that he has obtained excellent results from this department.

CANADIAN POULTRY.

EXPORTERS of, and dealers in poultry are of the opinion that high prices for poultry will rule during the next five or six years at least, says the Trade Bulletin. They base their ideas on the belief that Canada will not produce sufficient for her home and export requirements for some years to come. One of the largest exporters of poultry in the West, who contracted to deliver 5,000 turkeys to an English firm at 7 1-2d per lb during the past season, finding he could realize a higher price at home than he had sold them for, cabled the firm on the other side as follows: "Can do better here, offer 1-2d per lb. to cancel contract." This offer was accepted, and the shipped remitted about $500 by return, and made more money by the transaction than if he had filled the contract. There is not only an increasing demand for poultry in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, but Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia take much larger quantities every year. During the past season Ontario shipped 22 cars of dressed poultry to the Western provinces. Considerable quantities of turkeys were also purchased alive and shipped by American buyers to Buffalo and other American points adjacent to the Ontario boundary. The poultry trade is destined to become one of much greater importance than it has been although it has made considerable progress during the past two or three years. It is believed in the trade that it will be a long time before the price of turkeys will again be down to 8c and 9c per lb. and chickens to 6c and 7c per lb., as they used to be a few years ago.

AGRICULTURE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Once more British Columbia is being heralded as the paradise of the Western farmer. This time it is Princeton, situated in central British Columbia, where it is claimed Spring wheat grows to perfection without irrigation, as well as wheat, oats, barley and rye. Potatoes are said to grow to a prodigious size, averaging eight to ten tons per acre. Cabbages weigh from twenty to twenty-five pounds and cauliflowers from four to eight pounds. Apple trees planted in 1901 bore fruit in 1903 and small fruits thrive equally well. The same district moreover is particularly well adapted for dairying.

THE White Candy Co, St. John, are making important extensions. At a meeting of the company the following were elected as directors: T. White, T. F. White, J. H. Tabor, A. J. Nickerson and S. B. Bustin. At a meeting of the directors Thomas White was elected president, J. H. Tabor, vice-president; T. F. White, treasurer and manager; W. White, superintendent, and S. B. Bunstin, secretary.

Of late years a large quantity of high grade chocolates have been imported from across the line and from Eastern institutions and there has been a steadily increasing demand here for the class of confectionery known as bitter sweet chocolate. Leary, who is an expert in the bitter sweet chocolate manufacture, and who has had large experience with this class of goods in the States, have inaugurated a company under the style of the T. J. Leary Co. and have opened a factory in Winnipeg for the manufacutre of high-grade chocolates.

American Biscuit Trust.

According to rumors in circulation in New York an attempt is being made to form a combination among a number of independent biscuit manufacturers to regulate prices and discounts to the trade. According to the rumor the scheme is being conducted along secretive lines, and there is a disposition on the part of those who are supposed to be interested in the combination to keep the matter very quiet. By some of the independent manufacturers, however, the report has been denied.

Notes.

W. Lees & Son, Hamilton, have completed their new bread and cake factory.

Another firm which is feeling the effect of the "growing time" is the Cowan Company, manufacturers of cocoas and chocolates, Toronto. Tenders are now being asked for a large addition to their present building which will be equipped in the latest approved manner.

BANANA COFFEE THE LATEST IMITATION.

THE latest novelty in the way of an imitation coffee, called by the inventor "banana coffee," is made of dried bananas.

The claim of the inventor is that bananas dried and prepared according to his method have all the rich flavor of genuine coffee. Bananas grown in Mexico and South America are used, and are evaporated on the spot. The product is then shipped to Philadelphia, where it is again evaporated, roasted and ground. The finished "coffee" has no particular coffee flavor in the ground form, but simulates coffee in the cup.

A GLASGOW VISITOR.

J. FULLERTON, of Rowat & Co., Glasgow, Scotland, was a visitor to Montreal this week. Mr. Fullerton is making a commercial tour of Canada and intends visiting all the larger cities and business centres. In the course of an interview with a representative of The Grocer, Mr. Fullerton expressed himself as highly pleased with the reception his company's goods had received at the hands of the Canadian trade during the past few years, and as confident that the future prospects would be still brighter. Speaking of trade with Canada, Mr. Fullerton, who by the way is an ardent supporter of the Chamberlain preferential idea, expressed the hope that business between Great Britain and Canada would increase to a satisfactory extent. "Since Canada has given us a preference in her markets and held out the hand of commercial friendship it is no more than right and proper that we should meet her in the same spirit." Mr. Fullerton will also visit Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, and other Western cities, in company with A. Snowdon, of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, who are representatives of Rowat & Co.

BAN ON CANNED GOODS FUTURES.

THE entral committee of the Cook County, Ill., retail grocers and market men has adopted a set of resolutions against the buying of canned goods futures, which read as follows:

"Whereas, the grocers of Chicago have suffered greatly the last few years, on account of the so-called future orders placed for canned vegetables, fruit, fish and other items, the packing of which in their nature depends on the elements and crop conditions, and

"Whereas, it is forestalling providence to buy the products of a crop at a fixed value scarcely before the seed has been planted in the ground, and

"Whereas, it has been the experience of the grocers that goods that favored the retailer have been withheld, and such as favored the jobber been forced on him, and where such orders were filled, the delivery of undesirable stock was generally liberal and early, the desirable lots, late and meager, and

"Whereas, the retailer was thus obliged to carry a large amount of slow-selling goods the whole year, unless he would sacrifice the profit by cutting the price, which proceeding would result in loss to himself and competitors, and

"Whereas, the placing of such orders in its action and results has the essence of gambling in it, which is foreign to our honorable, toilsome calling, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we will in future abstain from placing any such orders, also instruct our central committee delegates to work for uniform action on same matter throughout the city."

Retailers who have had much experience in buying "canned futures" have learned that when the pack is poor they cannot get their contracts filled, but when the pack is large they can get all they want. However, they cannot change the contract when it is against them as the packers can. It is so much a case, "Heads I win and tails you lose," that retailers feel like demanding an even deal.

OPEN UP TRADE WITH CUBA.

W. J. Ryan, of Havana, Cuba, has written to the Mayor of Toronto, advocating closer trade relations between Canada and that country. Nova Scotia has now supplied the Cuban market with potatoes for years and Mr. Ryan thinks a more important trade could be opened up with Cuba than with Mexico or the British West Indies. At present the steamship line to the West Indies subsidized by the Canadian Government touches at Santiago only on the way down, but it is suggested that a regular steamship service between the two countries would be a profitable investment.

BRITISH COLUMBIA PROGRESS.

THAT the Canadian Pacific Railway has decided to run two transcontinental trains daily from Montreal to Vancouver is but another sign of the development of the West, and of the great increase in the travel between Eastern and Western Canada. British Columbia is rapidly becoming an important part of Canada, in touch with everything commercial, financial and political, which interests Canada as a whole. Professor Goldwin Smith has doubted if the West has any interest in the East. Two transcontinental daily trains would seem to indicate that the interest is mutual and rapidly developing.

The population of British Columbia, according to the Census of 1901, is 178,657, of whom over 60 per cent. are males. This population, classified according to birthplace, is as follows:

British Columbia	59,589
Other Provinces	40,023
British Islands	30,630
British possessions	1,843
Total British	132,085
Foreign Born	46,110
Not Given	462
Total	178,657

British Columbia is British and Canadian in every sense of those terms. Of the foreigners 14,576 were from China and 4,515 from Japan.

The value of the gold annually mined in British Columbia has grown from a few thousand dollars to over five millions, the value of the silver to over three millions, the copper and the coal to over five millions each. The total mineral production in 1901 was $20,000,000, and for 1902 about two and a half millions less. The value of the agricultural property is over thirty millions, and the products in 1901 were valued at over six millions, a return of 19 per cent. on the investment.

A. T. Hinton, Bathurst, N.B., has added a grocery department to his business.

None so Blind As Those Who Won't See.

THE CANADIAN GROCER can prove of valuable assistance to the selling end of any business which seeks trade among the grocers and general storekeepers of Canada.

We advance many plain, indisputable arguments to this effect.

And still there are some folks who can't see it.

Some who can't see how it's going to pay them.

And won't even invest a few dollars to find out.

Very few folks like this, but we would like to convince even them.

If we only could, we'd get a good deal of satisfaction out of it—and we know they would, too.

Don't you think they're blind to their own interests.

Here's a paper that finds a welcome in every worth-while grocery from Halifax to Vancouver once every week—so can't you see that an announcement of any interest must surely command some attention?

The advertising columns of THE GROCER provide about the best way we know of keeping in close touch with all the grocers of Canada all the time.

GREEN FRUITS

British Columbia Fruit.

THE Canadian agent-general in London, Eng., is pursuing a course calculated to be in the interests of the province in directing attention to the capabilities of British Columbia for fruit raising. The experimental stage in the provincial fruit growing industry has been passed, and it has now become a regular and remunerative business. The progress during the last few years has been great, but there is a market for much more fruit than British Columbia raises at the present time. With the large influx of population into the Northwest Territories, it is difficult to place any limits to the demand for British Columbia fruit, while the home market is also steadily growing.

A Fruit Marks Bill in New York.

IF imitation is the sincerest form of flattery Canada may well take it as a compliment that Senator Hill has lately introduced in the Senate of the State of New York a bill very much like the Dominion Fruit Marks Act. There is an additional clause in the New York bill requiring packages to be marked with the name of the place where the fruit was grown, but this clause is strongly opposed by the trade who maintain that a large operator who repacks fruit brought into his storehouse by the carload, and coming from 40 or 50 different shippers, could not, possibly comply with such stipulations. In regard to the bill the New York Fruitman's Guide says: "It conflicts with the Inter-State Commerce Law that forbids the passage of an act hindering commerce between various states. Why Canada's law is a success is because it is a national law, but until such a law is passed in the United States, the merchants in such states in which such a law obtains are at a disadvantage with the merchants of other states."

Introducer of the Tomato Dead.

L. M. Chanter, the man to whom America is indebted for the luscious tomato, is dead at his home in Jackson, Mich., at the age of 93 years. He was born in Malta and when he came to America he carried some seeds of what were then known as "love apples," the ancestors of the modern tomato. Of course, all the tomatoes in America did not spring from the seeds Mr. Chanter brought across over three score of years ago. Since then other importations have been made from Malta and elsewhere. But the first tomato raised in America was by Mr. Chanter.

The Green Fruit Outlook.

ALREADY the green fruit men are beginning to show increased signs of returning life after their protracted Winter sleep. Reports of an alarming nature are being circulated : for instance, fruit buds and trees are said to be dead, and the outlook for the 1904 fruit crop to be anything but promising.

The following report on the green fruit outlook is by a correspondent of the Hamilton Times at Ancaster, Ont., who professes to be an authority on fruit growing :

"We are just emerging from the coldest Winter in the memory of anyone, and it is feared that the fruit trees are very much injured. The peach trees will not only have their fruit buds killed, but the trees in many cases have been killed. Even the pear, which is considered hardy, will loose most of the fruit buds and much of the new growth of wood. Some of the grape buds are killed, and the tender blackberries are all dead, even below the snow line. Cherries seem to be all right, and the strawberries that are covered may pull through, although they have three or four inches of ice on them even on the high lands, under the snow. The frost has gone much deeper than six years ago, when so many fruit trees were killed throughout all the fruit districts, and the trees may be killed outright. Last year was the plum year, and any buds on the trees seem to be all right. It is not expected the apple crop will be large, as there have been two large crops following each other."

The concensus of opinion of Montreal fruit merchants seems to be that this report is premature. They are suspicious moreover that it is suggestive of an ulterior motive which to the trained fruit dealer means nothing more nor less than an attempt to tighten the early market.

Two of the largest dealers declare emphatically they had information which would show that it is practically impossible for the greatest expert to tell anything about fruit possibilities as early as the middle of March, whereas the report quoted was published on March 4.

Toronto fruit dealers, who are in daily correspondence with Ontario fruit growers, hesitate to express an opinion on the fruit situation for two reasons, first, because reports from the growers are conflicting; second, because they consider it too early yet for anyone to give an intelligent forecast of the coming fruit crop.

California Orange Industry.

THE importance of California's orange industry dates back practically to the Winter of 1878-79, when there came into bearing near Riverside, two trees of seedless fruit. These had been obtained by the department of agriculture of the United States from Bahia, Brazil. They were the first seedless oranges to be grown in North America, and, though it is stated that the first crop amounted to only 16 oranges, this was the beginning upon which California has based her steadily growing orange industry, until it is now claimed that the current year may show almost 11,000,000 boxes in that state, which would be more than the total production of the United States in any previous year.

In spite of this enormous growth in the production of oranges, Uncle Sam still has to import some each year to make up the deficiency of the home supply. In the last five years the average value of imports of oranges to the United States amounted to more than $900,000 a year. Of these, a half came from the British West Indies, a quarter from Italy, with Mexico the next largest source of supply. In the same five years exports of oranges to the United States averaged about $350,000, Canada taking 85 per cent. and the United Kingdom 12 per cent. of the total.

A Seedless Apple.

After experimenting for seven years an old fruit grower of Grand Junction, Col., has succeeded in perfecting a seedless apple. The new fruit looks like a navel orange. Its inside is entirely solid and there is a depression in the navel end very similar to that of seedless oranges. The tree on which the seedless fruit is grown is unusual in that it has no blossoms. The grower will not reveal the secret of his budding and grafting.

Fruit Growers Meet.

That co-operation is the most popular note in the fruit trade at the present time is further evidenced by two meetings held during the past week in Ontario, the one by the fruit growers of Essex County, the other by the fruit men of the Niagara peninsula, to explain and create an interest in a co-operative movement for the disposal of fruit, etc.

WALL PAPER

SOME MISTAKES IN SELLING.

IT is altogether too common a practice, and one which is productive of many bad results, that the merchant spends too much energy and does too much talking to sell his cheaper grades. These lines give little profit, and are apt to prove unsatisfactory to the customers, so that both experience unprofitable returns.

The usual line of action when a customer enters a store and asks for wall paper is for the salesman to enquire merely to what price he wishes to go, and when the answer is received, "oh not too high," the three, four, and five cent papers are rushed out and assiduously pushed and their beauties dilated upon. The customer looks over these grades, and without any comment settles his mind upon such a class of goods, selects his pattern and departs. The salesman closes up his sample book, put away the rolls shown and has a general feeling of satisfaction at the sale closed.

But if he could know the quality of paper that customer could have been induced to purchase, his feeling of pleasure would quickly depart. There are three out of five, and perhaps more, buyers of cheap grades who would quite readily have purchased more expensive lines, had the clerk known how to show papers properly, and how to explain differences in quality, appearance, endurance and price. When a merchant grasps the fact that a difference of five cents in a roll may mean no more than an increased cost of sixty cents or so in a good-sized room, he will see how simple the sale of this superior paper might have been made. Five cents more on a roll may seem a lot to a customer who intended to go only five cents, but if it were drawn to his attention that that means only a few cents in a fair sized room, the matter will take on a different aspect. When it is further shown how much better the higher priced paper is in color, pattern, and wear, the small difference will scarcely ever be considered.

It is apparent in any stock the great difference there is between the entire make-up, style and appearance of a ten cent paper and the same features of the five cent quality. The room that is papered with the more expensive line is more up-to-date in every way, and there is far more pleasant home life to the occupants. But the further consideration that a five cent paper will not last half as long, it will be seen that there is an actual saving in money. It is true one tires of the same paper in a room for a number of years, but a good ten cent line can be endured without weariness for more than twice as long as the cheaper line, and the entire period of wear is one of a richer interior in the room than where any number of any five cent grades are used.

That is the consideration of the question from the consumer's point of view. That of the merchant shows just as much profit. A five cent line brings him a cent or more a roll; a ten cent line yields a profit of perhaps 3½c to 4c. These figures are only samples, but the profit on a ten cent roll is often as great as twice that on the cheaper quality. The standard of his business is raised, and by encouraging the taste for better things he will profit in many ways. It's a "cheap" man that pushes cheap goods, and the public soon sets him down at his true value. Encourage the demand for good quality in everything, and be prepared to satisfy this demand whenever it comes.

HINTS FOR DISPLAY.

AS very much of the success of the wall paper department depends upon the care that is given their display, it is important that the merchant and window dresser devote some of their time and ingenuity to thinking out schemes that will be effective. While at first thought there seem to be few designs available in the display of wall paper, there will be found after one or two arrangements, that many others present themselves in rapid succession. The designing of the first two or three displays is the most difficult.

A very good plan is to hang a roll of wall paper from the ceiling at the back of the window, dropping to the floor, and over this but falling a shorter distance as each paper is put on to hang the border and then the ceiling. Another paper can be worked in by showing the bottom one as intended to be run only as a dado, and above this a centre wall paper to extend to the moulding, and then the freize and ceiling. The two first papers where one is supposed to extend up six or seven feet in the room and the second, a flaring conspicuous design, the remaining distance to the ceiling, can be shown together. In front of these rolls hanging the back, can be set up the regular display stands, showing almost the same scheme except that no more than three papers and preferably two, should be used on the one stand. The upper samples look best if allowed to hang in a fold rather than in a straight end.

Be sure that the colors in adjacent samples do not clash too much, and that the different papers hanging over each other are a good match.

DANGER IN GREEN PAPER.

THE general public, we fear, is not acquainted with in wall paper. A recent death in Palmer, Mass., in wal paper. A recent death in Palmer, Mass., is directly attributed by the medical authorities to this cause. The trouble which resulted so disastrously made its appearance a year and a half ago in what seemed to be nervous dyspepsia. Two months of travel abroad seemed to greatly improve the patient, but on returning home he soon grew worse again. On account of certain conflicting symptoms which could not be readily accounted for, a specialist was called in and gave it as his opinion that there was arsenic poisoning in the system. An investigation was then made which resulted in the discovery of arsenic colors in the wall paper of the sitting room. This room had been papered shortly previous to the appearance of the first symptoms. The wall paper was at once removed, but the disease had by this time progressed so far that it was impossible to save the life of the unfortunate victim.—Scientific American.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Canada and the World's Wheat Supply.

RECENT experiments and observations, says an exchange, have satisfied the Japanese Government that rice as a bone and muscle producer is not comparable to wheat. Accordingly an imperial edict has been issued providing for each soldier a daily ration of wheat flour. Not only does this mean a direct increase in flour consumption, but the lead thus given may, and probably will, be followed by the mass of the people, who will promptly argue that what is necessary for the upbuilding of an efficient soldier cannot but be beneficial to those engaged in the ordinary avocations of life.

Should any considerable proportion of China's four hundred millions of population become wheat consumers, the present world production would not avail to satisfy the demand. Should Japan even become a flour-eating people, says a flour mill magnate, "the whole available supply of the Pacific coast would provide this commodity for only 20 per cent. of the population of that kingdom." It is difficult to grasp the full meaning of such statements, fraught as they are with such wonderful possibilities for the American continents, and notably for Canada.

The population of the United States is still increasing by leaps and bounds, and the internal demand for its home food products is increasing in even a greater ratio. In addition, the class of emigrant the republic is now receiving incline to settle in the cities, and add their quota to the already fierce industrial competition that there prevails. Canada, on the contrary, is not only attracting agriculturists from the older countries of Europe, but is draining from the Northwestern States the cream of their farming population, who are turning in increasing numbers to her virgian prairies, allured by the fertile soil and easy terms, and the large profits yielded to capital and labor.

Thus it follows that in the United States the wheat yield is practically stationary, while the internal demand is increasing. In Canada, on the other hand, production is growing at a much faster rate than the population, and as a necessary result all the accruing benefit which comes from a rapidly expanding export trade in reacting throughout the whole Dominion and stimulating trade and industry in every branch. Canada is so favorably situated in every natural respect that, given equal opportunities, she should easily out-distance all her competitors. Under any circumstances the future must bring with it new markets and a greater demand on the granaries of the world, and Canada must be ready to seize the opportunity and turn it to her own advantage and the upbuilding of her future power and prosperity.

Origin of Red Fife Wheat.

AMONG the Spring wheats commonly grown in Canada half a century ago none was so highly or justly esteemed as the Red Fife, and the position it still holds is a pre-eminent one. It is remarkable for its productiveness, for its high quality, and for its power of adapting itself to varying conditions of soil and climate. The Canadian Agriculturist for 1861 gives the following account of its origin:

"About the year 1842 D. Fife, of the Township of Otonabee, Canada West, now Ontario, procured, through a friend in Glasgow, Scotalnd, a quantity of wheat which had been obtained from a cargo direct from Dantzic. As it came to hand just before Spring seed time, and not knowing whether it was a Fall or Spring variety, Mr. Fife concluded to sow a part of it that Spring and wait for the result. It proved to be a Fall wheat, as it never ripened except three ears which grew apparently from a single grain. These were preserved and, although sown the next year under unfavorable circumstances, it proved at harvest to be entirely free from rust when all wheat in the neighborhood was badly rusted. The produce of this was carefully preserved and from it sprung the variety of wheat known over Canada and the Northern States by the different names of Fife, Scotch and Glasgow."

Red Fife wheat was taken from Ontario to Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, where it is believed to have improved in quality, and as grown there stands probably higher in the estimation of millers for the making of flour than any other known variety.

Canada's Export Flour Shipments.

IF Canadian millers wish to increase shipments of flour to Great Britain they must pay strict attention to separating the various grades, since the English trade is accustomed to a sharp and considerable difference between "patents" used for the best bread, and bakers' or XX for the ordinary "seconds" quality. High colored flours are desirable, but weakness tells against price and the separation should be about,

30 per cent.—first patents.
15 per cent.—second patents.
40 per cent.—Bakers' or XX.
15 per cent.—Common or X.

The word patent is not used in England for any grade much below 30 per cent.

English Markets for Canadian Flour.

LONDON, Glasgow, Liverpool, and Bristol are the Old Country ports to which the greatest quantity of Canadian flour is shipped. The flour mills of Lancashire and Yorkshire are equipped with the most modern machinery, and the English miller mixes his wheat with the skill born of the actual requirement, enabling him to produce an article of flour best suited to the wants of the purchasing public in his locality. Hence the decadence of Canadian flour shipments to this enormous centre of Great Britain, and it might well be asked, cannot some remedy be found by which the Canadian miller can obtain a share of this market.

A Satisfactory Test.

Experiments with Canadian wheat conducted at the British Experimental Farm at Woburn, showed that while the yield was considerably below that of English wheat, the Canadian wheat was stronger, more nitrogeneous, and produced a loaf which, from the baker's point of view, was more satisfactory. This is the sort of advertising Canada wants. Appreciation of the fact that Canadian wheat is the best will mean a good deal to the Canadian grower. The British consumer wants the best, and is willing to pay for it.—Montreal Gazette.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating

National Preferences.

IT is a peculiar fact that no two countries import the same sorts of tobacco. The French Regie, or Government Tobacco Department, takes several different kinds of tobacco from the United States, their total yearly import being about thiry-five million pounds. But two things they insist upon that the stem shall be free from mold and the leaf loose enough to open freely.

The German tobacco manufacturers like a heavy, gummy leaf, and they prepare this by treating it with what are termed in the trade "sweet sauces." This makes the leaf black. Most of the leaf the Germans buy comes from Kentucky and Tennessee. Quantities of "spangled" tobacco are also imported into Germany. This is a pretty yellow leaf, with red spangles. Much of this spangled tobacco is imported into Bremen, where it is repacked in lighter casks and sent on to Russia, Italy, Austria and Spain; all these possess Government monopolies of tobacco, but in each case their requisitions are quite different. Italy likes a very long leaf, as much as 26 inches in length, of delicate fibre and dark brown in color. It must be elastic and strong. Italy uses a large quantity of very coarse Hungarian tobacco.

Austria also manufactures much of the cheap Hungarian leaf, but her choicer brands and cigars are made of very good American tobacco. This is of firm texture and beautifully glossy. Spain not being one of the richest countries, purchases cheap tobacco. A nondescript leaf of light type is largely bought, and is not cut, but powdered. It burns very quickly and is hot to the tongue. Black, fat and heavy tobaccos suit the Dutchman; but the Netherlands buy a certain amount of what is known as "Dutch Saucer," a fine cigar wrapper of a silky type, which is used for making Dutch cigars. Going further north there are Denmark, Norway and Sweden, all with very similar tastes. Heavy tobaccos, cured by fire, are their favorites; and these leaves, before being manufactured, are dipped in sweet mixtures of licorice and sugar.

Cuba's Tobacco Export.

ACCORDING to statistics from Havana the total exports from Cuba in 1903 were over 300,000 bales of tobacco, valued at more than $12,000,000, while almost 209,000,000 cigars were shipped from the island which, at an average value of $60 a thousand would yield a little more than $12,500,000. The United States took considerably more than half of the tobacco in bales, but less than 46,000,000 cigars, or about half what was sold to England.

The growing Cuban tobacco crop presents a most favorable condition and the yield in 1904 will in all likelihood be abundant. The seed plots having been watered during the month of September and the first half of October, under the most favorable conditions, the growth, favored by a mild temperature, has been going on to such an unprecedented extent as to excite the wonder of the people within whose recollection there never was a season so abundant in well conditioned young plants. Not a single farmer has been obliged to buy for planting.

There are seed beds from which a few thousand plants could be withdrawn; but inasmuch as they all have a superabundance, and there is no demand from other zones, they will probably be wasted, it being impossible to plant the whole number grown.

Great Smokers of History.

PRINCE BLUCHER, an opponent whose presence at Waterloo Napoleon had good cause to remember, was an inveterate smoker, and rarely went into action without a pipe or cigar between his teeth. So huge was his collection of pipes that he actually hired a person to superintend the heterogeneous mass, and the pipe master, Christian Hannemann by name, discharged his duties with a fidelity that approached fanatical zeal. Before every encounter Prince Blucher usually ordered a long pipe to be filled. After smoking for a short time he would hand back the lighted pipe to Hannemann, place himself in the saddle, draw his saber, and with a vigorous cry "Forward, me boys,''' throw himself fiercely on the foe. On the day of Waterloo, Hannemann had just handed a pipe to his master when a cannon ball struck the ground near, so that earth and sand covered Blucher and his gray horse. The steed made a spring to one side and the new pipe was broken before the prince had taken a single puff. However, the latter merely cried, "Fill another pipe for me and keep it lighted for a moment until I drive away these French rascals." Thereupon there was a rush forward, but the pursuit lasted not merely a moment, but throughout the whole of that long and memorable day.

It is a highly curious fact that no allusion to tobacco is to be found in the works of Shakespeare, though various of his contemporaries indulge in many sallies, chiefly at the expense of the lately imported weed. Perhaps the poet's action in thus ignoring tobacco may be attributed to the fact that James the First, with whom the bard was a high favorite, hated and loathed Sir Walter Raleigh's importation. In this connection it is amusing to remember that another poet of a later day, Algernon Swinburne, has told us that "James the First was a knave, a tyrant, a fool, a liar and a coward. But I love him, I worship him because he slit the throat of that blackguard Raleigh, who invented this filthy smoking."

The late Lord Tennyson was a lover of clay pipes and preferred Virginia tobacco to any other growth of the weed. He invariably smoked whilst at work and followed a method peculiar to himself in the selection of pipes. At his feet was placed a box full of white clays. Filling one of these, he would smoke until it was empty, then would break it in twain, throwing the fragments into another box prepared for their reception. He would then pull another pipe from its straw or wooden enclosure, fill it and destroy it as before, for he had a strong aversion to smoking a pipe a second time.

One of the most pleasant anecdotes of the late Prince Bismarck is told in connection with his love of smoke. Here is the story in his own words:

"The value of a good cigar is best understood when it is the last you possess, and there is no chance of getting another. At Keniggartz I had only one cigar left in my pocket, which I carefully guarded throughout the battle as a miser guards his treasure. I did not feel justified in using it then, for I painted in glowing colors in my mind the happy hour when I should enjoy it after victory. But I had miscalculated my chances. A poor dragoon lay helpless, with both arms crushed, murmuring for something to refresh him. I felt in my pockets and found that I had only gold, which would be of no use to him. But stay—I had still my cigar. I lighted it for him.....and placed it between his teeth.....You should have seen the poor fellow's grateful smile. I never, never enjoyed a cigar so much as that one which I did not smoke."

The late Charles Spurgeon once created a considerable flutter in the nonconformist dovecote by announcing during the course of a sermon that he intended smoking a cigar that night "to the glory of God." In an explanatory letter to a daily newspaper he pointed out that he had spoken the words with deliberation, and in all sincerity. "When," he wrote, "I have found intense pain relieved, a weary brain soothed, and calm, refreshing sleep obtained by a cigar I have felt grateful to God and have blessed His name. This is what I meant, and by no means did I use the sacred words in any trifling spirit."

Prof. Huxley, though once a hater of tobacco, became in later years an enthusiastic smoker. On one occasion he remarked in the course of a lecture that there was no more harm in a pipe than in a cup of tea. "You may poison yourself," he observed, "by drinking too much green tea, or kill yourself by eating too many beefsteaks. For my own part," concluded the professor, "I consider that Tobacco, in moderation, is a sweetner and equalizer of the temper."

Absentmindedness has often gone hand in hand with smoking proclivities, and we are told that Sir Isaac Newton, in a fit of mental abstraction, once used the finger of a lady he was courting as a tobacco stopper while he sat and smoked in silence beside her, thinking, of course, that his own finger was being employed for the purpose. On another occasion he continued to apply various lights to his pipe, wondering why no smoke resulted, only to discover at length that for several hours the bowl had been empty.

Tobacco Growing at Lyallpur.

At the Lyallpur Experimental Farm, in the Punjab, they have been growing certain varieties of American tobacco with very promising success, and the curing of the leaves on American methods has also turned out well.

American Invasion of Germany.

The Germans are thoroughly aroused because of the American invasion, says the Western Tobacco Journal, particularly as regards the tobacco industry. Protests are being sent to the Government requesting assistance in repelling the invader. Recently the Breslau Chamber of Commerce passed resolutions in condemnation of the American methods, which threaten to control the tobacco trade of that country.

Tobacco Notes.

T. J. Horrocks, tobacconist, Toronto, reports a big increase in trade during the past two weeks. The sale of the "Ronto" cigar is steadily increasing.

ARGENTINE FROZEN MEAT.

ACCORDING to a Buenos Aires correspondent, the importance of the Argentine meat freezing industry and the apparently erroneous impressions prevalent in regard to its actual situation make it desirable to sound a note of warning which may have the effect of minimizing a danger now threatening this branch of industrial enterprise. Argentina has been described as "the world's butchershop," and not without reason. Its pastoral resources are enormous and promise to become largely increased in the course of time; but optimistic officials and other forecasts during a short period of unbounded prosperity, seem to have created the belief that there is neither limit to the producing capacity of the country nor to the consuming power abroad.

The freezing industry in this Republic has been 20 years in attaining its present proportions, and, under normal conditions, should grow year by year. In view, however, of what has happened, and is likely to happen in the near future, there is ample justification for anticipating diminished operations and continued heavy losses, at least for some time to come. This will be a result of the competing local factors now being introduced into this industry, to the detriment of the existing concerns, and, possibly, to the complete ruin of some of those who are about to enter the field. Where three may live twelve may easily starve, and whilst it is beyond question that a few years hence the renewed progress of the industry will be assured, it is perfectly clear that the excessive competition now being introduced will lead to heavier losses all round than those now being incurred by the leading companies. In order to clearly demonstrate this aspect of the question the following facts and figures are submitted :

Since the years 1883-1886, when the first meat freezing stations in Argentina were established by the River Plate Fresh Meat Company, the Compania Sansinena de Carnes Congeladas and Las Palmas Produce Company, more popularly known as Nelson's, the exports of frozen meat have been almost exclusively made by these companies, and have increased so rapidly that in 1901 nearly 50 per cent. of the imports of frozen meat into the United Kingdom were of Argentine origin.

The subsequent increase in production is shown in tables from which the following totals are taken :

	Mutton, carcases.	Beef quarters
1899	2,485,949	113,431
1900	2,385,214	265,965
1901	2,722,727	498,375
1902	3,429,222	830,213
1903, to Nov.	3,172,010	942,325

Three of these companies have, moreover, latterly triplicated their plant and freezing works, and have added considerably to the increase of cold storage in London and Liverpool, their present capacity being equal to four times last year's production. The large profits earned, and the substantial dividends paid by these companies in 1902, have, however, induced several competitors to enter the field, and, in face of the fact that the profits of these concerns have been converted during the last few months into serious losses on their operations, some half dozen new freezing companies have been formed and the new capital subscribed with the object of commencing work at the earliest possible moment, some of them having already acquired land and the necessary plant and machinery.

In view of the prevailing causes for the profitable trading of the three older companies, the question suggests itself as to how, leaving out of consideration the opposing elements existing in other countries, this rush of competition can lead to anything but the most disastrous results to the industry as a whole in this republic.

In weighing the question, it is important to remember that there is a limit to the capacity of the country in the matter of stock. Since 1888 no animal census has been taken, and no accurate figures on this point are available even to the Government Departments, owing to the difficulty of collecting authentic returns from the thousands of estancieros in the different points of the republic.

In further support of the argument that the future success of the Argentine frozen meat industry is gravely imperilled by the addition of the competing factors above referred to, it is only necessary to examine the reasons for the present losses of the working companies and the conditions prevailing last year, when they were making enormous profits. The first and foremost reasons for the latter were (1) the low price of stock here, (2) the higher price for meat in England and (3) the existence of war contracts with South Africa. All these causes for profitable working have disappeared. The price of stock has since risen enormously, though slightly reduced during the last six weeks; the price of meat in England, due to heavy stocks, labor and other conditions, is considerably lower; and shipments to South Africa have almost entirely ceased. To-day frozen mutton costs the factories 2¾d per pound, which, with working expenses and freight, estimated at 1d, makes 3¾d per pound, and it is now being sold in London at 3¼d. This, however, does not represent the entire loss which some of these companies are incurring, as there are still running contracts for ships on time charter, which the companies find it more profitable to load with other people's cargoes at about half cost—not to mention the large capital sunk in erecting their own cool chambers, etc., on these ships — than to send forward consignments of frozen meat which would involve them in still heavier loss. It has been sugg(sted that by combination these companies, pending the establishment of the new concerns, could artificially bring down the price of stock; but, for reasons recognized in the trade, such a course would be almost impossible. Meanwhile it is well known that, even in spite of the high prices now ruling, a better price for fat sheep can often be obtained in the market than from the freezing companies. In regard to beef, the position is slightly better, but the condition in other countries, and notably in the United States, do not justify a sanguine hope of largely increased profitable exports even of this article from Argentina.

The available supply of sheep suitable for export through the freezing machine will be limited for some time, but these observations are in no sense intended to convey the impression that the meat freezing industry in this republic is in a hopelessly bad way or should constitute a monopoly. Large tracts of new land in Rio Negro, Neuquen and other parts of the republic are being given over to sheep growing, and doubtless there will be a reduction as time goes on in the cost of production, whilst the improvement in labor conditions in Europe and other circumstances will also probably lead to a revival of old prices in the home markets. It is, nevertheless, clear that in the matter of local competition it will be a case of the survival of the fittest, as the smaller companies could not stand the strain of heavy losses, even if only temporary, until the two essential conditions of lower prices for stock and higher prices for meat become once more established facts. The older and greater companies with their resources, reserves, and facilities, must ultimately come out successfully, even if some of the smaller concerns have to disappear. There will be plenty of room for all by and by, but the time is not yet.

The Small Business as a School of Manhood

"FOR generations the small business, that is, the business as it was before the advent of the great corporation and the trust, was a school of character second in importance only to the church," says H. A. Stimson in a recent number of the Atlantic Monthly. It is rapidly being superseded, and the question is: What is to be the effect upon the business world?

Many years ago Mr. Stimson was confidential clerk in a typical city business house of the old style. Its heads were two young merchants, and he was given the opportunity of knowing both intimately and of observing the effect of their business upon their characters. The one was a gentleman by instinct and family connection,—courteous, kindly and unselfish. The other was self-made, aggressive, ambitious, selfish and intelligent enough to know the value of honesty as a policy, but without convictions. The daily routine of the business divided itself between these men by a kind of natural law. Everything requiring courtesy and the cultivation of the good will of customers fell to the one, while the planning of the business and all those important decisions which had to do with men whose good will was not particularly important to the firm, were passed by the other. The business itself, with its daily necessities and routine, constituted a school of character, giving play to the talents of both and holding their limitations in restraint. It would be interesting to look over the office letter books of those days and read in the correspondence the characteristic features of these two men. There would be found recorded, as accurately as in the record of a boy at school, their native traits and the history of their growth. Each knew as all the men of their day knew that the success of every business house depended upon the personal traits of the partners and their individual relations to the world of business quite as much as upon the wisdom of their plans.

This is understood in all forms of individual business, from the village store to the city establishment where in each instance the storekeeper is made keenly aware of the value of the good will of his customers. As a consequence he is kept under an impulse to be courteous, honest and considerate until these traits become largely characteristic. Whatever men may think about the business of the world it is inconceivable that the great business houses of the older type, which, passing from father to son, sometimes survived for centuries, could have continued under any other conditions. The great guilds of the Middle Ages were simply associations of men of this pattern. They organized for self-defence as individual merchants or tradesmen. And membership in these guilds quickly came to be dependent upon certain established types of character. Because of this the guilds held together, and became the permanent power which resulted in making the cities the instruments which enabled the early kings to shake off the power of the barons, and to break up the foundations of the feudal system in Europe. The Chinese guilds, the oldest existing organizations of business men, are also of this class.

The record of those early days still remains in our literature. Shakespeare's tale, the Merchant of Venice, turns upon the integrity, indisputable and dominant, of the merchants of that time; and the effect of the Chinese guilds upon the Chinese mercantile life is everywhere apparent. The other day the president of the Anglo-Chinese Bank at Shanghai, resigning, to return to England, after twenty-five years of service, in a public address testified that not a dollar had ever been lost by the bank through a Chinese merchant, and that the great fear he had for the changes now going on in the relations between the Orient and the Occident was lest the influx into China of foreign merchants, with a different standard of personal honesty, would do more to complicate and disturb the relations of China with the outside world than any other cause. For the Chinese have not been familiar with the lower standards of business integrity which prevail elsewhere.

Over against the guilds have arisen the modern corporation and the modern trust. They have so completely changed the essential conditions of business life as these bear upon the individual business man, that it is well to attempt to estimate the effect.

The pride of the merchant, or the manufacturer, in the business to which he was giving his life, and which bore his name, and which he hoped to make permanent in the community and to transmit to his children, has given place to another temper of mind in the passing of those smaller men into the great corporations. Names still linger from the early days: the Maydole hammer, the Buck chisel, the Disston saw, the Scott gun, the Morley hosiery, the Clay woollen, the Torrey strop, the Hassell brush, tell of a day when the skilful workman began to produce a better article than his neighbor, and soon discovering that his customers recognized its merits, found the way open to a career in which his heart found its sweetest pride, and his business life its most satisfactory reward. All that has vanished with the passing of the old conditions.

Under the new conditions a very few men are carrying the heavy strain, or may be considered as responding to the old challenge to be their very best, and to prove themselves masters in a splendid contest. It must be admitted that the prizes of the business world were never so magnificent for the capable few as they are to-day. The title "merchant prince" has taken on a new significance. But this applies only to the very few. Where there are in every great corporation or trust two or three or, perhaps, a few more, men at the head who carry the responsibility and find their powers taxed to the utmost by their daily duties, there are thousands of all grades of capacity, who now have no other feeling than that of the clerk, or the servant. Their intellectual activity is limited to doing the task that is set for them. They need to be keen, simply to understand directions and to meet the requirements of their department. Their moral responsibility is limited to obeying orders and earning their daily wage. The tax made upon them is only to do their day's work as it arrives, and at night leave their desk clear. They are part of a vast machine to whose perfection they are contributing; and in so doing are limiting their own powers, and bringing on the day when they can the more readily be dispensed with and forgotten. The best they can hope for is a pension. As life goes that is much, but it is not the best.

The great corporation is unquestionably the necessity of the hour. It will continue to take on constantly new forms of development. It is already playing and will continue to play a tremendous part in the progress of civilization. But its limitations are none the less real. The evils that are inevitably connected with it must be clearly realized if they are to be offset. Among them all none is more serious than this radical one of the effect upon the character of many employees, who, under former conditions, would have been either managing their own business or ambitious for the opportunity of doing so. The life, in a multitude of homes where a salary takes the place of business earnings, is doubtless calmer and steadier, and also in many cases ampler, in that the income is larger. A certain stability is hoped for in a society where anxiety over business conditions is exchanged for the contentment of an assured stipend. And the steadying and quieting of the temper, no longer made irritable by the daily anxiety, is unquestionably a notable social advance. When, however, one looks within and asks what is to take the place of the old discipline, with its insistent demand for those traits of character which have made the merchant and the manufacturer the sturdy, thoughtful, self-respecting men they always have been, we are at a loss for an answer.

When thoughtful writers like Benjamin Kidd speak of "the freest possible play of forces within the community, and the widest possible opportunities for the development of every individual's faculties and personality" as the condition of progress, and of "the personal rivalry and competition of life" as being not only now, but having been from the beginning "the fundamental impulse behind all progress," there is cause for concern when men find themselves tempted to exploit agencies which effectually remove or destroy those conditions.

It is certain that a great change is going on, and one of that subtle and unperceived kind the effect of which is sure to be widely felt before it is understood, not to say corrected. How much it means of difficulty or even of disaster in the business world of the future it may be difficult to determine, but it will certainly have a profound effect in shaping the prospects even of the trust. It creates conditions under which it will be growingly difficult to produce men with the character and the intellectual stamina which are necessary to the management of the great corporations. Men who have simply grown up as clerks will never be truly competent to fill these positions. They will become more and more men of detail. And the system of inbreeding, that is, of limiting the filling of their more important posts to men who have risen through all the ranks of lower service,—which now is proclaimed by some of the great railways,—is a policy as truly suicidal as it is unintelligent. Great administrative positions require men who have been accustomed to that independence of action and breadth of view which only the responsibility of directing their own affairs can produce. It is a temper of mind and spirit as far as possible from that of the life-long clerk or employee. And no problem in the business world is more vital, or has farther reaching relations, than the question how such men are in the future to be produced.

RICE IN ARKANSAS.

The Rock Island is experimenting, through agents, with rice culture in Arkansas. The experimental farm is situated in Carlisle county, near Little Rock, and consists of seventy-five acres. A report on the first crop shows thirty-five bushels to have been raised to the acre. The rice is known as the Honduras quality, and sells for $1 a bushel. It can be raised only in irrigated land, and the cost of irrigation amounts to about $5 per acre.

BROCK'S BIRD SEED.

THE skilful mixing of bird seed is for none but the bird fancier. True, to mix canary, millet and rape seed in set proportions is child's play, but to mix them so that there will be just the right amount of each is another story. In order to ascertain the perfect formula one must be closely acquainted with bird health, and the effect of seed on song. Birds, especially the dainty canary, are quickly responsive to food effects, and a little too much of this or that constituent may prove fatal to health and spirits. Owners of the little songsters are well aware of this fact, and will not take chances on unknown seed mixtures. Indeed, so dependent is the life of the bird upon its food, that bird owners are rebellious whenever an unknown and untried seed is offered by the dealer. Hence it follows that the man or firm who would put a new bird seed on the market has one of the most difficult of tasks. If, finally, he does succeed it is because the seed mixture is good beyond peradventure.

Brock's bird seed has long since earned this right. So successful have the manufacturers, Nicholson & Brock, of Toronto, been, both in making a food of the first order, and in conquering prejudice, that the sale of their bird seed ranks second to none the whole Dominion over. Every package contains a cake of "bird treat," a bird medicine, if you will, since it is designed to preserve the health of the captive warblers. Nicholson & Brock have prepared a book of considerable size on the breeding and care of canaries. Mr. Nicholson is an authority on canaries, and is freely consulted by a host of bird owners in every part of the country.

Canada's Agricultural Exports.

THE annual report of the Department of Agriculture draws attention to the fact that Canada's exports of agricultural and animal products have grown at a wonderful rate during the past seven years. In 1886 they were $39,718,212, in 1896 they were $50,591,002 and for 1903 the total stood at the enormous sum of $114,441,863. That the British market now absorbs the great bulk of our exports of farm products is true, but, nevertheless, it still offers a vast field for the futher extension of Canadian trade. Taking fifteen classes of dairy products, meats breadstuffs, forage and live stock, the total Canadian exports to Great Britain were $102,542,155, whereas the total imports into the United Kingdom of the same classes of farm products from all countries aggregated $555,875,850. It will thus be seen that in her biggest year Canada supplied of the foregoing classes of products less than one-fifth of Great Britain's requirements. To obtain a larger share of this market it will be necessary to pay careful attention to the following points: Superiority in quality, regularity in supply, ability to sell at as low a price as competing countries, and the use of attractive packages of the kind demanded by the market. Apart from Great Britain, the other markets most promising are South Africa, Japan, China and the British West Indies.

A New Preservative.

A PROCESS of preserving fresh food for months without the food losing its original flavor has been discovered by Dr. Morris, of Edinburgh. The product used is called Salvoline. As a patent has not been secured it cannot be described. It can be said, however, that the discovery of a certain salt by chemical experiments led to the perfecting of the new curing method.

It is claimed that in an experiment fresh creamery butter was kept sweet for six months, so that an expert was deceived into thinking it the fresh article. Those who have witnessed the results of these tests are convinced that a most important discovery has been made in preserving fresh food stuffs for export trade. The solution can be economically manufactured.

To Stop Adulteration of Food Stuffs.

QUITE in keeping with The Grocer's recent editorial reference to the adulteration of food stuffs in the Province of Quebec, Ald. Dagenais, who, by the way, is a doctor, and represents a portion of a very thickly populated and middle-class ward in Point St. Charles, Montreal, has made a motion in the Montreal City Council to have a clause added to the nev civic by-law giving the city more power to proceed against offenders who adulterate food. This will undoubtedly be a very good thing if officers can be found who will carry out such a by-law with the same zeal and discretion as the officers who enforce the British Food and Drugs Act.

Drying Milk and Condensing Wine.

One of the most important of modern discoveries is undoubtedly the process of drying milk, by which the moisture is evaporated, leaving all the nourishing and substantial elements unaffected. The exact proportions are one to seven, that is to say, one tablespoonful of powder in seven of water gives milk as though it had just come from the cow. There is no loss or deterioration by keeping or transit.

The process is quite perfected, and supplies are about to be placed on the market. The discoverer is certain that he has found an invaluable adjunct for military, naval, and colonial supply. whilst he claims that his powder affords an absolute guarantee for the proper nourishment of children.

Canadian Butter Packed in Danish Kiels

"Canadian butter packed in Danish kiels is the best quality of Canadian creamery, and is put up in this shape by the shippers who receive their instructions from English consignees," says the agent of the Canadian Department of Agriculture in Great Britain. "Most of it comes with no mark except what is on the sacking covering the cask; if there is any mark it is on the cask and can easily be erased. There is no doubt that the bulk of the butter packed in this style is sold as 'choicest Danish.' Only a few Canadian firms ship butter in 'Kiels' or eggs in the 'Foreign' or 'Irish' case."

New Canning Industry.

A new canning industry to be known as the Old Homestead Canning Company, is to be started shortly in Picton, Ont. The plant will be one of the largest of the kind in Ontario and will have a capacity of over three million cans. In addition to canned goods, the company will also pack jams, jellies, marmalade, and evaporated goods.

Shortage in Honey.

THIS season will see a shortage in honey in Ontario, as there will be a shortage in honeymakers. The bee has been badly bitten by the severe Winter. It is thought that a large percentage of the bees have perished or will perish before the roses bloom again. Just now it is difficult to tell how badly the apiaries will be hurt, but from examinations made and from word received throughout the province, it is thought that presumably half of the bees will die.

The bee comes out in Winter usually. He does not stay out long, but it is necessary for him to come out and get a nip of fresh air if he is to thrive. This Winter he has not been able to get out to any great extent, and dysentery is setting in. The effect will be felt on the next season's crop of honey.

The trouble will likely spread over the Niagara Peninsula and in Wellington, Norfolk and Simcoe Counties. Bees that have been kept in the cellars this Winter are doing fairly well, and it is to this class that those who like honey on their bread will look largely for their supply.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The feature of the provision market this week is lower quotations for hogs with the possibility of a further decrease shortly. The demand for smoked meats is good, and a big trade is expected as soon as navigation opens. The lard market is fair and steady. Fresh meats are quiet. Wholesale dealers say that on account of the milder weather, retailers are trying to clear up stocks on hand. Our quotations are as follows:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08½	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Butter—The butter market is more active this week than last. Lots, in fact too many, dairy rolls and prints are being received, much of which stock has been held over owing to the recent railway blockade and is not first-class quality. Stocks of butter in tubs are pretty well used up, and thus a demand is created for butter in rolls and prints. The market in creamery is steady, and receipts are sold as fast as they come forward. Receipts of butter of all grades are expected to increase steadily from no won. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22
" solids, fresh	0 19	0 20
Dairy rolls, large	0 15	0 16

Cheese—The cheese market is firm and a good demand is reported with prospects of a further rise in prices. Our quotations are as follows:

Montreal.

Provisions—Inactivity marked the provision market this week. The volume of business was small owing perhaps to one holiday in the week and the after Easter lull generally. Buyers have still ample supplies occasioned by the heavy stocks purchased last week. The season for frozen dressed hogs is now over and the market is well cleaned up of all stock. Fresh killed abattoir stock is much firmer and sales were made at $7.50 per 100 lbs. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00
American short cut clear	16 50	17 00

Butter—No marked change is perceptible in the butter market. Buyers are not so keen as they were before Easter and there is little uniformity in country bidding. Creamery ranged from 20 cents to half a cent higher f.o.b. We quote:

Fancy creamery	0 19	0 20
Summer goods	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16

Cheese—Last year at this time the cheese market was away ahead of the condition this year. Lateness in every way marks the season; 2,000 boxes of March fodder goods were in stock in Montreal at this time in 1903. Seventy-five per cent. of the stock held here is owned by London firms or at least English houses and the stock cannot exceed 50,000 boxes. From present appearances there will be few Aprils and little new make of any kind marketted before the middle of May. We quote:

Good cheese ....

St. John, N.B.

Provisions—Business is dull. In pork rather lower prices are quoted as demand is very light. Beef, while a light sale, shows little change in price. In lard our market is largely supplied. Prices, however, do not seem quite as firm. Smoked meats are held at full figures.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Herring is King.

THE herring has almost from time immemorial been regarded as King of all fish in the sea, says a St. John's exchange. Insignificant though the little swimmer may seem, he is nevertheless regarded by all northern nations as a perennial money-maker for the fishermen on the coasts. From the fiords of distant Norway to the shores of British Columbia the herring is looked for and welcomed as a source of income which seldom or never fails.

The port of St. John, N.B., was known as a market for herring from very early times, and the curing industry has been carried on longer than the oldest can remember. Twenty years ago there is a record that 375 vessels made this city their headquarters in the trade, and the price of the fish then was as low as 15 cents a hundred. To-day things are greatly changed; the fish have to a considerable extent forsaken the neighboring coasts, and while St. John remains the centre of the curing industry, the herring have to be brought from Grand Manan and even from Bay of Islands, Newfoundland. The herring, for some unexplained reason, change their quarters with the seasons. In April they are caught in large numbers off Nova Scotia; later on, in June and July, they are found near the district from Tynemouth Creek to Mispec, and again from September to November, around the Island of Grand Manan. While the fish around the coast are certainly fewer in numbers than formerly, there is no doubt that the enormous number of young herring used by so-called sardine factories has much to answer for in this connection. The most profitable season is the early Winter, for the fish can then be frozen and shipped long distances. Packed in barrels, they are supplied to many districts in Quebec and Ontario, and at one time were sent as far as Vancouver, but during the last year or so the inhabitants have taken to catching herring on the Pacific coast in greater numbers, and St. John no longer sends the frozen fish so far.

While the fresh herring is regarded as excellent eating, yet in other guise, as the kipper or the bloater, the fish is even more popular. The herring, when cut open, slightly salted and smoked for a few hours in hardwood smoke, becomes a kipper; left in its original shape and salted and smoked for a longer period, it is transformed into the bloater. This latter delicacy hailed originally from Yarmouth, on the east coast of England, and is to this day a staple product of the place.

To Exterminate the Dog Fish.

IN view of the heroic efforts being put forward by fishermen in the Maritime Provinces to secure Government measures for the extermination of the dog fish, it is interesting to note that a bill with a similar end in view is shortly to come before the United States Congress. The proposed legislation authorizes the payment of a bounty of not less than two cents for each dog-fish taken by citizens or fishermen of the United States, on the delivery of the tail section of the fish at such places as may be designated by the secretary of Commerce and Labor. The bill also provides that the sectreary of the department shall annually submit an estimate to Congress of the amount of money necessary to carry out the provisions of the bill.

Canners Win Big Law Suit.

THE somewhat famous case of Mackie vs. the British Columbia Packers' Association, the A.B.C. Packing Co., and other salmon-packing concerns, has been dismissed by the Supreme Court by consent.

The action was for some $44,000, and was based upon the contention advanced by the plaintiff that he and many other fishermen who fished on the Fraser River for the defendant companies during the season of 1902, had not received the full amount of money for fish as agreed upon by them with the defendant companies prior to the commencement of fishing operations in that year. It was contended by the plaintiff that the amount sued for was the difference due as between what the canners claimed the catch had been and what the fishermen claimed it was.

The suit has dragged along since the Fall of 1902. In the dismissal of the case by consent, as against the plaintiff, costs were awarded in favor of all defendants.

The Dogfish Question.

IN view of the prominence given at the present time to a consideration of means whereby dogfish may be exterminated from the New England and Maritime Provinces' coast, the following methods suggested of remedying the evil are worth noting:

One is the establishment of factories to convert the dogfish into fertilizers; another proposal is that the Government pay a bounty for each dogfish caught. Many favor a combination of the two systems. The fish are rich in phosphates, while their oil is valuable and the skin makes a good substitute for sandpaper.

In England and Germany dogfish are largely used as food, and are said to be found excellent nourishment. Some lobster canners propose to make an experiment after their regular lobster season is over this year, and pack a quantity of the fish as food. They do not expect to be able to dispose of it in Canada, but in some of the largest cities of the United States the foreign elements of the population consider as delicacies squid and other species of fish which the average Canadian would not dream of eating. It is hoped that among these same elements a market may be found for dogfish.

Scottish Method of Curing Herring.

J. Cowie, fish curing expert, who has been engaged by the Minister of Canadian Fisheries to examine likely fishing stations, and report on the possibility of introducing the Scotish method of catching and curing herrings into the Dominion, has decided to make an experiment this Summer at the port of Canso, on the northeast coast of Nova Scotia. Mr. Cowie has secured the service of a number of coopers and Scottish girls to do gutting. He has been making efforts to secure his fishing staff among Moray Firth fishermen, but it is understood the inducements offered were not such as to incline the fishermen to forego the most profitable fishings of the year on their own coast, the proposal being to send over a steam drifter with crew of fishermen to Canadian waters.

Codfish Scarce.

Cured codfish, familiarly known to the New Englander as Cape Cod turkey, and to the palates of thousands of toilers as an appetizing breakfast relish, has now risen to the level of a luxury. Supplies at primary points are such that dealers are unable to secure enough stock for the most pressing wants, and prices have advanced to a level where "shorts" have sought cover in despair.

Cannery Operations.

J. Wallace, of the firm of Wallace Bros., has leased the Pacific Northern cannery on Observation Inlet, B.C., which is being put in shape to begin fishing at the end of the month. If conditions are favorable, it is likely that Mr. Wallace will establish a fish curing and freezing plant on the Naas permanently.

Notes.

At the meeting of the directors of the Canada Marine Biological Station in Ottawa last week the dogfish question was discussed with a view to the extermination of the pest.

CANADIAN AGENTS.

A CANADIAN'S VIEW OF BERMUDA

A CALLER at the Montreal offices of The Grocer last week was Mr. W. T. Copping, Montreal representative of the Christie, Brown Co., Limited, Toronto. Mr. Copping had just returned from Bermuda, where he had spent the past three months taking a well-earned vacation. Mr. Copping's health had not been of the best before he left for Bermuda but the healthy climate has completely restored him and he has grown 15 pounds heavier. He expressed himself as delighted in every way with his trip and his experiences on the island. "The people, that is, the merchants, have a desire to trade with Canada in preference to the United States, but Canadian manufacturers have not thought it worth while to pay as close attention to the requirements of the islanders as the United States merchants," said Mr. Copping. "Things being equal, Canadians would most certainly get the preference in trade. This is evidenced by the fact that the flour trade from Canada has increased 200 per cent. during the past two years. The hardware trade swings preferably to the United States, while England seems to get the most of the dry goods business. The climate being very warm very little clothing is required by the natives, and living also on the part of the natives is on a cheap basis. Meat is high and this is mostly supplied by Chicago. Why Canadians don't get after this trade is a puzzler to me. If it pays United States houses to look after it, it should surely interest our people. There are seven steamers of the Pickford and Black line sailing from Halifax touching at the island, and in exchange Bermuda could supply us with onions, potatoes, arrowroot, bulbs, &c. The tourist trade in Winter is a source of a good deal of revenue to the hotels, boarding houses and stores, hotel board (and it is good) varying from $10 to $24 per week, while boarding houses can be had from $3 up per week. There are many interesting natural views and fine scenery on the island. Bermuda has the second largest dry dock in the world.

"One of the sights of the island is a field of Easter lilies,—and there are many wonderful fields.

"One thing I was pleased to notice and that is that The Canadian Grocer is not a stranger to the merchants there, and in my humble way I took pleasure in expressing my pride in our Canadian grocers' newspaper. The interest that The Grocer has always taken in furthering trade and dealings with Bermuda cannot but be appreciated by the storekeepers and shippers of the island."

Mr. Copping has been the Montreal and Eastern representative for the Christie, Brown Co., Limited, for twenty-one years, and his territory, it is needless to say, is looked after closely.

MOLASSES SITUATION IN MARITIME PROVINCES.

THE situation in the molasses market in the Maritime Provinces has been of great interest to the trade ever since January, says the St. John Telegraph, when the arrival of a cargo of new crop of Porto Rico at St. John broke the combine price for that article, and the later arrival of new Barbadoes did the like for the product of that island.

Owing to large stocks of last year's crop held in the provinces the demand has thus far been moderate, but everybody has been waiting to see what the next move would be with regard to the price of new crop goods.

It now appears that any further decline need not be reckoned on. With regard to Barbadoes, the very unusual fact has developed that a cargo has lately been shipped to Virginia. Indeed it is said this is the first cargo sent there, at least for very many years. A cargo of Antigua molasses has also been sent there. The United States demand is said to be due to a shortage in the New Orleans crop.

Another notable fact is that Antigua molasses is to-day quoted higher than Barbadoes, which has seldom if ever been the case before. Late cables from Barbadoes say the market there is firm.

Coming to Porto Rico, that market is a cent higher than it was a month ago, and a letter from a leading firm of exporters on that island, dated March 22, says:

"Let us take, for instance, the output of the port of Ponce, which last year exceeded 8,000 hogsheads. This year we are convinced 4,000 will not be reached, or a falling off of 50 per cent.; while at Mayaguez, which last year exported 5,000 hogsheads, this season's output will scarcely come up to 1,000, a difference of 80 per cent. There are now alone left the ports of Fajardo, Humacao and Arroyo, the exports from which we are unable to report with exactitude; but with regard to Arroyo the conditions applicable to Ponce also rule there. To be more lucid, the canes are ground in centrals, lately inaugurated there, so that the decrease from this port will be more or less on the same scale as from Mayaguez and Ponce. We are to our regret unable to give you any figures with reference to Humacao and Fajardo, but we are inclined to believe that the decrease there will be at least 20 to 25 per cent."

It will thus be seen that the conditions appear to favor a firm if not a strong market for new crop molasses. There are now four cargoes of Porto Rico molasses afloat for St. John.

TEA EXPORTS FROM JAPAN.

The Grocer is in receipt of a letter from C. M. Barnard, agent for Barnard & Co., prominent tea merchants of Yokohama, Japan, giving the following statistics regarding exports of tea from Japan to North America for the season up to February 29, 1904.

New York	14,770,204 lbs.
Chicago	18,218,219 "
San Francisco	5,647,945 "
Canada	5,598,123 "
Total	44,244 491

The total shows an increase over last season's exports of 5,008,277 lbs., and to Canada in particular an increase of 1,336,686 lbs.

A TREAT FOR FISH LOVERS.

WITH good-bye said to Lent for another year, any variety or delicacy in the fish market will be acceptable. The luscious bivalves, known to connoisseurs as soft crabs, will soon be in the market. Reports from Morehead, N.C., state that the season should have opened last week but the weather has been too cold. Now they are reported to be coming in at New York. They are expected in Montreal at the end of the week, and at that they are about ten days later than previous years. The constant cold has been assigned for the delay.

Another fish statement which was given secretly is that fish of all kinds are scarce. The bad floods along the great lakes coupled with the slow moving of the heavy ice has made it almost impossible to get supplies. Letters to local dealers complain bitterly of the delay in arrivals all along the line.

JUDGMENT EXPECTED.

Mr. Saunby, miller, London, expects to receive the decision of the supreme court in his litigation with the City of London very soon now. The dispute arose out of the action of the city in erecting a dam with flashboards about 4 miles below the mill, which Mr. Saunby claimed had materially lessened the working power of the mill. The litigation has been going on for nearly seven years. Judgment was given in both the inferior courts in Mr. Saunby's favor.

Salt—Reduced Prices

Having completed alterations and improvements we are now in a position to fill all orders. Our plant, as reconstructed, is the most modern in existence, and has the largest capacity in the British Empire for the production of high-grade Salt.

The improvements made having enabled us to effect a considerable saving in the cost of manufacture, we have issued new Price Lists, showing very large reductions.

As it is almost impossible to secure cooperage stock we suggest that our customers order ordinary fine Salt in sacks. Write for new Price List.

THE EXPANSION OF THE WEST.

DURING the month of March the Inspectors' Department of the Winnipeg post office, which has in charge the opening up of new post offices in Manitoba and the Territories, made a record. Twenty-six new offices were established, being one in excess of the number opened in September, 1884, the month which has hitherto held the record.

The rapid extension of the postal service opens up new areas of influence to the merchant, the jobber, and the manufacturer. The tradesmen who occupy these new fields are for the most part strangers to the trade. They have no established connections with any house. They are as the unbroken prairie, waiting to be tilled. There is in them the same rich promise as is in the soil. The wholesaler or manufacturer who cultivates their trade is sure to have an abundant return as the years pass.

The speediest and most potent means of impressing one's name and business upon these alert tradesmen of the West is through advertising in their trade newspaper. To establish a good impression is the first requisite in going after a new account. We are all prone to give our money more willingly for advertised goods than for non-advertised goods, to houses that advertise rather than to those that come to us out of the darkness.

SPRING AND EXPORT GROCER.

THE approach of Spring means different things to different people. For the farmer Spring plowing and seeding are the all important incidents of Springtime. For the wholesaler and manufacturer Spring means, this year at least, the straightening out of the interminable transportation tangle. The retailer's interest is bent on closing out the tail ends of Winter stocks, tidying up, and preparing for what he has a right to expect will prove a great season's business.

For the staff of The Canadian Grocer the approach of Spring means The Special Spring and Export Number. This is the great event in the calendar of our offices scattered from London, Eng., to Vancouver, B.C. In 1900 our first Special Spring and Export Number was issued. It proved a great success and each year since it has been the ambition of the staff to excel the previous issue, both in quality and quantity, news, editorial and advertising. It is no small undertaking to prepare a publication that shall adequately set forth the food-producing capabilities of this Dominion of Canada, and to distribute it to the great and increasing number of buyers and prospective buyers of Canadian products the world over; and no publication lacking the well organized staff of The Canadian Grocer could even attempt such a project. Our success has been demonstrated by the numerous letters of congratulation we have received from all points of the compass, and by our advertising patrons whose successive advertisements in this number are eloquent testimonies to the results obtained from advertising in previous numbers.

This year again our hopes are high, our enthusiasm strong, while our experience is wider. We look upon this number as a co-operative affair, the result of the combined efforts of our staff, our readers, our advertisers, to make the food products of Canada better known the world over. From our staff we can count on their best efforts; from our readers we welcome all news and information about Canada's products that should be told to the world; from our advertising friends we expect an appreciative consideration of the very exceptional opportunities this number affords for desirable publicity at home and abroad. Together we should produce a number worthy of this great Dominion.

FRANCE AND CANADA.

RECIPROCITY with France is said to be once more receiving the attention of the United States Government. The proposed treaty of a few years ago lapsed in 1903 because of the expiration of the time for its ratification and now, because the United States does not take advantage of the favored nation privilege, its products are taxed to the maximum in France. In consequence, business organizations there are urging the Government to renew negotiations which will remove the disadvantage.

A reference to such a question naturally suggests a consideration of Canada's commercial relations with France. It will be remembered that in 1893 a commercial agreement was arrived at between France and Great Britain, on behalf of Canada. Under the provisions of this treaty which went into force on October 14, 1895, certain French products are admitted into Canada under a reduced tariff and certain goods of Canadian origin are admitted into France subject only to the minimum duty imposed in that country. The French products include wines, less than 26 per cent. alcohol, common and castile soaps, nuts, almonds, prunes and plums. The Canadian goods are canned meat, condensed milk, fresh water fish, fresh lobsters and crawfish preserved in their natural forms, apples and pears, fresh or dried, preserved fruit, building timber, wood pavement, staves, wood pulp, tanning extract, common paper, prepared skins, boots and shoes, common furniture, except chairs, flooring of soft wood and wooden ships.

Since the treaty went into force trade in these articles has shown a steady advance, which is extremely gratifying to both parties. Since 1896 Canadian importations of these French products have more than doubled, mounting in value from $284,414 in 1896 to $587,431 in 1902, and it is understood that the return trade has been equally satisfactory.

The treaty of 1893 has been justified and we believe that any further steps to improve trade relations between Canada and France will be both acceptable and profitable. While Canadians cherish the British connection and look with hope towards a closer commercial union with the Motherland, it must not be forgotten that a large proportion of our population are of French origin and that they would view with appreciation any favors that might be offered to France. Moreover, Anglo-French relations have been greatly strengthened of late by the conclusion of an arbitration treaty between Britain and France. This treaty was the direct outcome of the work of boards of trade in both countries, and illustrates the power which business men can wield even in international affairs, when they so decide. Its adoption has paved the way for many friendly advances in the future. Among them, it is to be hoped, will be the negotiation of a commercial treaty of even wider scope than the present.

TEA IMPORTATIONS IN 1903.

RETURNS showing the distribution of Indian and Ceylon tea re-exported from the United Kingdom during the year 1903, are now complete. Compared with 1902, shipments to Canada have declined nearly 25 per cent. though it must be remembered that 1902 importations into Canada were abnormally large. The decline is most marked in Indian tea, the importation of which has fallen off from 1,795,950 lbs. in 1902 to 1,039,783 lbs. in 1903. The decline in Ceylon tea is less noticeable, the figures being 1,767,523 in 1902 and 2,463,319 lbs. in 1903. Compared with preceding years the demand for Ceylon tea has shown a steady growth.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

THE average board of trade in a Canadian town is practically a dead letter to-day. Possibly the board meets once a year. A handful of members put in an appearance. Two or three officers are elected or, more frequently, re-elected. A high sounding and elaborate resolution in favor of the preferential policy of the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain is passed and forwarded to that statesman. Then the meeting adjourns and the business of the board for the year is accomplished.

Fortunately for Canadian commercial interests, all our boards of trade are not of this standard, nor does Canadian prosperity depend at all largely on the activity of the boards of trade. But, while this may be the case, it does not follow that such organizations cannot be of great value both to the communities in which they are located and to the country at large. The past efforts and accomplishments of the boards give ample proof of this. When boards of trade were first organized in Canadian towns and cities they did a splendid work, which unfortunately has not been paralleled to this day.

It is a pleasant sign of the times to note the rejuvenation of the Halifax board of trade and the inauguration of a "Forward Movement" in its policy. This movement is to be marked by a three-fold advance. First, a large and enthusiastic membership is to be secured. Second, the membership is to pledge its support and lend its best business capacity to the carrying out of all future projects undertaken by the board. Thirdly, a young and active secretary is to be secured, who will take charge of the executive work. The Halifax board of trade are in earnest. They have formulated a plan of campaign and, because the plan is practical, it will in all probability be successful.

It is our opinion that the present time is an admirable one for the rejuvenation of one and all of the Canadian boards of trade. Capital has organized and is organizing into its employers' associations. Labor is strengthening its hands in the unions. Retail merchants have their national and provincial associations. Manufacturers have their big Canadian association,—but there is still a necessity for the better organization and consolidation of the commercial interests of every community. Too frequently these interests are badly served or neglected by the municipal councils. An active board of trade would not only remedy this defect but would create a renewed activity in municipal affairs. Its attention could be directed towards the reform of many grievances, the establishment of beneficial institutions, the attraction of tourist trade, the improvement of means of communication, and the general advancement of the interests of the town or city.

The organization of the board should be such as to expedite the transaction of business. Too frequently valuable time is wasted in argument. This can be saved by a system of representative committees, whose duty it is to secure all information and formulate policies, to be subsequently approved by the whole board. In this way an admirable work can be carried on quietly and effectively, without undue ostentation and noise. If a secretary can devote his whole time to the work of the board, so much the better, but even this is not necessary. Reliable information, a definite policy and sound backing will usually carry the day when any work is to be accomplished.

EVAPORATED APPLES CORNERED.

FROM a reliable source comes the information that the evaporated apple market has been cornered. For some days unseen influences have been effectually doing their work, with the result that a general flurry in evaporated apples was noticed a day or two ago, culminating when a certain firm managed to get within their control all available supplies of evaporated apples in carlots, which they are offering at 6 1-2c. The situation, however, cannot be construed as serious, normal prices cannot be advanced much over 1c. before it will pay to import evaporated stocks from the United States to supply all demands. The local demand moreover is not large, the bulk of supplies going direct to the Northwest. In addition there are reported to be fairly large quantities of dried apples on hand, which naturally take the place of evaporated fruit in the event of high prices ruling in the latter.

The corner in evaporated apples has failed to raise in local dealers more than a degree of curiosity since the event was expected a month ago. As a matter of fact it is only a forcing of natural developments. The quantity of evaporated apples on hand at the present time is considerably below the average of last year and is being gradually used up. Two large dealers were practically out a month ago. The number of small dealers with stocks to sell is on the decline, which makes it easier for large dealers to control prices.

Something in the nature of a combine in the evaporated apple industry was attempted about a year ago, but the scheme was frustrated owing to the unwillingness of certain firms to become parties thereto, who, for evident reasons, found it more profitable to remain outside.

A NEW FEATURE IN PEANUTS.

PEANUTS from France and Japan are being offered in Eastern Canada markets. This is something unusual; in fact it appears to be the first time on record any peanuts from these countries have been offered in this part of the Dominion. The explanation of this innovation is the scarcity, and consequently high prices, of peanuts in the Southern States, from where Eastern Canada usually gets its supply. The price at which the French and Japanese article is being offered is rather more favorable than that of Southern American production.

The French and Japanese nuts are of good quality and rather plumper than those we have heretofore been obtaining from the Southern States, and some transactions have taken place.

In British Columbia Japanese peanuts are no strangers, as a steady supply of them is received in that part of the Dominion.

CORRECTION.

The leading article in March 25 issue of The Grocer on "The Scientific Preservation and Preparation of Foods" instead of being credited to Professor J. W. Fraser, of McGill University, Montreal, should have been credited to Professor J. W. Walker, F.R.S.C., of McGill University, Montreal.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. R. L. Weaver, manager of the "Salada" Tea Company in Minneapolis, is in Toronto this week.

Mr. W. A. Craven, Maritime Province representative of Chase & Sanborn, is in Montreal this week. Business is reported satisfactory in his territory.

Mr. John McKergow, of A. A. Ayer & Co., produce dealers, sailed last Saturday on S. S. Campania for England. He will be absent about a month or six weeks.

Mr. I. Hibbert, Montreal manager for the well-known provision merchants, Willer and Riley, of Manchester, Eng., sailed this week from Halifax for Liverpool by S. S. Ionian.

Mr. F. J. White, of White & Co., fruit and commission merchants, Toronto, has gone on a business trip to New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore and North Carolina.

Mr. J. A. Courtemanche, representing Ocean Mills, Montreal, is in St. John, N.B., in the interests of Chinese Starch. Business promises well judging from the orders sent in during the past week.

Mr. F. W. Thompson, vice president and managing director of the Ogilvie Milling Co., and family, are at present in Paris. They will leave for London about April 15, and will be in Montreal at the end of April.

Mr. A. Warren, of the Salada Tea Co. head office, Toronto, is at present in Montreal. Like everyone connected with this tea house he is enthusiastic about the progress made by "Salada" in all parts of Canada and the United States.

Mr. C. Masters, who formerly represented the Greig Mfg. Co., Limited, in the Maritime Provinces, has joined the travelling staff of R. Herron & Co., Montreal. He left for the East last week with a full range of samples, including Crown Brand flavoring extracts, Red Cross jellies, spices, coffees, etc. Mr. Masters' headquarters are at St. John, N. B.

Mr. S. S. Arnold, representative of R. Herron & Co., Montreal, has just returned from a three months' trip through Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia. Mr. Arnold met with good success and reports business in all lines good. Prospects are bright and, as soon as the weather settles down and the rush of emigrants strikes the West, matters will generally be more lively. Mr. Arnold is at present enjoying a few weeks' rest with his family in Toronto.

Mr. Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Hebert, left last Monday for New York and Atlantic City. The trip is entirely one of pleasure and recreation, as Mr. Hebert has been confined closely to business since last Summer and the holiday is a deserved one. It is to be hoped that the salt sea breezes of the Atlantic and the relief from business cares will bring Mr. Hebert back in vigorous health. Mr. Hebert and family expect to be absent about five weeks. The Grocer wishes them an enjoyable holiday.

Mr. J. H. Speirs, Western Ontario representative of Chase & Sanborn, was a visitor to Montreal this week. Speaking of trade in the West Mr. Speirs stated that despite the most inclement weather ever experienced in his territory the conditions of trade, particularly in his own line, were very satisfactory. "Since I have been on the road," said Mr. Speirs, "I have noticed a very decided increase in the consumption of coffee. This can only be accounted for by the fact that the public have realized that we in Canada can supply them with as good coffee as can be found anywhere. I am too modest to say to what extent the firm I have the honor to represent have contributed to this feeling of confidence in Canadian pack of coffees, but I will say that I always sell only the best." Mr. Speirs has been spending a few days with his relatives in Montreal and physically looks as well as ever.

The Question of Authority

That's the Whole Situation.

Associate your purchasing interests with men of authority—men who know what they are talking about—specialty men—men who have succeeded so well that none can dispute their statements—that's it. MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, April 7, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery market is livening up steadily. Dealers report brisk sales for the week, which, if continued, promise to go a long way to compensate for the recent prolonged depression. Canned goods are moving freely at firm prices, with stocks beginning to show signs of depletion. Sugar continues firm and the demand is brisk. A good trade in molasses and syrups is reported at full prices. The trade in teas is quiet this week and firm prices rule. The coffee market is firm, showing signs of stiffening further; slow sales are reported. Spices are quiet. The demand for rice is steady and that for tapioca good, firm prices ruling in both. Dried fruits are quiet with the exception of prunes and currants.

CANNED GOODS.

The condition of the canned goods market is healthy at firm prices, canned peas, corn and tomatoes being particularly firm. Stocks are light and the demand is likely to exceed the supply. Dealers report a scarcity of peas and beans, and say tomatoes are getting full advances. The Summer trade in canned fruit has not begun to move freely yet. Our quotations are as follows:

SUGAR.

The sugar market is without special feature this week and there are no changes to record. Business for the week has been interfered with by the Easter holidays, and trading has been light in consequence. While the tone of the market is nominally steady, refiners at the moment are indifferent buyers of raws, and are unwilling to pay last price for any nearby lots, their recent heavy purchases having fortified them for weeks to come and for the present they consider it expedient to withdraw from the market rather than encourage Cuban holders farther in their upper pretensions.

Quotations for 96 test centrifugals remain nominal on basis 2 5-16 c and f. New York, for Cubans, or 1.97 c. and f. for non-privileged sugars in United States markets. Both of these quotations are equivalent to duty paid parity of 3.65. Holders are asking 1-32 more for spot sugars and in Cuba there are no centrifugals offering at less than 2 3-8 c. and f. for April shipment. There have been some sales this week of new crop jobber sugars at 9s 3d c. and f., which is equivalent to 3.75 duty paid for basis 96 for July-August shipment. Sellers now ask 9s 4 1-2d for both old and new crop.

In Europe there has been an advance of 3-4d to 1 1-2d, beet sugar quotations now being 8s 6 3-4d for April shipment and 8s 7 1-2d for May shipment basis f.o.b. Hamburg. There is still a disparity of fully 1-8c per lb in favor of cane sugar in the New York market.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for week ending March 30, were 41,318 tons, all being to refiners. Meltings for the week were 36,000 tons, an increase of 4,000 tons over the previous week. Total stock in all hands was 136,084 tons, an increase for the week of 16,318 tons. Combined stocks of U. S. and Cuba were 398,084 tons, a decrease of 124,165 tons from last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 358,084, an increase of only 3,192 tons over corresponding period last year.

Refined market has been without change, although deliveries in the United States on old contracts have been quite large and there has been some new buying at unchanged prices. The margin between raw and refined in New York is now down to 83c per 100 lbs, which in itself is an indication that prices will at least remain steady for the immediate future and if raws were to assume a stronger tone, it would be natural to expect a ready response from refiners.

The position in Canada is nominal with only small business doing at the moment and trade in general quiet owing to the bad condition of the country roads. Our quotations are as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A good trade in molasses is reported at steady prices with tendency upward. Some West India molasses has arrived on the market, it appears to be of first-class quality, and may displace New Orleans stock. At the present time the cheaper grades of New Orleans molasses are shut out on account of the test. We quote the following prices:

TEAS.

Local trade in teas this week is reported fair at very firm prices, with prospects pointing to a further advance. Ceylons and Indians are in particularly good demand.

London reports say that owing to the Easter holidays sales have passed with a quiet tone, irregularity in many cases being noticeable, so that on the whole a slight decline from the rates ruling early in March must be recorded for common and ordinary medium teas. Better kinds continue to be well competed for, and occasionally good liquoring Indian brokens have shown a slight advance on late quotations. Daily deliveries are progressing steadily and continue to show an increase over last year, the actual totals from January 1 to March 22 being as follows: Home consumption 1904, 56,659,000 lbs.; 1903, 51,464,000 lbs. Re-export 1904, 10,198,000 lbs.; 1903, 8,791,000 lbs.

There has been a noticeable want of keenness among English buyers of Indian teas, and chiefly of the common and ordinary medium grades. The better kinds, both leaf and broken, have shown but little change though occasionally the latter have improved somewhat on the rates lately ruling. Common fannings, however, have been much neglected. There is little change in the Ceylon market, though some irregularity has been noticeable in the lower qualities of Pekoes and Pekoe Souchongs, which were occasionally cheaper. Good medium teas, however, have been steady, and for invoices showing improved character, prices have advanced.

The quantity taken by Russia to the end of February shows a substantial improvement on last year, even when the lessened consignments via China are taken into account. The use of Ceylon tea on the Continent is slowly but steadily increasing in favor. Our quotations are as follows:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues very firm and only small sales are reported, very little having been done on the street this week. Prices have advanced in the New York market, although as yet no change in local prices is noted. The primary market has firmed considerably since last week. Dealers are hesitating to buy on account of the stiff prices ruling, particularly in Rios. Some business has been done in milder coffees on English account. One local dealer remarks that the prospects point to a further advance in prices. It is confidently expected that the Brazil crop will be from 25 to 50 per cent. lower than last year. RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The tapioca market continues firm and the rice market steady, with good demand and no change in prices to record from last week's quotations. Tapioca is a little firmer. Notwithstanding unfavorable accounts of shortage in supplies of rice on account of war in the East, plenty seems to be coming forward as yet. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The market in dried fruits is steady with prices firm. The demand for prunes is keeping up well. Currants of last year's crop tend to become easier in price and are moving freely. Cable advices from France indicate a somewhat easier market in Tarragona almonds, and present prices seem to indicate safe values. Valencia raisins are quiet. A cable from Smyrna advises an advance of from 2s to 2s 6d in Sultana raisins. There has been a constant demand for lower grades, the quality of which has shown good value this season. In view of an anticipated short crop the coming season, supplies have been pretty well used up. Last year's crop, according to C. Whittall & Co., is estimated at about 55,000 tons; shipments to all parts up to the middle of March at about 48,000 tons, leaving stocks on hand at from 7,000 to 7,500 tons. EGGS.

The egg market is in rather a peculiar condition as The Grocer goes to press. The Easter trade has been satisfactory, but dealers have still on hand a small percentage of their Easter stock and are expecting a slump in prices before the end of the week. Sales for the last two days have been slow. Commission men report that on Easter Monday stocks were cleaned up, and that for Easter sales stock held steady at 22c. Large receipts are expected this week, and owing to present arrivals no shortage is reported. Supplies are increasing daily and a further drop to 15c is predicted before the end of the week. Our quotations are as follows:

Eggs, fresh laid, per doz	0 17 0 18

POULTRY.

There is nothing more than a nominal trade in poultry to report, since this is the off season. No changes in last week's prices are noted. Our quotations are as follows:

MAPLE SUGAR AND SYRUP.

Trade in maple sugar and syrup is quieter this year than usual. The demand is steady although not particularly active. Dealers report plenty of the manufactured article on the market, with the real article beginning to arrive in small quantities. Our quotations are as follows:

Fish.

The fish market is quiet after a satisfactory Lenten trade. Stocks have lasted out well and dealers think they have sufficient to carry them through two or three weeks, at the end of which supplies of fresh fish will begin to arrive, namely, trout and whitefish from the upper lakes. The demand for frozen fish will be practically nominal from now on. Last week's prices continue unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

Green Fruits.

The green fruit market is picking up rapidly, and dealers report a brisk trade for the week. California navel oranges are still in big demand and are arriving in refrigerator cars. The market for Valencias is quiet. The last shipment of Jamaica bitter marmalade oranges is expected this week. Lemons are slightly easier with first-class stocks of Palermos arriving freely and demand for 300s slightly in excess of 360s. Pineapples are arriving freely, the bulk of the supply coming from Havana now instead of from Florida. Bahama pines arrive next month. Some local dealers receive the fruit in green condition and use artificial processes for ripening. The demand for bananas and pines is equally good and improving, bananas are arriving freely and are easier in price. Stocks of Florida tomatoes now arriving are better quality and easier in price; they will shortly be arriving in carlots. Strawberries are arriving more freely, with the bulk of stocks coming from Louisiana, and prices easier. Grape fruit is firmer in price. The final shipment of the season is expected this week and will be quoted at $7 per box, as against $12 for the same period last year. Our quotations are as follows:

Vegetables.

There is a fair demand for vegetables this week with an increasing demand for green stuff. Parsnips are still scarce, and only a limited supply of carrots is obtainable. The onion season is practically over and supplies will be scarce after this week. Considerable stocks of French onions have been noticed in the market packed in barrels holding 700 lbs., and selling at 3c per lb. Egyptian onions are expected this week in small lots. Sweet potatoes are scarce. Rhubarb, green onions and radishes are scarce and have advanced in price. Mushrooms are difficult to obtain. Oyster plants are out of the market. California celery is in fair demand, final shipments have already arrived, and consumers will shortly be using material in cold storage. Greens are noticed on the market for the first time this week, and are selling at $2 per bushel, also new Bermuda potatoes, which are quoted at $3.50 per bushel. Spinach is easier in price and Florida cauliflower out of the market at present. Our quotations are as follows:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market is very dull this week. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is 1c easier. Red and white wheat have each advanced 1c. Peas have advanced 1c. Buckwheat is 2c easier and rye 5c easier. There are no other changes to note. Our quotations are as follows:

FLOUR.

There is nothing new in the flour market this week to report. Demand is steady at firm prices. Last week's prices remain unchanged. Reports from the Lake Huron district say that wheat has wintered well. Trade for the coming season promises to be particularly active. Our quotations are as follows:

BREAKFAST FOODS.

The market in breakfast foods continues brisk with good demand for all lines. Prices are firm and prospects

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Groceries.

Montreal, April 7, 1904.

DULLNESS features the markets this week generally and the volume of business has been small. Glucose jumped up 15 cents a hundred and it now ranges from $2.75 to $3.05 for barrels, half barrels and kegs. West India molasses market reported a decline of one cent. The position of the sugar market is considered first rate. The refiners have at last yielded some concessions to the West Indian planters and peace will now reign in this somewhat disturbed section of the trade world. Asparagus is going to be very high all season as there will be no crop at all owing to the floods in California. Over 7,000 acres are under water and all the growers hope for now is to restore the land in time for the 1905 crop. Canadian pickles have stiffened a little and are notably scarce. A letter from Bordeaux, France, states that all vegetables have suffered from bad weather and frosts, so that prices for fine canned goods will range high. The recent advance in sulphur has had its effect on a very essential article, namely, matches. Eddy's common matches have gone up 30 cents a case and parlor matches 10 to 15 cents. Starch has advanced a quarter to a half a cent in sympathy, no doubt, with the advances in raw materials. Pearl sago is scarce and seed tapioca is being sold as a good substitute. Advices from Singapore continue to forecast high prices for tapioca and, if the manufacturers are doing no better than the importers, it can only be a matter of time until a decided change will take place. The position of medium and seed pearl is like flake, steady, and in fair demand. Finer grades are scarce and there is a wider margin between common and best, the reason being that as good and fine descriptions are reasonable in price, there is very little outlet for the poorer qualities. The report that the export of rice from Japan had been prohibited has been discredited, more especially as offers have been made at decidedly high prices. Teas generally are firm and in good demand.

SUGAR.

The best news is that the local refiners have informed local brokers that they would like to have them make offers and would prefer to deal with them, if satisfactory terms can be arranged, instead of buying all their sugar from the New York brokers.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

No change has taken place in the market except of course the rise in glucose which has been mentioned. Its advance is considered opportune, as it will prevent fraudulent sugar making. Demand is fair for all lines and the West Indian market declined a cent. We quote:

COFFEE.

The outlook for coffee is certainly very interesting. It is bound to be dearer for several reasons. First, judging by the way it is coming forward from the countries of production, there is known to be a decided shortage in crops. The only two places where this is not the case and where good crops are looked forward to are Mexico and Vera Paz. Compared with the demands of the world these two sources of supply are very small. From Costa Rica comes the news that the new samples are not as fine in quality as in former seasons and appear to have suffered from some unusual weather at the time of picking. The coffee market is still firm and demand is good. We quote:

TEA.

The tea market is still solid in all lines. The stocks in Japans are low and there is a tendency to hang on to what remains with a view to realizing a little more on them before the new pick comes in. Ceylons are firm, too, and steady prices are maintained. The Grocer has been informed that the abolition of the Japan tea subsidy will not stop the Japan Central Tea Traders' Association from continuing business. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

No marked improvement can be noted in the general demand. Buyers are filling their requirements on the smallest scale possible. It is difficult to convince the trade of the necessity of anticipating requirements in salmon for instance, yet it may as well be borne in mind that the statistical position of this article is stronger than it has been for years. It would be well not to allow old stocks to run too low and be forced into the market when the demand is at its best. No doubt new stocks will be considerably higher. Demand for canned meats of all kinds remains steady owing largely to the Far East orders. Golden waxed beans are out of the canners' hands entirely and only a few cases are available through jobbers, which makes the market high. All French canned vegetables are going to be high. Stocks of pines seem to be in narrow compass and as prices are unattractive some check in the consumption may be expected. Lobsters are very scarce. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Sultanas have become considerably firmer and the demand for all kinds of dried fruits has been well maintained. Demand has been good for Valencia raisins, and medium currants and prunes are going well. Complaints come from abroad that Californian prunes have been passed off for the famous French "Agen" prunes. Some French merchants at Agen itself are said to have imported California fruit and labelled it in jars or cases similar to the genuine Agen, shipping it as the actual product. This has been looked after by the French courts and stopped. We quote:

Green Fruits.

Quietly firm might be a just description of the local market. The lull after Easter has been maintained and no new features are anticipated until the Mediterranean fruit boats arrive. Reports from Burriana, Spain, show that bad weather has recently interfered with the loading. However, Saturday, April 9, will see three steamers, the Jacona, Fremona and Bellona, of the Thomson line, leave Messina with enormous cargoes of oranges and lemons for Montreal, direct. California celery has gone up 50 cents and best Floridas are bringing $5 50. Easter supplies of green fruits were laid in so abundantly that they are likely not yet exhausted. We quote :

Fish.

Haddies are much cheaper and new arrivals by express each day find brisk demand. Smelts are scarce and in fact there is a marked scarcity in all fish. Bullheads are frequently asked for and they are not available in the market even by the biggest dealers. Halibut has dropped three cents and is in fair demand. A dealer made a strange remark regarding halibut in that he thought it queer that Canadians were compelled to buy frozen halibut from Boston markets when most of the fish came from Canada. Not only that, but they have to pay duty on fish from their own country. Very little change has taken place in the markets. We quote :

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The craze for eggs has abated. Normal conditions are again ruling and the holders of high priced stock are not a little worried. As one business man put it, worry is only another form of fear. Receipts of eggs have been large but the demand was a little shy because of the big holdings prior to Easter. Down dropped the price 2 cents, then another cent, so that before many days are over eggs will be cheap. Last year at this time they were selling at 12 cents. 20 cents was the ruling price yesterday, although every day will mark a decline.

BEANS.

Demand for beans is not looked upon with great confidence as sales are chiefly in small lots. Primes sold at $1.15 and $1.50 and second grades at $1.40. Car lots of choice primes were quoted at $1.40 and second grades at $1.35.

HONEY.

The deathlike quietness of the honey market is amazing. White clover is comparatively scarce and prices ruled from 13½ to 14 cents. Extracted white clover sold at from 8½ to 9 cents in 10 lb. tins, and much less (about 7 to 7½ cents) in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat still maintains 6 and 7 cents.

POTATOES.

Fair demand has been the order for potatoes and moderate activity has been shown. Jobbing sales have been made at 75 to 80 cents a bag and in car lots at 65 to 70 cents a bag.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The receipts of maple products increased steadily each day and the demand was limited because buyers bought freely last week. Holders seemed disinclined to quote prices but no change was noted. The demand continues very active and the reports of scarcity have been dissipated by an abundant supply. We quote :

Maple syrup, in wood, per lb	0 05½	0 06

FLOUR.

Not a single new feature has been shown in the flour market. Despite the weakness in American wheat markets the local prices remain firm and unchanged. Generally speaking the market is considered quiet. We quote :

Winter wheat patents	5 10	5 25
Straight rollers	4 85	5 00

FEED.

Local millers state that the demand for shorts is increasing while bran continues in fair demand. Prices rule steady without much change. We quote:

Manitoba bran, in bags	19 00	20 00

OATMEAL.

Oatmeal remains steady and the demand is good. Rolled oats have been steady all the week, too, but some grades sold at $2.35 a bag. The demand for corn meal is fair at good prices ranging from $1.10 to $1.45 a bag. We quote :

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, April 4, 1904.

WEATHER is backward and trade is still somewhat quiet. On the whole the last four weeks have been rather disappointing. Trade kept up fairly well during January and February, but March did not come up to expectations. During last week some of the smaller railways have been again tied up. This time it was not occasioned by snow storms but by the freshets. Freights from the upper provinces have arrived more freely and the stringency in some lines of stocks has therefore been removed. The travellers are now out on their routes again after the Easter holidays, and it is hoped they will be able to report a stronger buying tendency.

The Halifax market is fairly well stocked with salmon, but the coast situation is being closely watched. Canned fish, such as finnan haddie, kippered herring, clams and scollops are getting scarce and the new pack will find a ready sale. Smoked herring are scarce and high, 14 cents being paid by the car for medium. The indications are that there will be an advance on all lines of American canned meats. Canadian meats have already been marked up. There is a strong demand at the packing houses at present as merchants are stocking up for Summer trade. The supply of canned fruits is moving out of first hands rapidly and merchants who require more in order to carry them over until the new pack comes in should not delay ordering, as there is a probability of prices being advanced. Canners apprehend short fruit crops the coming season.

A few years ago a great many tons of Nova Scotian dried apples was handled by wholesalers, but lately trade has been largely transferred to the Ontario article. This is chiefly on account of the difference in color. The local article is quite brown while in that from Ontario the natural whiteness is retained.

The wholesale grocery stock of J. Frank Crowe & Co., which was damaged by fire, is being sold this week at auction for the benefit of the underwriters. Mr. Crowe has taken up temporary quarters and will likely continue in the wholesale business, as soon as matters can be straightened out. The trading community sympathizes with Mr. Crowe in his somewhat heavy loss.

A very interesting gathering met at the residence of Mr. Ephraim Erb, to Erb & Rankin, some days ago to celebrate the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Erb. A great many presents and congratulatory telegrams were received from friends both here and in Mr. Erb's native province of Ontario. Mr. Erb is still quite active and spends a portion of each business day in his office, giving personal attention to matters requiring it. His firm conducts a brokerage business, and in addition to other lines it is selling agent for the products of the Canadian Canners, Limited.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, April 4, 1904.

FOR the past week most brilliant sunshine has prevailed and the sudden rise in temperature has cleared away much of the snow, transforming it into numerous small stretches of water throughout the country. The transportation lines, which have been so badly tied up for the past ten days, are again opening up and traffic is now moving along slowly.

The market remains a little firmer and the wholesale houses report all around trade good for the past week. There has been very little change in prices and all lines of staple groceries are firmer with the exception of starches and syrups which are advancing. The market quotes evaporated apples ½c in advance of last week and matches are a little higher, demanding 30c on the case.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—all lines are firm with the exception of evaporated apples, which are a little higher, being quoted ½c in advance of last week.

Coffee—The market is firm and No. 1 Rio is still quoted at 9¼c, but will likely advance.

Tea—The market reports prices of Japan teas and other lines unchanged.

Sugars—The market is firm, Montreal granulated being quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows $4.25.

Flour—The flour situation is practically unchanged, the demand is strong and No. 1 patent is still quoted at $2.75.

Butter—The butter demand is heavy and the market remains firm. Fresh pound prints are quoted at 25c.

Eggs—The market is a little easier and case eggs are jobbing at 26c, but we are looking for lower prices.

Cured Meats—The market remains a little firmer and slightly in advance of last week. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, breakfast bellies at 13¼c, picnic hams at 9c, shoulders at 8¾c, breakfast backs 11¼c, short rolls 10¾c, long spice rolls 11¼c, short rolls 10¾c, long dry clear 9c, and salt long clear 10c.

Lard—The market remains firm with pure lard in 50 lbs. $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 3 lb. tins $6.65, and 5 lb. tins $6.60, compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., April 4.

BUSINESS in St. John during the first quarter of the year has been extremely satisfactory, and the New Brunswick trade are looking forward with confidence to a good year. Besides the number of changes in business referred to in former reports, there are other matters of interest outside of regular business lines.

Two local tea men are in evidence in the papers, one claiming that the other made a false statement in his advertisement. The facts would seem to warrant otherwise, and the dealer who was so quick looking for trouble is likely to have little else for his pains.

Then a Western tea dealer seems inclined to question the statement made by a local man that St. John is so situated as to be in the best position of any Canadian city to do a tea business. So far the facts presented certainly favor the position taken by the St. John man.

Possibly the chief interest here at present centres in the molasses situation. As noted in our report some weeks ago, one of our large importers advertised having received a cargo of new Porto Rico molasses. Now, the representative of an American molasses company there advertises the expected arrival of the first cargo of new Porto Rico molasses. This our local man takes as a direct effort to persuade the buyers that he made a false statement in advertising his early shipment as new goods. The trouble is not over yet.

In markets there is little of particular interest. Markets on the whole do not seem as firm. Merchants have made more than ever of Easter this season in the way of window dressing.

Oil.

In burning oil the market is not so firm but there is no change in price. Sales show quite a falling off. Dealers are very busy shipping lubricating oils. The sale here is very large. In paint oils values are unchanged. Linseeds continue very low. This is the season of demand. In fish oils this is the off season. Much lower prices are quoted in best grades of cod liver oil.

Salt.

There are continued arrivals of Liverpool coarse salt, dealers being anxious to get supplies out before the Winter port boats stop. Prices are held firm. In factory filled there is a better demand as the season advances. In Canadian fine, orders for forward shipment are now being given. This salt is used very largely by our butter and cheese factories.

Green Fruit.

This has been a busy week. In apples full prices rule. There is a good sale for Western Northern Spies, at prices. Oranges are freely received, Valencias having the large sale. The low price of Californias tends to increase business in them. In lemons the low prices continue. Bananas are rather higher this Spring, and the season is now well opened. In cranberries, while price is high there is a fair sale. A few strawberries and other small lines are seen.

Dried Fruit.

There is little business in this line. Prunes have a fair sale, particularly small sizes. Raisins are dull and quite full stocks are held. Currants have a regular demand at even prices. Dates are low. In evaporated apples the market is rather firmer. First arrivals of Egyptian onions are here. The outlook is for quite firm prices. The crop is reported good, but the American market is quite bare, indicating a large demand.

Canned Goods.

Corn is the line of chief interest, owing to light supply. While tomatoes and peas are firm, there is a fair stock of both. In fruits, the market is well supplied. Blueberries are firmer. In salmon there is a good stock, except in Springs. Meats remain unchanged. Oysters are very firm. In lobsters the supply is very light. Haddies are about out of the market. Clams and scollops are now being packed.

Sugar.

There has been no change during the last week but dealers hold quite full stocks and prices are very firm. In regard to the guild, it is said the difficulty referred to last week has been arranged.

Molasses.

There is little new to report. A cargo of Porto Rico, expected, has been delayed. There is still an ample stock of old goods. In Barbadoes new goods are freely offered with prices low. The market at the island seems quite firm.

Fish.

With the close of Lent there is perhaps less demand, particularly for fresh fish. Stocks are light, though Gaspereaux are being more freely received. Dry fish are still very high and scarce. A few are being received but only fair quality. In smoked herring the market is about bare. Pickled herring are high with light demand.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

In flour, sales have not been as active. There is a feeling favoring lower prices.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., April 2.

A MOST interesting visitor in the city this week was Mr. T. de Schryver, of Auckland, New Zealand, who represents the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in that colony. Mr. de Schryver arrived on the R.M.S. Moana from Sydney, Australia. Among other things he speaks of most interestingly is that very fact that he came by way of Australia, and that all goods had to be shipped from here to New Zealand, via Australia or via New York. He points out that a direct line is a vital necessity if the Dominion wishes to build up the trade it is possible to secure with New Zealand.

"The people of New Zealand are more than willing and cordial in their desire to enter into closer trade relations with Canada," said Mr. de Schryver. "That is very evident from the preferential tariff enacted by the Legislature of New Zealand and coming into force last November. Briefly the new tariff places a duty of 25 per cent. on Canadian goods while other goods have to pay 37 1-2 per cent. The United States is, of course, Canada's great competitor in the race for trade with New Zealand, and such a difference in duty to be paid, gives the Dominion a great advantage. The next thing is to give a direct steamship serivice, if only a freight cargo line at first. But the Dominion Government should see that some line is given assistance at once."

As Mr. de Schryver goes east direct from here, he will be able to talk to Canadian manufacturers and exporters direct, and tell them where they are at fault in their shipping and in other ways. Perhaps those who have had the benefit of Mr. de Schryver's aid in promoting trade with New Zealand do not require to have it emphasized that there are some very grave errors made in the manner of shipping. From what your correspondent could learn from him, it would appear that this arises largely from the fact that many manufacturers are used to a shipping trade entirely by rail and to local or nearby points only.

The difference in shipments by steamer for an ocean voyage, and especially when a rail trip of some length precedes the shipment, is very great. In this perhaps the manufacturer and shippers will find the chief seat of the trouble, which there has naturally been in many details, apparently trifling in themselves, but causing vexatious delays and even losses in some instances.

Four carloads of Washington State grown nursery stock arrived in Vancouver the past week for delivery to fruit growers here. The inspector of fruit for the province, Mr. T. Cunningham, says that most of the stock was really fine and well adapted to setting out here, being from a similar soil and climate. But he points out the big opening there is here for nurserymen to engage in the business of supplying the trade of the province which is growing every year. These four cars alone would, roughly speaking, have kept some $30,000 in the country and helped to build up an industry at the same time.

In northern affairs, business is fairly quiet from a shipping point of view, stocks having been got forward pretty well before the opening of navigation which will be in the next six or eight weeks. Meantime not much will go out for shipment north until stocks begin to move in readiness for the first down-river shipments to Dawson from White Horse. Many Atlin men are arriving now to go in for the season. One company, the Spruce Creek Power Co., will install a $150,000 hydraulic plant on that creek. The British American Dredging Co., which installed the biggest dredge in the north, last season, will put in another this year. It, too, will be on Spruce Creek, the first having been on Pine. Mr. O. T. Switzer, engineer for the company, is in Vancouver on his way in. The materials for this dredge will be shipped from here, as were those for the other last year.

Heavy shipments of canned salmon went out to-day on the C.P.R. ss. Tartar for Japan. She carried in her cargo nearly 1,200 tons of salmon, equal to 40,000 cases. Only half of this was supplied by local canners, the rest having been shipped from Puget Sound. With a few more orders, the stocks held here will be all cleaned up, even to the pack of humpbacks which was a new line and partly an experiment.

The historical fish of the Indians of British Columbia is not the salmon as popular belief has it, but the oolachan, a little oily fish, sometimes called the candle fish, for it will, when dried, burn like "fat pine." The Indian tribes up the coast still cling to their aboriginal habits and seek each season their supply of this fish in the fiords and deep indentations of the northern coast of British Columbia, where the fish run. This year hardly an oolachan has been caught owing to rough weather. The canoes of the Indians were not able to face the fierce gales which have tossed the waters of even quiet landlocked bays and inlets.

Opinion is divided on the granting of fish trap licenses by the Dominion Government. The fishermen are against it and the canners of Fraser River are in the main opposed to the granting of any privilege which will have a tendency to destroy the industry on that river, but nearly all are of the opinion that the locations on the west coast of Vancouver Island, where it is intended to place the traps, will be found too rough to be successful. It is looked on in the light of an experiment, and therefore it is hardly getting the active opposition which otherwise might be aroused. There is but very little opposition to the sentiment expressed by Hon. Mr. Prefontaine in the House, that the Canadians may as well trap their own Fraser River fish as sit by and see the United States canners do it for them.

The cargo of the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Japan, which reached port last night from the Orient, included very heavy shipments of Indian and Japan teas, rice and Chinese provisions.

The rice situation locally hardly warrants the import of any great quantity just now. The fact is there was a war scare at first, which sent rice sky-rocketing until the local quotation was $102 per ton, cleared. At that price retailers, who had been caught short, bought for fear they would be caught shorter. Then down tumbled the price at least $10 per ton, and now it is even quoted at $90 cleared, per ton. Everyone is loaded up, and some individuals are by no means happy.

Another shipment of note arriving by the Empress of Japan last night was a considerable consignment of tinned pineapples from India, a rather unusual article of import from that country.

Groceries—Sugar went up an eighth of a cent this morning. That makes the B. C. Sugar Refinery's local quotation at 5c per lb, base, for granulated, with other grades raised in proportion.

Canned vegetables are quoted now a little higher. Peas, corn and beans are $1.15 per dozen and tomatoes, $1.50.

Produce—Local fresh eggs are almost dominating the market now. Shipments north are very light and therefore importations from California have dropped off. Prices are also rather high just now at San Francisco. The local quotation is firm at 25c per dozen for local fresh though there were some bought at 23c a few days ago.

Butter is still scarce, and not much really first-class finds its way to the market. The importations from California are still made, until eastern shipments arrive and until the local make begins to come up, which it has not done yet this Spring.

Fruits—The first arrivals of pineapples from Australia were brought on the steamer Moana. They were very fine, so far as they were left in condition, but evidently they were shipped overripe. Many of them had to be thrown out. Pines will stand up under the voyage across the equator, if shipped green enough. These first Australian pines are selling at $3.50 to $5 as to size per dozen. Some Australian cocoanuts were also received by this steamer. They were rather small and of course meet with competition at this season.

Oranges are firming up in San Francisco markets, although prices here are still low. Quotations on all lines are unchanged this week.

Rhubarb from California is now grown in open air and is thus lower in price, the quotation being now 8 to 10c per lb.

Vegetables—A big lot of Australian onions arrived by the Moana for local and Seattle houses. The local stocks will not more than suffice for orders for northern shipment. At this season the shipments are being taken out of the wooden crates usually used and put in double sacking to protect them from danger of frost. It is an item to be noted in Yukon trade that onions are always very much in demand in the vegetable line, easily taking place next to potatoes, which are the best vegetable sellers in the north. The trade are very particular and take none but the best. In other lines of vegetables there is not much change to note, except that asparagus is down to 12 and 15c per lb.

ADVANCE IN PRICE OF MATCHES AND STARCH.

Among variations for the week in groceries and grocers' sundries on the Toronto market is an advance of 15c in parlor matches and of 30c in common sulpnur matches, also an advance of ½c per lb. on No. 2 cornstarch and of ¼c per lb. on all but gloss, enamel and rice starch.

FRUIT COMMISSION AGENT DEAD.

THE GROCER regrets to record the sudden death of V. B. Badalamenti-Dina, of Toronto, which occurred on Friday, April 1. Mr. Dina was sales agent for the Canada-Jamaica Steamship Co., and the Canadian representative for a number of lemon and orange growers in Italy, among whom might be mentioned F. Tracuzzi, of Messina, G. Badalamenti & Co., and Natale Lo Cicero, both of Palermo. In addition Mr. Dina represented several Italian produce and macaroni firms.

Mr. Dina began business in Toronto about four years ago as a retail fruit dealer at the corner of Alexander and Yonge streets. After a couple of successful years he decided to devote his attention to the lemon trade exclusively, and secured several prominent agencies, among which were those mentioned above. The outcome was eminently satisfactory, for Mr. Dina during the last two years was able to establish a wide connection in the Canadian trade, particularly in Ontario. Toronto fruit merchants were large customers, and in addition he sold extensively to Ottawa, Hamilton and London fruit men.

CATALOGUES, BOOKLETS, ETC.

The Grocer is in receipt of an attractive pictorial magazine, published monthly by the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio. The literary contributions written by prominent American newspaper men, and numerous illustrations, combine to give practical emphasis to the twentieth century enterprise on the part of this business firm.

JOHN A. GUNN DUPED.

MR. JOHN A. GUNN, of Gunn, Langlois & Co., of Montreal, is receiving messages of condolence from his numerous friends all over the country. The fact is he has been the victim of a confidence man.

On the morning of Easter Monday a prepossessing looking young man entered the office of Gunn, Langlois & Co., and introduced himself to Mr. Gunn as Mr. Henry F. Simons, of the firm of Messrs. G. W. Martin & Brother, produce dealers, of New York. Letters and other credentials were presented and, withal, the man was so engaging in manner that Mr. Gunn was completely taken in. So much so that when Mr. Simons wanted a little money Mr. Gunn readily responded to the request and, because it was a bank holiday, cashed his check for $500.

The pair then had luncheon at Freeman's and later wended their way to the Windsor hotel. The stranger conversed most entertainingly on a variety of interesting subjects. At length, explaining that he had to look after some luggage at the station, he took his departure and Mr. Gunn saw him no more. Suspicions were aroused and Mr. Gunn called up New York, only to find that the real Mr. Simons had never left his office in that city.

A. E. Cowan, grocer, Ottawa, is retiring from business. Mr. Cowan may be considered as one of the pioneer grocers of Ottawa, having been established since 1869.

A. E. Brown, Salisbury, N.B., has started a grocery in connection with his lumber mill. This Spring he will build a first-class new store in order to be able to handle a rapidly increasing trade.

Has stood the test of every climate.

STREET HUCKSTERS.

WAR has been declared in Montreal against the street hawker, and if appeals to the city council from certain quarters are successful his long peculiar drawl will in all probability be heard no more. The aggrieved may be divided into two classes; one is the Retail Grocers' Association, the other is represented by finnicky citizens who say too much noise is created by the huckster. Grocers claim that the street seller of fruit interferes with trade which should pass through their hands.

Only the other day three petitions were presented to the mayor of Montreal containing ten thousand names. These lists were supplemented by the opinions of wholesale fruit dealers, farmers, gardeners and citizens in regard to the selling of fruit on the street, with a view to modifying a by-law it is proposed to pass which would simply erase the huckster from the business community. Wholesale fruit men declare candidly that the huckster if he be an evil, is one of the necessary variety. If he disappears, so will a large proportion of their business. One firm goes so far as to say that the huckster in indespensable, and substantiate their statement by the fact that surplus stock caused by overloading and other reasons can be disposed of to the hawker. The middleman in turn realizes a good profit by selling from door to door, and the consumer is better served than in any other way.

Farmers and market gardeners claim that at least three-quarters of the vegetables sold in Montreal are sold direct from the wagon, either by themselves or by city pedlars who make a business of it. They further claim that the grocers cannot meet the demand nor can they accommodate the public in this particular connection. Citizens also made a strong plea for the retention of the street man. They argue that if the grocer gets control of the trade higher prices will rule and the general public suffer.

On the other hand the Grocers' Association are after the huckster hot foot. They say he must go, and dwell upon the immense revenue of $100,000 paid into the civic treasury by the grocers of Montreal for protection from the small trader whose license for peddling is only a trifle. Great influence is being brought to bear from both sides and the issue will occupy general interest.

Several prominent fruit merchants were asked with respect to the quality of fruit sold to hucksters as a rule, and were unanimous in stating that it is usually the best in its class. This fact they emphasize by the argument that the hawker is a keen fellow as a rule and could never keep his trade if he sold imperfect goods.

Biscuits And Confectionery

Easter Confectionery Trade.

THE Easter season just past was a record one for the manufacturers of confectionery. Manufacturers prepared for this occasion on an elaborate and extensive scale, and were well supported by the retail trade, particularly in Toronto and Montreal. The windows of prominent grocers and confectioners suggested the Christmas season and gave quite a Christmas atmosphere to the shops. Easter as a season for gift-giving is receiving much attention from tradespeople in a great variety of lines, with much profit to them. The gladsome note that accompanies Easter finds fitting expression in gift-giving, and confectionery is always in order when gifts are a subject for consideration.

Co-Operative Association Buys Bakery.

"For some time past," says the Guelph Herald, "it has been felt that a company in Guelph for the manufactuer of cheaper bread was a dire necessity." The Trades and Labor Council have already taken the matter up and stock has been subscribed to the amount of $1,500. As part of the scheme, the Guelph Co-Operative Association have purchased the bakery business of Powell & Co., and will take possession April 15.

A Fine New Factory.

A FINE new factory for the manufacture of biscuits of all descriptions has just been completed by C. Dignard & Co., at 245 Delorimier avenue, Montreal. The premises cover about 130x50 feet in area, and the fact that as many as 80 hands are employed will give some idea of the size of the establishment. The new machinery installed enables the factory to use at least 70 barrels of flour per day. The services of T. Tinnock, an expert biscuit maker well known throughout the Canadian trade, have been engaged, and grocers and confectioners may expect to see even a higher class of goods turned out by this well known firm than in the past.

CONFEDERATION AT LAST.

CONFEDERATION of Canada and Newfoundland is at hand. So The Grocer was informed by a letter shown it from England, which stated that it is expected that a renewal of negotiations officially for the entry of Newfoundland into the Canadian confederation will be an early sequel to the Anglo-French understanding now almost completed between Lord Lansdowne and M. Delcasse. Three million francs is thought to be reasonable compensation for the dispossessed French lobster factories on the treaty shore. It is understood that Newfoundland will be expected to concede to Canadian fishermen whatever fishing and bait rights are given to French fishermen under new arrangements. It may be added that the existence of the French shore question has been the chief obstacle in the way of confederation negotiations between Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government and the Government at St. John's.

WAR ON CANNED TOMATOES.

ANILINE dyes have been discovered in certain canned tomatoes on sale in Montreal, and as a result action has been taken against two firms, one a United States, the other a Canadian firm. The importance of the actions is based in the fact that they are taken under the Federal Act which gives the city power to prosecute for fraud. The nature of the charges formerly allowed under the Provincial Act was to prove that aniline was a coloring that was injurious to health. This is the first time procedure has been taken under the Federal Act and will have far-reaching results. Dr. Laberg, Medical Health Officer for Montreal, is taking the actions.

WATERLESS MILK.

WATERLESS milk is an article the average urban housewife has long been looking for. The Milk Products Co., with factory at Brownsville, Oxford Co., and head office in Toronto, is about to place a milk on the Canadian market which is certainly waterless. It is known as Lactomen and is in the form of a crystaline powder. There is no sugar or other preservative in the product which is claimed to be simply ordinary fresh milk from which all the water has been eliminated. It is perfectly soluble in water and is in very convenient form, one pound making a gallon of milk. W. Whitman is in charge of the Toronto office, which is situated in the Mail Building, and is very optimistic as to the outlook. The Canadian market will first be exploited, but in addition to this a large export trade is counted on.

ENGLISH MANUFACTURERS INTERESTED IN CANADA.

We understand that representatives of the following English firms are now either on their way to or are in Canada at the present time: W. G. Nixey, blackleads, blues, etc.; E. & T. Pink, marmalade, jams, preserved peel, etc.; Chivers & Son, table jellies; Gebhardt & Co., "Bananina" and banana food preparations. Mr. L. H. Roberts represents W. G. Nixey and Chivers & Son; and Mr. Cooper E. & T. Pink and Gebhardt & Co.

A HANDSOME EASTER GREETING BLOTTER AD.

Many flattering remarks have been passed this week on the unique and decidedly fine Easter Greeting of Chase & Sanborn in The Grocer of last week. The design of the firm's Seal Trade Mark, bordered by a cluster of Easter lilies is a very artistic one, and the whole in natural colors was a fine conception. Chase & Sanborn have sent to their host of customers in all parts of Canada a set of blotters bound by an exact fac simile of The Grocer ad., and the quiet and artistic Easter greeting of this Canadian coffee house will no doubt be appreciated by their friends. If any have been overlooked a postal card will bring a set.

OFF TO "AULD SCOTIA."

Mr. Alex. Anderson, of the Japan Central Tea Trading Association, left Montreal last Friday for an extended trip to his old home in Scotland. Mr. Anderson, who is well known to the tea trade of Montreal, certainly deserves a good holiday and no doubt will enjoy to the full the time he has laid out for himself among his friends in "Auld Scotia." It is 20 years since he left the old land, and though he is a thoroughly good Canadian, the love for the land o' the heather has drawn him away at last. "Sandy," as he is familiarly known to his friends in the trade, has the best wishes of his numerous friends and customers for an enjoyable holiday, and The Grocer hopes to see him return full of kind thoughts for the old land and love for his adopted home. During his absence Mr. Anderson will make his headquarters at Brechin, Scotland.

WEST INDIA SUGAR AND CANADA.

THAT the complaints of the West Indian sugar planters regarding the Canadian refiners had some justification has been amply proven by statements made by the refiners themselves. Naturally, of course, some confusion has been occasioned by the refusal of large business establishments like the Canada and St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries to tell their business secrets.

Two weeks ago The Grocer endeavored to show the position of the planters in the British West Indies and their attitude towards Canadian refiners. To put it simply, The Grocer stated that the Canadian refiners had agreed together to pay only the New York prices minus the United States duty for bright grainy grocery sugars from the Indies.

Mr. Theodore Labatt of the St. Lawrence refinery stated that the complaints of West India planters were unfounded. However, he went on to say that everything was all right now and the planters had been made happy.

When asked to explain his meaning he said that all the pamphlets and circulars re cutting off supplies, etc., that had been sent to the Indies were no doubt prompted by some Canadian brokers, based on the presumption that the refiners were going to continue to pay as they had been doing all Winter. He would not say what that price was, but he said it was changed now. When shown a letter from a planter dated as recently as March 19, which stated "Even with $\frac{1}{8}$ or $\frac{1}{2}$ of the preferential tariff our planters stand about 24 cents worse off than the Cuban producer," Mr. Labatt did not deny that the statement was approximately correct. In fact he evaded the direct reply by saying that it was caused by the American preference.

"Is it true that Canadian refiners have made an arrangement with brokers either in Canada or United States whereby they pay the same price as that which rules in New York?"

"We have made arrangements with no one," was the reply.

"Have the Canadian refiners refused to make offers to Canadian brokers for West Indian sugar?"

"We never make offers to anyone; brokers make offers to us."

After further cross examination which was pleasantly exchanged between Mr. Labatt and a Grocer representative, an unvarnished confession was made. Mr. Labatt thought it would just be as well not to say anything for publication but in a nutshell said that the actual and possible grievances which had been voiced in the press were caused by a presumption that the refiners were not going to treat the West Indies fairly regarding the preference. All that had been fixed up and no more would be heard of the alleged wrong treatment. Canadian brokers had always been given a chance and the refiners would prefer to deal with them if they could get satisfactory terms. They expected to do an extensive business through Maritime Province points and also direct with Montreal.

Mr. Parker, of the Canada Sugar Refinery, gave his opinion in the absence of the president, Hon. G. A. Drummond. He simply supported Mr. Labatt's contentions and further stated that only that day a local broker had been told that they would prefer dealing with the brokers if they would only come to terms and make some offers.

Some brokers were called upon and they claimed that the action of the refiners would be welcome news to the West Indians and would have a beneficial effect on the reciprocal relationship of all trade with the Indies this year. It may be added that brokers are not in a position to speak out as strongly as they might feel, as it is not their policy to in any way antagonize the refiners.

In connection with the diversion of West Indian sugar to the English market, which certainly was what the Canadian refiners were doing, it is interesting to note that cane sugar has again hardened in price in the Cuban market. Why? Simply because the huge trusts are enviously watching the sugar of Java, the Indies and Peru going away from America and they naturally will keep prices high with a view to attracting these sugars to them again.

The following crop report is from the Journal des Fabricants de Sucre, and shows how European growers are getting along:

"The weather has been fine and dry in France, and the growers wish this to continue for the benefit of the Spring work, which is rather behind-hand. As regards beet roots, the growers know the favorable influence of a good preparation of the soil and of early sowings and weedings, so that they are hastening to benefit by the fine weather in preparing the land for the seed. A reduction of 10 to 15 per cent. on the area sown last year is generally expected. Abroad, the growers, for want of fine weather, have not been able to do much; the contracts for new beet are still going on, but the result is still very uncertain. Mr. O. Licht provisionally expects from the whole of Europe a diminution of 125,000 to 135,000 hectares, or 8 per cent. on the average superficie of last year, which was 1,747,814 hectares against 1,766,578 hectares in 1902, 1,962,685 hectares in 1901, and 1,843,142 hectares in 1900."

TRADE OF THE ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

THE following table, which is the most recent compiled by the collector of customs at Bloemfontein, shows the value of some of the articles imported into the Orange River Colony during the quarter ended September 30, 1903, as compared with the corresponding period of 1902:

Articles.	Qr. ended 30th Sept., 1902.	Qr. ended 30th Sept., 1903.
Corn and grain (includes rice)....	£17,000	£35,000
Articles of food and drink.....	80,000	55,000
South African produce.....	31,000	50,000
Tobacco of all kinds.....	5,000	6,000
Cocoa, chocolate and confy.....	7,000	5,000
Soap and candles	5,000	5,000
Provisions, oilman's stores, etc..	8,000	5,000

The total value of the goods exported from the Orange River Colony in the quarter ended 30th September, 1903, was £237,000, as compared with £36,000 in the quarter ended 30th September, 1902. Of the former total £1,000 worth were sent to Natal, £203,000 worth to Cape Colony and £24,000 worth to Basutoland. The remaining £9,000 worth going to the Transvaal.

THE CREAM OF TARTAR ALARM.

GROCERS are somewhat alarmed over the report from London to the effect that some arsenic had been found in some cream of tartar. Action was taken at once by the London grocers to discover the cause and it was suspected that the manufacturers of it had used a poor quality of sulphuric acid and the impurity of that would necessitate the presence of arsenic. Retailers would do well to be sure to enquire of their wholesaler as to the quality of his cream of tartar. Cream of tartar is used so much in the manufacture of baking powder that such discovery in London, for instance, is very important, even though so far away. Bellhouse, Dillon & Co., who are agents for the American Cream of Tartar Co., New York, stated that they made a point of absolute purity in their refining process and no such thing as arsenic in the stock could happen. At least it would never reach the trade. Their system was practically impregnable. At any rate they had not been informed of the London episode nor did they anticipate any trouble from it.

GREEN FRUITS

Apple Trade With France.

A REPORT of considerable interest to Canadians was brought up recently at a meeting of the Chambre de Commerce in Montreal. It was incidental to a French-Canadian direct steamship line and covered a suggestion regarding the shipment of Canadian apples to France. The points discussed involved the fact that many Canadian apples found their way to France by a very circuitous route and one that was of no advantage to the producer of these fine fruits which made such an impression on the European at the recent Paris Expositions. Large quantities of apples were being shipped in bond to Europe via New York and they had been as a rule bought in Canada by agents for American shippers. A special committee was appointed to investigate this subject and will report to this body at its next meeting.

Easter Beurre for Export.

IN his bulletin on the "Export Pear Trade," W. A. MacKinnon, chief of the fruit division, Ottawa, the Easter Beurre has been recommended as one of the pears most in demand in Great Britain at the present time. Market reports just received from London show that California Easters have been selling remarkably well recently and it seems as if Canadian growers might with advantage undertake to raise this variety extensively and place it upon the British market during the Winter months. While the Easter Beurre is not at present largely grown in Canada, its value for export should induce growers to give it a fair test in order to ascertain if it is suitable for general culture.

Rare Fruits.

THE island of Jolo covers fully 320 square miles. It is of coral formation and offers a most excellent harbor to the west. In topography it is gently undulating and covered throughout its entire length by the rankest tropical vegetation, valuable teakwood being found extensively throughout the entire district. Nowhere in the world are more luscious fruits produced. Among those peculiar to this belt is the durian, which is about the size of a muskmelon. Its exterior presents somewhat the appearance of a chestnut burr, being prickly and tough, within, the fruit is white and cheese-like, and owing to this peculiarity the American soldiers dubbed it "the vegetable limberger." The mangosteen is another of the rare fruits. It is the size of an average orange, chocolate colored and has a very brittle skin. Inside, four white sections contain a colorless liquid. This is the rarest fruit known.

Canadian Apples in Great Britain.

A REPORT of P. B. Ball, Birmingham, to the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce contains some concrete information concerning the apple market which it would be well for Canadian exporters to remember for their benefit another year. Referring to the shape of the barrels in which apples have been shipped, a matter which this year has shown more variation than usual owing to scarcity, he says, that the fruit seems to arrive in perceptibly better condition when barrels with large bilges are used. The fruit seems to pack better, and to withstand bruising better than in those of flatter shape. Numerous boxes have made their apearance but, adds Mr. Ball, he has not seen the proper box. Many of them were of 1-4-inch material, with the corners glued and tightly packed, but they are not sufficiently durable to stand transportation. A box containing 50 pounds of apples, and made rather larger and wider than deep, so there would be a good surface for exposure, would be, he considers, a good design. Only the very highest grades should be sent in boxes. Another thing Mr. Ball animadverts upon is the tendency of Canadians to ship large quantities of apples just before Christmas. When they judiciously arrange with customers in various sections of Great Britain, and make regular shipments to them of, say, 500 barrels weekly, they can realize far more than by sending in congested lots. At the end of February it is almost impossible to purchase Canadian apples in the markets.

Mr. Ball has no doubt that 10,000 barrels per week could be easily placed among the different towns in the Birmingham district alone. But he wants to impress upon shippers the fact that no fruit is too good for such a market. One barrel of good, well-packed apples will bring just as much as two barrels of inferior or carelessly packed, and the freight of say 5s. per barrel is exactly the same in either case.

Hybrid Fruits Produced.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA growers have successfully crossed the raspberry and the blackberry and produced the luscious Logan berry, which has the size and shape of the blackberry with the raspberry flavor. The cantaloupe has been crossed with the watermelon and an excellent new melon is the result. They have recently produced a thin skin, seedless orange that is becoming justly famous. Heretofore, the California orange has been somewhat unfavorably regarded, because of its extremely thick skin, although the original production of a seedless orange must be credited to California. Now we have the thin-skinned seedless product.

Quite as recently the growers have achieved a great victory in the developing of an absolutely stoneless plum, after many years of experiment in California and elsewhere. All of these new and most desirable fruit and melon varieties are now being grown in large quantities, and will soon have precedence in the world's markets.

Fruit From Cape Colony.

Cape Colony promises to supply Great Britain and the colonies in the future with an ample supply of Winter fruit which has not been obtainable in the past, such as plums, pears and nectarines.

Banana Crop Every Fifteen Days.

BY way of correcting an erroneous idea concerning the harvesting of the banana crop a Southern planter says: "A crop is harvested on an average every fifteen days throughout the year. Each thrifty banana plant has many suckers or stalks growing from a single root at the same time. One or more bunches of the ripening fruit is cut from a single stalk, while the other stalks growing from the same root are left untouched, and in fifteen days another of the stalks is shorn from its fruit. This process continues incessantly during the year. In July and August it is necessary to cut off the ripening bunches every ten days, while in December and January about once a month is sufficient, the average throughout the year being practically fifteen days."

Leamington Fruit Damaged

Leamington fruit growers say that the Winter frosts have been hard on peaches. Of the tender varieties nearly all the buds were killed, and one grower found all his late Crawford buds frost killed, and it is doubtful whether many of the trees are not also destroyed. What with frost, scale and the increase of insects, due to the wanton destruction of birds, the fruit interest is sadly handicapped.

Fruit Industry in Demerara?

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company have announced that if sufficient inducements are offered they will include Demerara, British Guiana, in the itinerary of their proposed fast fruit steamers. It is admitted on all hands that the country is an ideal one for fruit production, especially for the cultivation of bananas. At the same time there is a considerable lack of the class of people in British Guiana who would make such an industry a success. In all probability prominent citizens of the colony will interest themselves in the project, and with the assistance of the Government, take steps to bring it to a successful issue as they have already succeeded in doing with the sugar industry.

New Apple for Manitoba and Northwest.

The director of experimental farms at Ottawa announces that an apple tree has been found which will withstand the rigors of the Manitoba and Northwest Winters. It is brought about by crossing the Duchess or Wealthy varieties with a crab apple, and although the fruit will not be large it will nevertheless be admirably adapted for domestic use. In the course of a couple of years it is hoped sufficient quantities will be produced to place in the hands of nurserymen for distribution to Manitoba farmers.

"BLUE NOSE."

PROF. G. W. MURRAY, Oxon., writing in Montreal Star of Saturday, April 2nd, regarding the origin of the expression "Blue-Nose" as applied to the people of the Maritime Provinces, makes the following remarks :

Blue-Nose is undoubtedly a nick-name popularly given to an inhabitant of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick. There are several explanations of the origin of the term. One says that the name was applied from the effect upon the more prominent parts of the face of the raw easterly winds, and long-continued fogs, which prevail in these provinces. Others assert that its use is accounted for by the custom among certain tribes of painting the nose blue as a punishment for a crime against chastity. This account, which is mentioned by Mr. W. A. Wheeler, M. A., in his book on "Noted Names," we at once dismiss, from respect to the inhabitants of the Dominion's lower provinces. We prefer to accept the explanation offered by "Sam Slick," (the pseudonym of Judge Haliburton), who writes as follows: "Pray, sir, said one of my fellow passengers, 'can you tell me why the Nova Scotians are called Blue-Noses ?'

" 'It is the name of a potato,' said I, 'which they produce in great perfection, and boast to be the best in the world. The Americans have, in consequence, given them the nick-name of Blue-Noses.' "

Again, from the same author : "Do you know the reason monkeys are no good ? Because they chatter all day long—so do the niggers—and so do the Blue-Noses, of Nova Scotia."

In Sir George Simpson's "Overland Journey," vol. 1, page 19, we read : "After a run of fourteen days we entered the harbour of Halifax, amid the hearty cheers of a large number of Blue-Noses."

Readers of The Grocer will no doubt find this explanation interesting, particularly the large number of subscribers in the provinces "down by the sea." Possibly some of them may have other explanations of the name to offer. If so the editor of The Grocer will be glad to receive them.

STICKERS ON BREAD.

SOME action is likely to be taken in Montreal regarding the use of stickers on bread. Every grocer will be interested in the action because it is a step towards having more rigid inspection of the sanitary method of pasting stickers which quote weight and quality on bread. Only one inspector is employed and when two bakers were recently sentenced for omitting these stickers the judge presiding made some strong remarks. He wanted to know what method was employed by the bakers to fasten the stickers on the crust of the bread. How was it done? Was the same method used as for postage stamps? Were there any precautions as to antiseptic treatment of the stickers or the gum that might be on them? All these questions seemed to dumbfound the inspector, although he explained that the heat of fresh loaves softened the gum.

The judge advised that the inspector should get a horse and cover the city much more thoroughly than he had been doing by the street cars, mentioning that the city was in great peril of having tubercular diseases spread by this very simple method. He added that too much precaution could not be taken by the bakers.

COLOMBO AS A TEA BLENDING MART.

COLOMBO does not want to become the world's tea-blending mart for the reason that it may imperil the tea industry of Ceylon, of which it is the metropolis. A duty of 25 cents, Ceylon money, is now put on all teas entering Ceylon excepting India tea, which is admitted on the same terms that Ceylon is in India. It appears that blenders would have all teas admitted free, especially China and Java, and the fear is that with the duty removed there would be no "real safe-guards against common, rubbishy tea from other countries, which has been refused by the authorities in the United States, being trans-shipped to be blended, say in the proportion of 6 to 1, and sent away to different parts of the world, packed either in chests or lead packets, with labels affixed calculating to lead the public to believe that the contents are all, or largely, composed of, Ceylon tea."

The Ceylon Times says : "We do not question the increase of Colombo business which would result from merchants doing the world's blending here; but we remain convinced that it is not in the interests of the planting community to allow China the smallest facility that can be witheld. We have waived our objection to letting in India tea at the same ad valorem rate as Ceylon tea enters India, solely on the condition that we can retain the 25 cent duty against China. If this cannot be done there must be no concession to our Indian neighbors. Their interests are not always the same as ours, and their keenness to get into Colombo makes some of us doubtful whether we should admit them even with a proviso that has hitherto presented an effective obstacle."

For the sake of temporary profit a few would spoil the name of any good thing and if Ceylon teas were to become rubbishy one can well imagine the fate of that tea in the world's markets. Ceylon tea has built up for itself a most enviable reputation, and it were a pity to undo all that has been done just to enable Colombo to achieve fame as a tea blending port—a plan moreover that does not contemplate improving the world's tea taste but rather to spoil a good thing with adulteration of trash.

Export of Flour.

SOME of the big Canadian millers are not very well pleased over a certain statement sent to various large centres regarding flour for export, and which appeared in last week's issue of The Grocer. It emanated from Manchester, Eng., and went on to say that if Canadian millers wished to help the flour supply they could easily do so. The first thing necessary, however, was that the grades should be separated and shipped so as to meet similar grades in the Old Country, where they were accustomed to a sharp and considerable difference between "patents" used for the best bread and bakers or XX for the ordinary seconds quality. High colored flours were desirable. The percentage with which they should be mixed was as follows: 30 per cent., first patents; 15 per cent., second patents; 40 per cent., bakers or XX; 15 per cent., common or X. The word "patent" would not be used there for any grade much below 30 per cent. The relative charge for on flour, as against wheat should be carefully looked to, so that the wheat exported should not be favored at the expense of the miller.

These statements were shown to a couple of the leading millers in Montreal. "It's practically nonsense," said one of them. "Englishmen buy from samples and know the Canadian standard well. If a flour is a 'patent' it must come up to a certain standard to merit that name. Old Country millers are the kings of blenders and of course it would be easier for them to blend flour if the grading were done here." He explained, however, that it was a common thing for steamships to prefer wheat as cargo to flour since any manufactured article came in for a different freight. Wheat for instance could be taken by a steamer in ballast and thus was often taken as a cargo when flour was lying on the wharf. Everyone in the milling business knew that for certain brans and residue the British miller had an advantage by having good demand at his mill doors. It was further stated that no Canadian miller was likely to give for publication the percentages of blends as that was the secret of the milling business.

Grand Trunk Pacific and Carriage of Wheat.

CONCERNING the transportation of grain from the Canadian West to the Atlantic seaboard, the Winnipeg Free Press says that with three railways hauling wheat to the lakes during the busy Fall season the amount of wheat going out by the lake-and-rail route will greatly increase in volume, though owing to the growth in Western acreage we question whether the percentage of the whole season's crop handled in this manner will ever be higher than it is now. The freezing up of the lakes will always find a very considerable proportion of the crop still in the interior; and it is this wheat that the Grand Trunk Pacific, with its low grades and thorough equipment, will carry forward through the winter months to the seaboard on terms that will be profitable to the railway company and advantageous to the Western grower of wheat. Between the lake-and-rail shipments over the Grand Trunk Pacific and Grand Trunk systems in the Fall and the all-rail shipments during the Winter season the new road will handle an enormous quantity of wheat. With the Grand Trunk added to the C N. R. and the C. P. R. we shall have in the West a railway service that will actually meet the necessities of the public.

Government to Grade the Seeds.

IT is reported that the Minister of Agriculture will secure this session the adoption of legislation by the Dominion Government to place commerce in agricultural seeds on a better and more legitimate basis.

There is abundant information to show that the seed trade has been an exceedingly fruitful medium for the spread of noxious weeds throughout Canada. An endeavor is being made to suppress this evil as far as practicable. The seeds of many species of noxious weeds are very small and difficult to detect among grass, clover, and other small agricultural seed and it has been considered wise to make provision in the bill for uniform grading of the principal grass and clover seed sold in Canada, so that those which are represented to be of best quality will not contain seed of the several species of noxious weeds that are named in this bill. Seed merchants, as a rule, are unable to identify the noxious impurities in the seed they sell, and in consequence many of the existing evils of the trade are brought about unwittingly on their part. In order to assist them, the Minister has distributed to seed dealers samples of noxious and useful seeds, so that they may be able to detect any species of weed seed that are present as impurities.

Northwest Wheat Crop.

The Department of Agriculture has issued its final bulletin on the crop of 1903 for the Northwest Territories. The total yield of wheat was 16,111,569 bushels, or only 600,000 less than was estimated in the last bulletin issued on September 1, 1903, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather conditions which afterwards prevailed. On the other hand oats went better than estimated by 800,000 bushels, and barley by 600,000 bushels. Of the great wheat growing district, the Regina Moosejaw district, has the highest average for the past six years, the average yield having been 22.10 bushels to the acre. The estimated crop area for 1904 is placed roughly at 1,706,100 acres, as against 1,383,434 last year, an increase of over 300,000 acres.

Canadian Wheat in England.

On representation from the National Millers' Association of the United Kingdom that English wheats were becoming weak, a consignment from the experimental farms of Canada, consisting of Red Fife, Preston and Percy, was shipped to England. This seed was planted, and at the last meeting of the Millers' Association it was announced that good crops had been secured, and that the flour graded on an average 80 per cent. for baking, as against only 60 per cent. for the English product.

Cereals in Canada and the United States.

The following statistics of the comparative yield of cerals per acre in Canada and the United States have been prepared. In 1903 Canada produced 80,000,000 bushels of grain, as against 601,821,000 bushels in the United States. The average yield per acre in the United States was 13.53 bushels; in Ontario, 31; in Manitoba, 20 bushels.

Beat All Past Records.

A despatch from Sydney, N.S.W., dated March 31 says: The work of harvesting this year's wheat crop is nearly completed, and the Government estimates place the yield at 11,000,000 bushels above the best previous record. Seventeen million bushels are now available for export.

Japanese Tobacco Monopoly.

THE proposition of the Japanese Government to take over the tobacco business in Japan and operate the same as a Government monopoly, is of some general interest to the tobacco trade. Japan is straining every nerve to raise money to carry on the war with Russia and turns to a tobacco monopoly as an easy method of increasing its revenue. It is proposed that the Government monopoly shall become operative on July 1, 1904, and that the manufacture and sale of Japanese cut tobacco will be allowed to continue until April 19th. All the stock, machinery and plant of the private manufacturers and dealers are to be appraised on June 30th, and in addition to paying for the stock and plant the Government proposes to pay the manufacturers and dealers, as compensation for their "good will," a sum equal to three years average annual income as shown by their books. To take over this business at the present time and pay for it in cash would require an outlay too large to admit of realizing sufficient profit from the project during the continuance of the war to justify the undertaking. But the Government proposes to make the payment largely in bonds secured by the tobacco monopoly, and it is understood that the present manufacturers and dealers object to being paid in bonds, but would prefer the ready cash. They also represent that the three years' annual profit as shown by their books is not a fair way of arriving at the value of their good will, as large sums of money were expended in building up the business, so that their profits until very recently have been little or nothing.

Missionary Cannot Trade in Tobacco.

AN interesting point of law has just been decided by the United States Inland Revenue Department. A collector recently advised the U. S. commissioner that certain missionaries in Alaska were using large quantities of leaf tobacco as currency in dealing with the natives, and desired to know whether such missionaries should be allowed to purchase leaf tobacco, and whether they should be required to register as leaf dealers.

The decision of the commissioner was that there was no way by which missionaries, who were not granted any special privileges under the law, could purchase and use leaf tobacco in the manner suggested without qualifying as manufacturers of tobacco and conforming in all respects to the laws and regulations governing such business. The commissioner also held that even if qualified as dealers in leaf tobacco, the missionaries would be limited in their sales to three classes of persons, namely, to other registered dealers in leaf tobacco, to qualified manufacturers of tobacco, snuff or cigars, or to persons known to be purchasers of leaf tobacco for export, and all leaf tobacco so sold by them as registered dealers in leaf tobacco to be in quantities less than a hogshead, case or bale. At the same time it would be lawful for any licensed manufacturer of cigars to purchase tobacco of any licensed dealer, or other licensed manufacturer of tobacco or cigars in quantities less than the original package for use in his own manufactory exclusively. It would be thus seen that as registered dealers in leaf, missionaries are precluded from retailing tobacco or using it as a medium of currency in bartering or trading with the natives. As qualified manufacturers of tobacco, however, they are permitted to purchase leaf tobacco of dealers in leaf, or from the farmers or growers, but are required to put it up in statutory packages and tax-pay it, in conformity with the laws and regulations. They can transfer it to themselves as dealers in tobacco, on separate premises, and sell or otherwise dispose of it, having in view the restrictions imposed by the law and regulations.

Tobacco in Packages.

THE Inland Revenue regulation prohibiting the breaking of packages of tobacco for sale by tobacconists which has been on the statute books for many years but has never been enforced, will hereafter be strictly insisted upon by the authorities. The carrying out of this regulation will undoubtedly tend to throw more tobacco business into the hands of grocers and general merchants running a tobacco department.

It is customary for almost every tobacconist to sell certain blends or mixtures of smoking tobaccos to his customers by the ounce or pouchful. The new arrangement means that these special blends will have to be put up by the tobacco manufacturers and sold to merchants and tobacco dealers in packages or tins and this will place the grocer in a position to supply these special blends to this customers as easily as the regular tobacconists. Grocers who are handling tobacco now and who are paying attention to this department will find it profitable to interest themselves in these special blends.

Tobacco Industry in the Philippines.

IN view of the recent petition of the Philipinos for the free entry into the United States of Philippine tobacco, the following facts concerning the present state of the tobacco industry there are interesting.

The maximum amount of manufactured tobacco which can be exported from the factories of Manilla is estimated at 150,000,000 cigars annually. The means of cultivation and production are primitive, and the methods of manufacture have reached but a small degree of perfection. During the last fiscal year the value of exports of manufactured tobacco diminished 50 per cent., equivalent to about 2,000,000 Mexican pesos, which signifies the shutting down of many factories and the throwing out of employment of approximately 2,000 workers. Hence the overtures of the Philipinos to their promissory protectors.

Tobacco Monopoly in Japan.

A legislative scandal is threatened in connection with the proposal of the Japanese Government to create a tobacco monopoly. It is alleged that certain members of the Diet agreed to support the movement to increase the compensation paid to manufacturers for a share of the increase secured. It was originally proposed to pay the manufacturers a sum equal to three years' income, and it is said that the illicit project was to secure four years' income. The police are investigating the matter and possibly it will be ventilated on the floor of the House.

New Tobacco Industry in Korea.

THE Chemulpo Cigarette and Tobacco Company is the name of a new British concern which has just been established in Korea. The plant at present installed consists of six machines—two cigarette-making, one cutting, one pressing, one grinding, and one engine. It is estimated that the daily output of cigarettes will be 500,000. The main object of the company is to enter into competition in Korea itself with importations of cigarettes from Japan and elsewhere. It is not proposed to undersell imported cigarettes, but it is hoped to encourage sales by bestowing larger discounts upon dealers, and allowing greater latitude as regards time of payment than the agents of Japanese cigarettes enjoy. The intention is also to extend the trade to China and India in the near future, orders having already been received from these countries.

Sir Walter Raleigh's Pipe

A NOVELTY which is attracting no little curiosity on the part of tourists to London, Eng., is Sir Walter Raleigh's pipe, the first pipe ever smoked in Great Britain, now on exhibition at Whitechapel. There is little doubt that this is the pipe Sir Walter used when he demonstrated to Queen Elizabeth the weight of a given amount of smoke by weighing some tobacco, smoking it, and weighing the ashes. It was also his constant companion when he paced the battlements outside the prison of the Tower of London, while composing his History of the World. To this day the window in the White Tower is pointed out where Sir Walter smoked his pipe as he watched his rival, the Earl of Essex, walk to the scaffold erected just below, and it is not unlikely that the knight carried the identical pipe with him to the block when it came his turn to take his own "sharp medicine."

For many years it formed part of the Duke of Cambridge's famous collection. While the present Prince of Wales was an active naval officer the Duke gave him Raleigh's pipe, and his Royal Highness has since guarded it as a cherished treasure. Before allowing it to go to the Whitechapel exhibition he insisted on insuring it for $5,000 which gives one an idea as to the value placed on this famous relic.

Tobacco in Sumatra.

TOBACCO growing on the Island of Sumatra which is of comparatively recent origin, was founded in 1869 when the principal tobacco corporation of Sumatra was organized. At that time it was not suspected that the industry of growing tobacco in Sumatra would assume such large proportions, nor that the tobacco would become such a necessary adjunct to modern cigar making. The original corporation was capitalized at only $120,000. After 25 years of business the capital had increased to $1,600,000, on which the average yearly dividend was 63 per cent. Canadian manufacturers import from Sumatra the bulk of the tobacco used for cigar wrappers, its fine, silky leaves answering the particular purpose of the Canadian cigar trade better than any other growth.

Tobacco Notes.

The annual convention of the National Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade, which was billed for St. Louis this year, has had to skip that city because of the exorbitant rates, from ten to fifteen dollars a day, for hotel accommodation. The alternative suggested is Atlantic City.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

A SOMEWHAT new departure is to be taken in the United States in regard to the subject of life insurance, it being proposed to deliver lectures before various universities in Ohio, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa, and Colorado on the subject of life insurance. The course of lectures are to be delivered by a well-known authority on insurance, and although the lecturer is travelling under the auspices of one of the leading insurance companies of the United States it is said that no attention will be drawn to this particular company. Of course, the company expects to get its compensation, not only from the general and increased interest which it is expected the lectures will excite, but it will naturally leak out in some way that this particular company is footing the bill. This announcement will, of course, be somewhat of an advertisement.

Why should not one or more of the companies in Canada inaugurate a similar campaign? Old as is the subject of life insurance there are still a great many people in gross ignorance of the subject and who require a great deal of educating in regard to its advantages. Rather than that one company should take it up it would be, perhaps, better that a number should combine for the purpose of paying the expenses entailed in such a campaign. And if the life insurance companies why not the fire insurance companies as well?

REPRESENTATIVE MORRELL, of Pennsylvania, who introduced a bill in the House of Representatives, Washington, to regulate child insurance and regulate the transmission of matter relating to insurance through the mails, has introduced a revised bill, in which he omits everything relating to the mails. His present bill proposes to create a bureau of life insurance in the Census Office and to require all persons, firms, or corporations transacting the business of life insurance within any state, district, territory, or insular possessions of the United States to file certificates from the proper officer or department of Government of such state, district, territory or insular possession, or of some foreign Government showing that he has lawful authority to engage in such business. The bill also proposes to require the refunding of part of the amount that has been paid in premiums on policies that are allowed to lapse in cases where the premiums are collectable in weekly or monthly installments.

THE Russian Government has elaborated statutes on on general life insurance by the state. The business is to be intrusted to the governmental savings banks. All kinds of policies will be issued and the insured will participate in the profits of the business. The insurance of the employes on all the Government railroads is in working order since July 13, 1899. Up to July 14, 1900, the number of policies issued was 6,770, to the amount of $3,220,318, and 7,336 newly presented petitions to join the association were in the hands of the authorities. The Government proposes, after a lapse of a certain number of years, to make the railroad employes' insurance obligatory. The premiums are to be paid monthly by deduction from the salaries of the insured.

IT is said that a very small part of the $20,000,000 German loan that was negotiated in New York five years ago now remains there, and that the conversion scheme proposed by the Imperial Government will have little application outside of Berlin. The conversion changed the 4 per cent. Treasury notes to a 3 1-2 per cent. basis, although it is understood on London advices that an arrangement was been made whereby holders may decline to make the change. The first instalment of the loan falls due this month and the second instalment in June.

THE strenuous Winter has been the cause of very heavy loss to the railways of Canada. Their lines, however, are now practically clear, and, although the earnings of the Grand Trunk for the third week in March still show a decrease of $92,000, this compares very favorably with the previous week's decrease of $137,000. The C.P.R. has not at any time suffered as severely as the Grand Trunk, but even the most sanguine will be surprised to find that for the third week of March their gross earnings were $849,000, or an increase over the same week in 1903 of $9,000. Already Germany, according to Aemilius Jarvis & Co., of Toronto, has been purchasing in our market and in New York on the strength of this increase, and, barring any news of a special character, we should think that this stock would improve.

WHEAT GROWING IN WESTERN CANADA.

WESTERN Canada wheat has an enviable reputation in foreign countries, says G. H. Clark, chief of the seed division, Ottawa. It is in demand for American milling centres, as well as for those of England and Scotland, because it is rich in gluten of exceedingly good quality. The crop of Western Canada ten years hence will reach, it is estimated, 500 million bushels. In view of the rapidly increasing production it is important that its present good reputation be maintained or improved in order that it may continue to grow in favor in foreign countries, where it must find a market.

Unfortunately this high standard of excellence has been appreciably lowered through the introduction of inferior milling quality. Owing to carelessness these mixtures have been allowed to increase yearly in some districts, while in others inferior varieties have been grown, which depreciate the value of the total crop.

The advantage of growing only unmixed wheat may be judged from the difference in price between "No. 1 hard" and the next two grades, most commonly due to the prevalence of soft, starchy grains in the lower grades. "No. 1 hard" invariably has a high percentage of translucent grains indicating a high percentage of gluten of good quality, and it is the quality quite as much as the quantity of the gluten that lends value to the superior wheat.

Red Fife is the standard variety and the hardiest wheat grown in Western Canada. It will survive late Spring frosts severe enough to kill out most other varieties. In milling qualities, moreover, it is unexcelled. Preston wheat is a bearded variety which has grown in favor among farmers in districts where Red Fife has frequently been injured by early frosts. It is from two to five days earlier than the Red Fife. If the weather be unfavorable at the time when ripening ordinarily takes place it may ripen even ten days earlier than the latter variety. Some Canadian millers claim to have made careful milling tests of Preston wheat and openly condemn it as much inferior to the Red Fife. Results of tests, however, carried on under the direction of Dr. Saunders, who originated the variety, indicate that it is only slightly inferior to the Red Fife.

The comparative productiveness of varieties differs with localities and conditions of soil and climate. Again there may be quite as much difference between two strains of seed of the same variety as between two distinct sorts, so far as their capacity to give a large yield of grain is concerned. Whatever varieties are selected they should be grown separately and each kept reasonably pure. On account of careless practices, in the matter of seed selection, mixtures of undesirable sorts have increased in the standard wheat of the West. These impurities consist chiefly of earlier maturing varieties that shell more readily than the Red Fife, which means there is a larger proportion of seed to come from them as "volunteer wheat" in the next succeeding crop.

It is of much importance to the country, as well as to individual wheat growers, that these conditions be overcome. As a matter of fact even farmers who are careless about keeping their seed pure are willing to pay fancy prices for ten, twenty or fifty bushel lots of good, pure seed of wheat, oats and barley. The supply of high class seed is limited. Although the demand for it is great, but little effort has been made by farmers to meet it. Appeals have been made to the Dominion Department of Agriculture to establish farms at various points for the purpose of growing pure seed of wheat, and other cereals, for distribution to farmers at the cost of production. This would entail large expense and would involve the undertaking of work that farmers are quite able to do themselves. The Department of Agriculture is willing to grant such assistance as may be necessary to encourage private enterprise in an endeavor to cope with the situation. In matters of this sort, however, it is well to keep in mind that the best results are always obtained from organized effort.

Seed Growers' Association.

With a view to encourage further the production and more general use of seed of the best quality, an announcement was made in the Spring of 1903, inviting farmers who had been giving some special attention to the growing of seed grain to unite and form an association of seed growers. Rules governing the association and standards of perfection for pedigreed seed will be controlled by an advisory board composed of representative men from the various branch associations. There are now thirty-five seed growers who are members of the Western Canada Association. Their work is supervised and inspected by a superintendent. Records are kept of the amount and pedigree of seed produced by them. According to the rules of the association, each member is required to give a definite guarantee as to the purity, vitality and freedom from noxious weeds, with respect to all lots of seed sold by him. The association certificate shows the pedigree of the seed—the number of consecutive years during which hand selection has been followed.

Farmers of Western Canada, who have farms that are free from noxious weeds and otherwise suited to growing good seed of wheat, oats, rye, barley and other grain, are invited to become members of the association and make seed growing a special industry in their farm operations. They may commence by sowing a plot in the coming Spring with the best obtainable seed. There will be a ready market for all the seed that can be produced by members, at prices which will pay handsomely for the extra trouble in producing it. At present there is an annual demand for 75,000 bushels of seed wheat alone.

TOO MUCH SUGAR IN FRANCE.

IN view of the firmness of the sugar market all over Canada at present and the general anticipation of a heavy advance in beet sugar during the coming Summer the following report from France is interesting. As a result of the ruling price of sugar there being below the cost of cultivation of beet root, the situation is gradually growing worse as far as France is concerned. The report that Germany and Austria have not diminished the acreage planted in beet root seriously affects the market. Cultivators are offered the ridiculous price of $3.28 and $3.47 a ton for beet root—less even than that for potatoes. The high price of alcohol also has its effect. Many French journals assert that the only course to save the situation is for France, Austria and Germany to reduce the production 50 per cent. It seems the opposite course, however, which the two latter countries are pursuing. New uses for sugar are also being sought for, such as its employment for brewing, feed for animals, etc. In France the acreage for the coming harvest will be greatly reduced. Many factories—as many as 30, it is said—will be closed next harvest.

TEA AND ITS CULTIVATION*

JUDGING from the records of their literature tea was known to the Chinese as far back as three thousand years before Christ. Outside of Chinese literature the earliest mention of tea is found in the writings of an Arabian merchant named Soliman, who lived about a thousand years ago. The next notice of it in Western literature is a reference by Bolero to information received from Jesuit missionaries to the effect that the Chinese possessed an herb out of which they obtained a delicate juice serviceable as a drink instead of wine. The writer also makes some laudatory remarks as to its healthful qualities, and compares it with wine, not at all to the advantage of the latter beverage.

The date of its actual introduction into England cannot be ascertained with absolute certainty, authorities varying between 1591 and 1610. At first the price, as might be expected, was very high, being about 10 guineas ($50) per pound, which naturally restricted the use of it. Within the next 40 years, however, it seems to have come into more general use, and the first advertisement of its being for sale appeared in 1657. From that date, or a little later, it began to be imported into England in considerable quantities, mostly via Holland. The price began to decline directly, so much so, that one Thomas Garaway, whose vigorous advertising did much to popularize the use of tea, sold it in 1657 at from 10 shillings to 50 shillings per pound. Some of Mr. Garaway's advertisements of the virtues and merits of tea remind one of certain patent medicine advertisements of the present day. For instance: "It maketh the body active and lusty; it helpeth the headache, giddiness and heaviness thereof; it removeth the obstructiveness of the spleen; it is good against tipitude, distillations, and cleareth the sight, and is particularly good for men of corpulent body, and such as are great eaters of flesh, it easeth the frame and strengtheneth the memory."

Shortly afterwards the East India Tea Company got the exclusive privilege of importing tea into England. In 1678 they imported nearly 5,000 pounds, which seems to have pretty well glutted the market until 1684. In 1685 they imported over 12,000 pounds, and from that date down to the present, with slight variations up and down, there has been a steady increase in the quantity of tea imported into England, the amount in 1888 reaching 184,000,000 pounds and that in 1903 300,259,431 pounds.

The literature of the time from 1657 onwards contains numerous references to tea, its growing use, its popularity, its merits and its faults. It is interesting to notice that a large part of many of the diatribes written against tea were based upon its supposed tendency to foster scandal and gossip. Tea was, however, not without its many warm and celebrated defenders who completely answered the attacks upon it. One of the most distinguished of these was the great Doctor Johnson, who described himself as a "hardened and shameless tea drinker, whose kettle has scarcely time to cool, who with tea amuses the evening, with tea solaces the midnight, and with tea welcomes the morning." One other eloquent advocate of the time replied to an attack upon tea as follows: "The progress of this famous plant has been something like the progress of truth, suspected at first, though very palatable to those who had courage to taste it, resisted as it encroached, abused as its popularity seemed to spread, and establishing its triumph at last in cheering the whole land, from the palace to the cottage, only by the slow but resistless efforts of time and its own virtues."

Extensive Use of Tea.

It might be noted as showing the extent to which the use of tea had spread by this time, that it had become a favorite subject for duties both in England and the colonies. The earliest duty on tea was in the time of Thomas Garaway in 1657. It is safe to say that none of the statesmen of that time had any idea of the tremendous extent to which the consumption of tea was ultimately destined to spread. If the eloquent advocates of tea of the earlier part of the eighteenth century could have been informed that in 1903 300,259,431 pounds would be imported into England, one can imagine with what triumph they would have welcomed the fact as vindicating and justifying their statements regarding it.

Passing from this brief historical notice to the more specific treatment of the subject, teas are divided, in the first instance according to the countries in which they are produced, namely China and Japan, India and Ceylon; the two latter, both for geographical reasons and on account of the similarity of the methods they employ in the cultivation and manufacture of the tea, we shall treat together.

The Tea Plant.

There is substantially only one tea plant, which was originally indigenous, and found native in the hill countries lying between India and China. Although there are numerous varieties, the tea plant, like others, is capable of almost infinite variation by crossing, hybridization, variation of climate, altitude, nature of soil, pruning, and different methods of cultivation.

China Tea.

In China from a very remote period tea has been cultivated in the gardens, and manufactured for use very much as it is at the present day, some slight modification in matters of fermentation and handling having been introduced on account of the European and American demand, which has come into existence in the last two or three centuries. In the main, however, the methods in China to-day are the same as those pursued three thousand years ago. Millions of acres are devoted to its cultivation, and millions of the population are dependent on the crop for their living. About 48,713,885 pounds were exported to England and America last year, and although no reliable figure can be obtained, it is estimated that the home consumption and the Central Asia trade and the Russian trade amount to about ten times that amount. In China the tea is grown by what we would call the small farmers. The shrubs are planted out in rows about four feet apart, and carefully tended and watered. The first picking of small quantities of the young and tenderest leaves takes place in April and May, a delicate operation, requiring skill and discrimination. The tea from this picking is known as the first crop tea, and is of the best quality, and is the most highly priced China tea. The second picking takes place about June or July when the foliage is at its fullest. In the third and last picking the coarse leaves, twigs, stalks, and everything that can be taken without damaging the plant, are picked.

Manufacture of Tea.

Tea is not manufactured on the estate where it is grown. After being withered it is carried to the hongs or factories where it is sold. After the buying for the day is over, the qualities are all sorted out, the leaves slightly fired, and then packed away tightly in dark stalls until fermentation commences. Then it is handed out to the pickers, in kitties of 11-3 pounds at a time, who pick out the brown leaves and stalks; the leaves that are left are gathered together and fired. This is the most important process of all, since the appearance, character and flavor depend largely on the skill and care of the firing. The firing is done over a charcoal fire. The tea leaves are spread thinly over a grating in a deep basket which is placed over the fire and dried, before undergoing a final rolling. When the whole of the leaf of one quality has been treated this way it is spread out on thin trays, heated and turned over to drain off any remaining moisture. And when perfectly dry and of a uniformly dark color, it is packed in the familiar lead-lined cases.

Green Tea.

The manufacture of green tea differs from black, mainly in that the leaves are not allowed to remain moist long enough for fermentation to take place. The leaves are fired a little as soon as picked, then rolled, and rapidly dried in iron pans over a charcoal fire. It might be mentioned here that much as to quality depends on the skill with which these processes are conducted. Green tea is often artificially faced and colored to improve its appearance, the Ping Suey kinds perhaps more than others. The small quantity of coloring matter used is perhaps not very injurious to health, the tea itself, however, is not so wholesome as the black, the essential oil being preserved in the leaf by this method of treatment. Oolong tea is prepared in the same manner as green tea only it is fired without rolling, and is not faced. All kinds of scented teas are flavored with scented flowers, which give them their distinctive aroma. In some high-priced scented teas the flowers are packed in alternate layers with paper between, and heated very gently so as to have the aroma permeate the whole tea.

Varieties of Teas.

China Congous or black teas are divided, generally speaking, into three groups, according to the district in which they are produced. North China Congou is generally shipped from Hankow and Shanghai, and comprises among other well known brands Moning, Ningchow and Keemuns. The tea from the Central District is usually shipped from Foochow, and is generally known as Kaisows, which include among some others, Panyongs, Packlums and Saryumes.

Green teas, or, as they are generally known, Young Hysons, are broadly divided into two classes, Moyunes and Ping Suey. The Moyune including the old style Gunpowder and a number of other brands, are the better class of green teas. The Ping Suey lacks the power and quality of the Moyune varieties. It is not infrequently a good looking tea, but is unfortunately not a good liquoring tea and very apt to be faced or colored. The consumption of China green teas has been for years rapidly decreasing, and it would be almost safe to say that there is very little pure China green tea used in this country where it is always mixed with black. The introduction within the last two years of Ceylon green teas, which are put up with great care and regard to purity, threatens to entirely supplant the use of China and Japan greens.

COMMERCIAL KOREA.

AN interesting monograph has been issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor of the United States, discussing commercial conditions in Korea and including a statement of Korean imports and the countries from which they are drawn as well as of the exports and the countries to which they are sent.

The population of Korea is estimated at about 15,000,000 and the foreign commerce at $12,000,000, of which imports form about seven and a half millions.

Commercially the development of Korea begins with 1876, when two ports, Gensan and Fusan, were, upon the insistence of Japan, opened to trade with that country only. In 1882 Admiral Shufeldt, of the United States navy, visited Korea and secured a treaty of friendship between the United States and Korea by which American vessels were given access to its treaty ports and the safety of American vessels and citizens assured. This was followed by treaties with Germany and Great Britain in 1883, Rusria and Italy in 1884, France in 1886, Austria in 1892, and China in 1897.

From 1882 on Korea was opened to foreign trade and Western civilization, and the Korean Government established its legations among the various great commercial nations. With the opening of the treaty ports and the establishment of commerce an official record of Korean imports and exports began. This shows imports in 1884 amounting to about $800,000, and exports amounting to $475,000. By 1890 imports had grown to $3,850,000 and exports to $2,975,000 In 1894 imports and exports fell considerably below those of 1890, but in 1897 again increased, being to that year of imports about $5,000,000 and exports about $4,500,000. In 1902 the imports at the treaty ports amounted to about $7,000,000, and the exports of merchandise to about $1,200,000. In addition to this, exports of gold amounted to over $2,000,000, while the imports and exports at other than treaty ports are estimated as being sufficient to bring the total commerce of 1902 up to fully $15,000,000, exclusive of gold exports, which, as above indicated, amounted to about $2,000,000.

The most important articles in the export trade are rice, which shows an annual exportation of more than a million dollars; beans, a half million; ginseng, nearly a half million; and hides, about one hundred thousand dollars in value in the latest available year. Of the importations, cotton goods form the largest item, from three to three and a half million dollars per annum; silk piece goods imported from Japan and China amount to $600,000 per annum; kerosene oil, about $300,000; railway materials, about $250,000; mining supplies, about $200,000; and bags and ropes for packing, $150,000. Of the cotton goods imported in 1902, British shirtings formed the largest single item, amounting to $800,000; British and American sheetings, $260,000; Japanese sheetings, $350,000; Japanese piece goods and Japanese yarn for use in manufacturing cotton cloths, $800,000. Korea, like China, is now drawing considerable quantities of cotton yarn from Japan, as well as considerable supplies of cotton manufactures.

UNITED STATES PURE FOOD BILL.

AN American contemporary is pessimistic as to the prospects of a national pure food law being passed during the present meeting of Congress, but remarks that although this is a disappointment to the friends of the measure, they have reason for congratulation in that a national pure food bill has less to fear from legislators than ever before. Many of the arguments against the bill have tended to impress the powers that be that such have been made in the interest of deception and of fraud. When mixers, blenders, adulterators, false labelers, argue for modifications or amendments with a view of leaving their operations as free from legal restrictions as possible, it tends to fasten in the minds of the lawmakers the conviction that there are good reasons why the people should be protected against fraud and adulterations in food products. For this reason any future changes are more likely to be in the direction of making the provisions of the proposed act more restrictive, more annoying and more drastic than is even the present McCumber-Hepburn bill, which practically is as drafted by the National Pure Food Congress, in which body the grocery trade were largely represented.

RICE TRUST FOR SOUTH.

At a recent conference in Galveston, Texas, at which were represented all the mills of Louisiana, plans were perfected through which a consolidation will occur of all buying, milling and selling of all rice products in the United States.

It is stated that the name of the association of rice growers will be the National Rice Association of America. It will include at least 98 per cent. of all the rice growers in Texas and Louisiana, and will be capitalized at $1,500,000.

A LUNCHEON TO EMPLOYES.

THE great and growing community of interest between employers and employes which is contributing largely to the success of modern enterprises, was further emphasized on April 2, when the New York firm of Francis H. Leggett & Co. tendered a luncheon to the heads of their various departments, and a large representation of visiting salesmen and buyers of the house from the New England, Middle Atlantic and Southern States were present.

The menu was made up entirely from the "Premier Brands" as manufactured by this firm, even to the coffee and cigars. During the intellectual dessert which followed every one present availed himself of the opportunity "to give and take" suggestions on improved methods in salesmanship, and information which might prove to be of value in following up trade to the best advantage.

MANUFACTURE OF TAPIOCA.

It is worth remembering that the root of the cassava plant furnishes tapioca, and that the preparation consists of grating the roots and the separation of the pulp from its milky juice, leaving a beautiful white flour which is dried into cakes and then pulverized. The use of a machine causes the powdered tapioca to form into small round balls, after which treatment the product is dried in drying pans over a gentle and steady heat. The same tapioca flour yields the pearl or the flake at the will of the maker.

SUGAR BEET CULTIVATION IN ALBERTA.

The cultivation of sugar beets is bound to become the money making industry of Raymond, Alberta, and surrounding country, according to J. M. Cannon, attorney for the Alberta Land and Stock Co., who have control of 17,500 acres of land in Alberta. Both soil and climatic conditions are most favorable and the success that attended the industry last year, wherever the beets were given the proper attention and the ground was sufficiently cultivated, shows that this district cannot be surpassed for high grade beets. Mr. Cannon cited the case of a firm who last year had 300 acres of beets under cultivation in Idaho. They contracted the growing of the beets for $22.50 per acre and realized for the crop $112.50 per acre. After deducting all charges for irrigation, interest, etc., they cleared $25,000 or over $80 per acre.

STAPLE AS GOLD

Grocers are wise to sell more Royal Baking Powder, because in the end it yields a greater profit than the low-priced powders, many of which contain alum, which is injurious to health.

Royal Baking Powder is always worth one hundred cents on the dollar, and no grocer need hesitate to carry a large amount of it in stock.

Royal Baking Powder retains its full strength in all climates all the time.

Varying atmospheres do not lessen its leavening qualities. You have no spoiled stock.

It is absolutely pure and healthful and always sure in results.

It never fails to satisfy the consumer.

It is sold the world over and is as staple as gold.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Conditions in the Packing Trade.

WITH reference to a report which appeared recently in a Montreal paper to the effect that a Canadian firm of packers had discharged 30 of their employes in consequence of the dulness in the trade resulting from Danish competition, a representative of The Canadian Grocer had an interview last week with the head of a Western firm of packers.

The report is only inaccurate according to this gentleman in so far as it is not inclusive enough. Packing firms all over Canada have almost without exception been obliged to dispense with a large proportion of their employes owing to the dulness of trade.

It would appear that since October last the price of bacon in the British market has been steadily declining. The cause of the decline is primarily the enormous output of Danish houses. We quote some interesting figures showing how this output has increased from year to year. The figures given represent the number of hogs killed weekly in Denmark for the British market during the four weeks of March from 1901 to the present year inclusive :

	March.
	1st Week.	2nd Week	3rd Week.	4th Week.
1901	22,000	22,000	.....	18,000
1902	25,000	21,000	25,000	25,000
1903	26,500	24,000	27,000	30,500
1904	35,500	36,000	38 000	40,500

The price of bacon on the British market during the first week of September, 1903, was 58 to 64 shillings per 112 lbs. During the succeeding months it steadily declined and in the fourth week of March, 1904, it stood at 38 to 45. The gentleman interviewed stated that his losses since September last worked out approximately at a dollar per every hog sold.

That the Danish packers have been able all along to obtain a better price for their bacon than Canadian firms is attributed to the more scientific methods of feeding employed in Denmark by which a better flavor in imparted to the bacon and its popularity with the consumer thereby increased. Canadian farmers have possibly something to learn in this respect.

The packing firms of this country have been keeping their men on during the Winter in the expectation of an improvement in trade, but so far as present indications go, little is expected now in the way of improvement before June or July, it being a peculiarity of the British market that consumers seem to be able to use any quantity of bacon during the months of June, July and August, at the highest prices.

English Company to Handle Canadian Provisions.

An English produce company has been formed to buy provisions in Canada, straight from the growers, thus abolishing the middleman's profits. The company will start with a capital of £200,000. One shop will be opened first, and 50 in London and the provinces later.

Toronto's Live Stock Market.

The following statistics of the live stock trade upon the Toronto markets for the first quarter of 1904 have been prepared. The number of cattle sold amounted to 35,514, being an increase of 6,187 over the corresponding period last year. The number of hogs amounted to 42,397, as against 38,737 for the same time last year. The number of sheep and lambs amounted to 18,076, showing a decrease of only 1,416 from the same period a year ago.

CABLE advices give the following estimates of stocks of lard held in Europe and afloat, on April 1st, to which are added estimates of former years, and stocks in cities named :—

Cheese Board Regulation.

At a recent meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board an important matter was legislated upon designed to compel cheese buyers to take cheese at the price at which it was bought. Considerable trouble has been experienced in the past by buyers refusing to pay the price contracted for in the event of the price dropping between the time the cheese was bought and the date of delivery. To obviate this a motion was carried to the effect that the president be instructed to accept no bid on the board unless the sum of $10 be deposited with the salesman of each factory as selected by the buyer at the time of the sale.

To Incorporate Cheese Board.

At the annual meeting of the Ottawa Cheese Board on March 31 the secretary was authorized to take the necessary steps to have the cheese board incorporated or affiliated with the Ottawa Board of Trade. The execution of either one of these schemes, it is understood, will materially improve the standing of the board.

Butter Prospects in England.

The war in the Far East must have, it is thought in trade circles, a far-reaching and bad effect on the butter market in England. Stocks are at present very short, and the irregularity and poor condition of Siberian supplies in the near future will make matters much worse.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The trade in smoked meats continues normal, with fair demand. Hogs are easier this week, prices for light weights being 15 to 25c lower, and for heavyweights 25 to 50c. lower than last week's quotations. The lard market continues steady, with prices unchanged. Trade in fresh meats is quiet. Mutton is 1-2c firmer than last week, and in veal the range in prices quoted is 1-2c less than last week. Our quotations are as follows:

Butter—The butter market shows increasing signs of activity. Supplies are coming forward very freely, particularly of dairy rolls and prints, which are commencing to load up and are not always of first-class quality. Stocks of butter in tubs are entirely used up, and thus an extra demand for the fresh article is created. Creamery butter is coming freely, although it is in brisk demand and is disposed of as soon as received. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22

Dairy rolls, large	0 15	0 16

Cheese—The cheese market is quiet this week, the expected rise in prices not having occurred as yet. The home market is only fairly active and comparatively little is being done in the export trade. Last week's prices continue unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 10½	0 11

Montreal.

Provisions—The demand for lard has been strong all the week. Trade in smoked meats and pork has remained quiet. The tone of the market for live hogs weakened during the week and prices went down 25 cents to 40 cents per 100 lbs. Fresh killed abattoir stock also took a drop of 25 cents a hundred, with sales at $7.25 a hundred. The prices otherwise remained unchanged since last week. We quote:

Butter—The butter market is not in a very prosperous state. Lower prices are expected every day and some dealers quote one price and some another. One, for instance, said that he had seen a fine lot of choice creamery sold at 19 cents. However, this price is uncommon and jobbers bought very fine goods at 20 cents. In order to dispose of any quantity, many concessions were made. Holders of some Fall makes seem anxious to get rid of it at 17 1-2 to 18c. Trade is likely to be confined to the local consumption for a few weeks as the new makes have not been coming in very freely. We quote:

Summer goods	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16
Finest Fall made	....	0 21
" fresh prints	0 21	0 22

Cheese—Everything is quiet in the cheese market and the price ruling is 9 5-8 to 9 7-8. From abroad the enquiries are strong and the arrivals are reported numerous. Future values look discouraging as the new cheese is away behind. There are some old goods in stock and the demand is quiet and light.

St. John, N.B.

Provisions—In barreled pork the sale is very light and low prices rule, values being cut to make sales. While beef is quite low, prices remain firm. Smoked meats show an improved sale with prices well maintained. There is a large stock of pure lard held and the market not active. Low prices rule. In fresh meats, domestic beef is rather light supply and prices are about as high as for Ontario stock. Veal is low. Very few Spring lambs are to be seen. Old stock is being offered at about the same price as mutton. Some P.E.I. pork is offered. Prices remain unchanged.

Good Prospects for Butter.

A prominent English produce merchant is authority for the statement that Canadian butter will do better this year than usual on account of the shortage which is bound to take place in Siberia. This latter country is an important factor in the butter market, although the output is of an inferior quality. During the last fifteen years they have built up an enormous business, and at the present time London alone takes the equivalent of 100,000 boxes a week. If the war is prolonged during the Summer this will be cut off almost entirely and it is expected that Canada will be called upon to supply most of the deficiency.

Canadian Dairy Produce.

The Canadian commercial agent in the Manchester district, England, in a report to the Trade and Commerce Department points out the opportunity that exists for an enlargement of Canadian trade in dairy products in the British market. He mentions a complaint that butter is being spoiled in transit across the Atlantic through the compartments on board steamer being kept at too high a temperature.

Notes.

France's last potato crop was over four hundred and fifty million bushels, valued at but twenty-five cents a bushel.

Over nine million pounds of butter were exported from the Argentine last year. One factory turns out twenty tons of butter a day.

It is reported that a company has recently been organized in New York, to manufacture condensed milk for export to Russia and Japan.

Receipts of live hogs at Chicago last month were 659,000 against 551,000 same month last year, and shipments 236,000 compared with 127,000 a year ago, demonstrating that the consumption of fresh pork in the United States is rapidly increasing.

CONFEDERATION WITH NEWFOUNDLAND.

SECRETS are said to be things that we give to others to keep for us. The subject of confederation with Newfoundland prompted the secret idea. Last week The Grocer was given what was quite exclusive information regarding a likelihood of confederation being culminated. Another secret comes from an equally reliable source which says the question of confederation for the present has been set aside. A full text of this latter is given as follows.

Extract from the Evening Herald, St. John's, Nfld., March 31st :

CONFEDERATION.

In the assembly last evening, in answer to a question by Mr. McGrath for copies of all correspondence with the Imperial and Canadian Governments respecting confederation, the premier stated there was no correspondence with the Canadian Government and with the Imperial Government, the only correspondence was that the Secretary for the Colonies had transmitted to our governor for consideration by his ministers, a copy of a resolution on the subject adopted by the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire when in session at Montreal in August last, as follows :

"That to fully round out and complete Canadian confederation and to strengthen Imperial unity, it is, in the opinion of this Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire essential that Newfoundland should be included as a constituent part of the Dominion of Canada. The present is an opportune time to enter upon negotiations leading to this result in view of the pending tariff treaty between Newfoundland and the United States and the friendly relations now existing between France and Great Britain, and the probable disposition on the part of France to settle for all time matters so long in dispute respecting the French shore. It is in the opinion of this Congress a matter of Imperial importance that one intact Atlantic sea-board should be thus permanently secured."

To this the Government replied by the subjoined minute of council which pretty effectually disposes of the question of confederation for the present :

The committee of council have had under consideration the resolutions passed by Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, advocating inclusion of Newfoundland in the Dominion of Canada, and which were forwarded under cover of despatch No. 1, of date the 5th of January, 1904, received from the Right Hon. Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The committee, while appreciating very highly the interest manifested by the said Congress in the affairs of this colony, regret that they cannot concur that "present is an opportune time to enter upon negotiations leading to the union of this colony with the Canadian Dominion." So far as the committee is aware there is no desire on the part of the people of this colony to be "included as a constituent part of the Dominion," but, on the contrary, the desire is evident that the colony should retain its autonomy and continue to maintain an honorable and independent position as part of the British Empire.

NEW WINNIPEG MILL.

The Northern Elevator Co. have plans out for the erection of a flour mill in Winnipeg, which is to have a capacity of 25,000 barrels daily. The site of the mill has not been decided upon, but it will be within easy access from the C.P.R., C.N.R. and Grand Trunk Pacific. The materials to be used in this massive structure will be concrete, stone and brick, and no expense will be spared in making it one of the most modern and up-to-date mills in Canada. The expectation is to have it completed in time to put through this year's wheat crop.

PROSPECTS OF MEXICAN TRADE.

SOME progress has already been made in the matter of a proposal to subsidize a line of steamships to ply between Canadian and Mexican ports. The Dominion Government has proposed a subsidy of $50,000 a year, and it is said that three companies, two of them Canadian, are already seeking to take advantage of it. The Mexican consul-general in Montreal is quoted as authority for the statement that when the line is established Mexico intends to maintain a full corps of consuls in Canada.

A considerable amount of business for such a line is already fairly assured. Mexico can use a good deal of Cape Breton coal and can buy Canada's salt, dried and pickled fish, besides being a potential customer for many other Canadian products. Canada can use Mexican sugar, hemp (sisal grass), coffee, dye woods and other tropical and subtropical products. The plan to make Havana a port of call would open to Canada a larger commerce, with Cuba, chiefly perhaps in tobacco, although other articles would find an important place. Havana has had a Canadian bank for several years.

The present intention is to make Montreal and Vera Cruz the terminal ports, and the time of the run is estimated at eight or nine days.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating

THE HUCKSTER PROBLEM.

THE grocers say the hucksters must go. The Montreal Association have a great deal of strong argument to put up against them. Figures and facts are just as stubborn as they always were, and the abundance of these in the hands of the association will make it pretty hard for the huckster to stand long against them. There are in all in the City of Montreal 150 licenses for hawkers, totalling at $50 each the sum of $7,500. For peddling fruit only 97 permits exist, yet there are registered as many as 350 hawkers, who by hook or by crook must use these licenses by transfer or some adroitness, which in the end militates against the legitimate grocer. Then of candy carts which pay $30 each for licenses there are 11, making a revenue for the city of $330. These sums, totalled with the licenses of peddlers on foot, make less than $10,000.

The hawker has no expense or responsibility. He never goes over the same territory frequently, so that by the time he changes off with a partner and returns again the purchasers have forgotten his wrongdoing or poor wares. This was well illustrated last week by a grocer. One of the grocer's customers came to him and said he could buy potatoes at 55 cents a bag from a hawker and that he, the grocer, was cheating him in asking 75 cents. "Here's 55 cents," replied the grocer, "kindly buy me a bag. That is what they cost me in car lots." The annoyed customer did so. The bag was weighed. It weighed 60 lbs. Which is better, 90 pounds, the correct weight, at 75 cents, or 30 lbs. less for 30 cents less? That is only an illustration, but it is true. In dozens of cases the hawker gives inferior goods and short weight. Then the grocer has to make good any bad stock he may sell. When fruit and vegetables are scarce or very expensive, the huckster is never seen, and the grocers have to keep a stock all the time. The immense cost of keeping a grocery store and the amazingly small profits on nearly all goods render the huckster an imposter and a harmful middleman to the grocery trade.

Then take the enormous revenue derived from the grocers themselves. There are 1,400 grocery stores in Montreal. They pay an average of $100 license to the city, making $140,000. There are 500 licensed wine and liquor stores which pay on an average of $300, making $150,000. Thus there is the enormous sum of $290,000 paid to the city by grocers.

The association have made an overture to the city council and to the Quebec Legislature to have the hawker stamped out. There must, however, be some reason in the claims of the wholesale fruit dealers who say that the huckster is a necessary evil. Citizens, too, must be given consideration, in that a strong petition was before the council which declared that the hucksters were not nuisances but necessities. However, there must be some regard for the word relative and the greatest good to the greatest number must rule. The grocers at any rate are making a fight which they think is just and right and, protected by such considerations, they call for popular support.

A PATRIOTIC WINDOW.

J. A. Mathewson & Co., wholesale grocers, Montreal, whose offices and warehouses are on McGill street near the corner of Notre Dame street, and in the direct line of busy traffic, have a display of Canadian packed canned corn, beans and peas which arrests the attention of the passers-by. The display consists of "Quaker" brand goods, and the legend on a card speaks decidedly emphatic patriotic sentiments: "Who says Canadians can't put up goods? We can beat the world!" The goods certainly deserves mention and Mathewson & Co.'s sentiments, endorsation.

NEW GENERAL STORE.

A new general store is to be opened on May 1st at Ste. Genevieve de Batiscan, by St. Arnaud & Duval. The firm will have buying offices at 425 St. Paul street, Montreal, the premises of St. Arnaud Freres, one of the oldest and most reputable houses in Montreal. The members of the new firm are thoroughly experienced and will no doubt be successful in their new venture. They would be pleased to receive catalogues, price lists, and general quotations at the buying office in Montreal.

JOHN CHINAMAN IN THE GROCERY TRADE.

THE subject of Chinese competition is causing a good deal of controversy amongst grocers in New South Wales and New Zealand, according to an Australian exchange. The "heathen Chinee" is undoubtedly a much-abused individual, whether justly so or not, but it speaks volumes for his enterprise as a trader to see how he rises and compels attention is spite of polltaxes, Emigration Restriction Acts, and public sentiment. almost entirely the fruit and vegetable business in New Zealand, and is competing very keenly in some districts in the grocery trade; the same is the case, even in a more marked degree, in New South Wales. The New Zealand daily papers have been publishing columns of letters setting forth reasons for and against tabooing "John," and in New South Wales the matter has been taken in hand by the Retail Grocers' Association. This association has even gone so far as to refuse membership to a tradesman who, though not objected to as a "blackleg," has nevertheless been rejected on account of his color.

As a keen competitor there is no doubt he is a consideration, and at price-cutting he can frequently "go one better" than his white neighbor, but, whilst this very frequently applies to the Chinaman, it must be admitted that the white man is not always free from similar suspicions.

FLOOD AFFECTS TRADE.

Many of the largest provision and wholesale grocery warehouses are located on Commissioners street in Montreal. This street borders on the river front and harbor. Hence, last week when the water was very high, reaching nearly the depth of 40 feet, damage was threatened. As a precautionary measure a large number of clerks were employed removing stock to higher places where the water could not reach it. Some goods were damaged but not seriously. Navigation will be opened in about six or seven days for ocean steamers.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Big Demand for Salmon.

THAT there will be a big demand for salmon in the Orient as a result of the war with Russia is evident by the fact that more than 200,000 cases for immediate shipment to Japan have been sold in Pacific coast ports, and it is now said in shipping circles that Russian agents are buying the red Alaska salmon on the Atlantic seaboard and in the United Kingdom. The demand for salmon has already resulted in a remarkable raise in the price of pink salmon from 50 cents to 70 cents per dozen since the opening of hostilities.

Shortly after the breaking out of hostilities, Japanese merchants, both direct and through local correspondents, commenced to pick up large blocks of pink salmon and what chums remained unsold at Seattle, San Francisco and Vancouver. It was only a few days before the market under this stimulating demand advanced to 60 cents per dozen on pinks and thence to 62 1-2, 65, 67 1-2, 70 and 72 1-2 cents, and finally reached 75 cents, in rapid succession, at which prices at present ruling the market there is very little which can be secured, as virtually the entire stock of this grade has been sold for Japanese account and is going forward on every steamer leaving Pacific coast ports for the Far East.

Chums advanced rapidly from 45 cents to 62 1-2 cents per dozen, at which latter price the entire coast holdings were closed out. It is conservatively estimated that not less than 125,000 cases of the two grades named will be shipped to Japan from Seattle alone, 50,000 to 60,000 cases from San Francisco and from 25,000 to 30,000 cases of Puget Sound and Alaska humpbacks through the port of Vancouver. It is anticipated that, through these influences, values on this grade will also enhance materially during the course of the next few weeks.

In the event of the struggle being prolonged, of which it gives every evidence at the present time, there is no doubt that there will be a continued active demand for salmon on the part of both belligerent powers, for the reason that it is generally understood that neither has sufficient supplies of food products available to carry on an extended campaign without replenishing, and canned salmon has proven itself in the experience of other governments to be a convenient and nutritious ration.

Annual Fisheries Report.

THE annual report of the Dominion of Canada Fisheries Department for 1902-3 shows that 77,801 persons were employed in the Canadian fisheries during the year, the craft and gear used being valued at $11,305,959. The lobster fishery alone employed 13,563 persons. There are at present 723 lobster canners, and plants are valued at $1,287,636. In British Columbia there are 75 salmon canneries, valued at $1,500,000, employing 17,098 persons, and producing 60,103,776 cans of salmon annually. In 1902 there were 64 sealing schooners, and last year 24. Eight Canadian vessels operating near the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic last year took 21,126 fur seals. The total value of the fisheries in 1902 was $21,959,463, as against $25,731,153 the year previous. The British Columbia salmon pack alone gave a reduction of two and a half millions. The value of fish caught in Ontario was $1,265,700, a decrease of $162,372. The federal expenditure in fisheries was $527,944, and the revenue $78,635. During the last fiscal year $11,826,646 worth of fish products was exported to foreign countries.

Salmon Legislation.

A BILL is before the United States Senate at the present time to prohibit the misbranding or false branding of salmon and to safeguard the salmon fisheries of Alaska, which have shown an alarming falling off in output.

It prohibits the use of dams, barricades, traps, fish wheels and other fixed obstructions in any of the fish streams of Alaska. It is made unlawful to fish for, or kill the red salmon and king salmon by any means except with rod, spear or gaff hook about the mouth of any creek after Jan. 1, 1905. Fishing across streams with nets and traps is prohibited for a distance greater than one-third the width of such stream. Other restrictions are imposed as to fishing in certain waters. A closed season is designated for a short period every year and other prohibitions are named that will tend to give the fish a chance to spawn. In addition to this provision is made for the establishment of salmon hatcheries for the artificial propagation of the species. American Government experts have great faith in the perpetuation of the Alaskan fisheries by means of artificial propagation.

To Fight Brine Duty.

A MEETING of fish importers was held in New York last week to take concerted action, and secure if possible, a reversal of the recent ruling of the U. S. board of customs appraisers by which they will be compelled to pay duty on brine. After a thorough explanation and general discussion of the subject, in which representatives of the Philadelphia and Boston trades took part, a committee were appointed to co-operate with Boston in making a new test before the general appraisers.

Some progress has already been made in Boston towards securing a reversal of the board of appraisers' action. The matter was first taken up with the secretary of the treasury, who was unable to afford any relief on the ground that the matter was entirely outside of his jurisdiction. The board of general appraisers were then asked to reconsider their recent action, but declined to do so, saying they had no power to amend a decision after once having rendered it. A protest has been entered and an immediate hearing is to be given before the board of general appraisers.

To Stop Export of Raw Sockeyes.

The Dominion Government has decided to enforce the total prohibition of the foreign sale or exportation of raw sockeyes during the coming salmon-fishing season. This enactment was made for the special purpose of preventing American canners on Puget Sound from invading the Fraser River for the purpose of buying Canadian fish for ultimate canning on the Sound. It is not expected that the decision will be favorably received by American canners who have already been making preparations to purchase sockeyes in the Fraser River during the coming season in view of the possibility of a scarcity of fish in Scund waters owing to the erection of traps on the shore of Vancouver Island.

Codfish Will be Scarce.

Owing to the fact that a large part of last season's codfish catch will be sent abroad to supply a shortage in European markets, says the New York Commercial, it is not unlikely that top-notch prices for codfish will prevail next year in this country.

It has always been our constant endeavor to give entire satisfaction, not only to the grocery trade, but to the consuming public as well.

As proof that our efforts have not been in vain, we point with pride to our large and increasing business.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH TREATY.

A GLANCE at the recently published summary of the provisions of the new Anglo-French treaty shows that the negotiations covered a wide field. At the present time the abolition of friction between the two countries is probably the most important result and will doubtless have a beneficial effect in the Province of Quebec where Mr. Bourassa and others have been trying to stir up race prejudices.

The chief interest in the treaty for Canada centres in the clause which affects the sister colony of Newfoundland. Under the old conditions there was a portion of the Newfoundland coast known as the "French shore." Along this shore Newfoundlanders were not permitted to fish, according to an arrangement existing between the British and French Governments. This prohibition was a source of annoyance and sometimes actual loss to the people of Newfoundland. Even a British lobster factory was not permitted on the shore in question.

In 1890 an amusing incident happened in this connection, when the commander of a British war ship compelled a French canning factory to close its doors. A law suit followed. It was carried to the Privy Council and the British Government were condemned to pay damages. Ever since, the British authorities have been endeavoring to relieve the situation.

By the treaty the Newfoundlanders are given the right to carry on whatever industries they please on the French shore, while the Frenchmen are still granted the privilege of fishing off the coast and buying bait from the Newfoundlanders. In addition Canadian fishermen have been given the same fishing and bait rights as the French fishermen.

The other portions of the treaty deal with Morocco, Egypt, Central and West Africa, Siam, Madagascar and Australasia. The friendliness of the arrangement between the two countries, France and Great Britain, and the removal of annoying conditions should be matters for public congratulation.

TRANSPORTATION NEEDS.

POLITICIANS and others are apt to lay too much stress on the tariff as a panacea for all commercial evils. Important as is the tariff, it must not be forgotten that it is merely an artificial contrivance. Of quite as much importance is the improvement of such natural means of development as are afforded, for instance, by better transportation facilities.

Larger and faster steamboats, improved harbors and waterways, better freight service on the railways, accompanied by reduced rates, will do quite as much to advance the commercial interests of the country as a fostering tariff.

The Transportation Commission, which has held sittings in many parts of Canada during the past month, should do much to improve facilities, and to the Railway Commission at Ottawa the eyes of shippers and others are turned for the solution of the problem of rates. As soon as fast steamboats can be put on the Canadian routes, which will be able to compete in some measure with the United States lines, and as soon as discriminatory freight rates can be removed, Canadian commerce will assuredly witness a wonderful development. At present the country is handicapped by a slow service across the Atlantic, which tends to divert traffic to United States ports, from which faster and cheaper steamboats run. This disadvantage is heightened by unfair treatment at the hands of the railway companies, a circumstance which only requires attention from the Railway Commission to be removed.

ALASKA vs. YUKON.

TOO much credit cannot be given the Canadian Government for its management of the affairs of the Yukon. It is true that instances of maladministration may be pointed out, but on the whole government in the Klondike has been creditable.

This fact may be emphasized and proved by an examination of the state of affairs across the border in the Territory of Alaska.

Though possessing a population of some 65,000 white men, Alaska has no representation in Congress. This in itself is a serious grievance, when it is remembered that the Yukon Territory of Canada has for some time enjoyed representation in the Dominion Parliament. The judiciary in Alaska is also complained of. There have been too frequent changes on the bench, a circumstance which has not tended to elevate the law. In the Yukon, on the other hand, the same judge has sat on the bench continuously ever since a court was established there.

Then, too, the inhabitants of Alaska look with envious eyes on the constabulary, which maintains peace and order in the Yukon. To the Northwest Mounted Police is due much of the credit for the law-abiding and peaceable nature of that settlement, and the Alaskans feel the lack of a similar body of men in their midst.

Dissatisfaction has also been expressed in Alaska at the methods of the members of the civil service, who act in an arbitrary manner, which does not give the country a good name. Contrasted with them, the Government officials in the Yukon are superior in every respect.

That these grievances of the people of Alaska are not unreal, is evidenced by the various measures which are at present being introduced into Congress to ameliorate the condition of affairs there. We believe, however, that little would be heard of these troubles were it not that the Alaskans had constantly before their eyes the spectacle of a country, similar to their own, yet enjoying greater advantages in the way of good government than they themselves do. In the dissatisfaction of the people of Alaska lies the best proof of the excellence of Canadian institutions.

THE ATLANTIC COMBINE.

FEW people are aware that the actual control of the great Morgan combine of Atlantic steamship lines has passed into the hands of the British stockholders. On this subject the press of the United States has kept a profound silence, in marked contrast to its jingoistic utterances at the time the combine was negotiated. Then statements were made to the effect that the commercial supremacy of the sea had been wrested from England and that henceforth the Stars and Stripes would wave over the greatest fleet of ocean carriers the world had ever seen. The consummate genius of Morgan was extolled; the decadence of the British capitalist pointed out and the effect on the future relations of Britain and the United States commented on, much to the ignominy of the former. Even Canadians were known to have uttered lamentations at the downfall of England.

But to-day the tables have been turned in that calm, dignified manner in which John Bull delights to act. There has been no blazoning forth of the fact that the control of the combine has passed into his hands together with a large majority of the stock. Yet such is actually the case and it speaks to the credit of England that the fact has not been rubbed in harder than it has. On this side the Atlantic fair-minded papers of the stamp of the New York Evening Post have published the facts and in a sane manner have sought to discover the causes and determining factors, which have led to the present condition of affairs, but the general body of the United States press has been silent.

THE CHEESE TRADE OUTLOOK.

THERE is a wide divergence between the conditions existing at the opening of the cheese-making season this year and those which prevailed at this time last year. The season of 1902-03 was satisfactory in every respect to Canadian producers of the cheese. Prices prevailed at from 9 to 12c. all season, averaging in the neighborhood of 10c. It was even a better season for cheese exporters, as prices steadily advanced toward the end of the season and were maintained on a high basis throughout the Winter.

The season of 1903-04, in consequence, opened a year ago at about 13 to 13 1-2c., an unprecedented price for new cheese. The production from the first, was unusually large, an export of 2,849,199 boxes taking place during the year as compared with 2,489,630 boxes during the preceding year. Prices however were kept high at the factories until nearly the end of the season of manufacture, with the result that buyers had to face the Winter with cheese bought at about 12c. and the market heavily loaded. Prices have slowly but persistently fallen until now the market is decidedly below the level of a year ago.

There is, moreover, a wide divergence of opinion as to the real value of cheese to-day. Two large buyers, evidently not carrying any material stock of cheese, take the view that the conditions of the market do not warrant more than 9 to 9 1-2c. for last year's cheese for export demand. These dealers point out that the British market has been well supplied owing to the enormous shipments last Summer from Canada and from other countries and that it has been indisposed to buy cheese at excessive figures, owing to the industrial crisis.

A more optimistic view of the situation, however, is taken by an extensive shipper, generally recognized as an authority, who insists that good old cheese is well worth 10 to 10 1-2c. per pound throughout Ontario to-day. His argument is that while there was a large production last year it was absorbed by the British market, at a price, however, which means a heavy loss to practically all the shippers from this side. He points out that the bulk of cheese held in Canada is in strong hands and that the backward Spring has so interfered with the manufacture of the new article that whereas the factories were generally opened up by the first of April last year few of them are yet in a position to open up. These facts, he insists, warrant 10 to 10 1-2c. for good old cheese, and he backs up this claim by the statement that he has sold several lots to wholesale houses at the former figure within the week.

Everything considered it is quite clear that instead of the buoyant activity in the demand at 13c. existing a year ago the present season's cheese market is dull and heavy at prevailing prices.

BACK UP THE LAW.

UNEXPECTEDLY severe sentences have been imposed on the deputy-returning officers and poll clerks convicted of wrongdoing, at the last municipal election in Toronto. The severity of the sentence in each case, however, was quite in keeping with the enormity of the offence. Tampering with election machinery has become a crime of far too frequent occurrence in this country. Its very frequency has deadened the public conscience to its serious nature. An awakening such as Judge Winchester has rudely given the corruptionists, is just what has long been needed to pull the body politic together.

The notable feature of the case is that the law has shown itself no respecter of persons and that stern justice has been meted out alike to men of high social position and to men in humbler walks of life. This is as it should be. Yet it is surprising to find influential public bodies moving for a remission of the sentences of the principal offenders, on the ground of their high standing in the community. In this is to be seen the baneful result of long years of winking at election frauds. Crimes against the person are visited with severe punishment and the public approves, but crimes against the state are merely condoned. It will be a gloomy outlook for political morality in this country unless strong support is given the law in its efforts to stamp out corruption.

BREAD LABELS.

AN agitation is on foot in Montreal for an enquiry into the methods being employed by bakers for attaching labels to their bread. Boards of Health all over the country will approve of such action and the bread-consumer himself will doubtless feel a sense of relief at the prospect of having the whole subject thoroughly investigated.

Every day it seems as if some new channel through which disease germs may be spread is being discovered. Sometimes the channel is obvious. Sometimes it is visionary. The bread label, however, merits serious attention. Its use may be a guarantee of sanitary processes in the manufacture of the bread, but yet, in itself, it may be most unsanitary. The public should be assured that both in the manufacture of the bread and in the fastening on of the label sanitary methods are employed.

NEW FREIGHT REGULATIONS.

THE carload business of Canadian sugar refiners is likely to suffer considerable restriction on account of the recent regulation of Canadian railways which came into force April 1, 1904, naming one hundred barrels as the minimum carload to be carried.

The railways have been wishing to introduce this regulation for the past two years, but refrained only at the urgent solicitation of refiners and the trade generally. It was felt that sooner or later the change would come, and now it is absolute throughout Canada. The reason given by the railways for taking decisive action is the increased carrying capacity of their freight cars.

GOSSIP ABOUT OURSELVES

"GREAT minds in kindred channels run." The other day two members of The Grocer staff came into violent collision, each hastening to find the other.

"I've a bright idea," cried K. on recovering himself.

"Just what I was going to say to you," retorted C.

"We should take our readers into our confidence," continued the first.

"My idea exactly," interrupted the second. "We should have a department about ourselves and give our readers the news connected with the publication of this great trade newspaper."

And so it was settled. If there is one thing sought by The Grocer it is news, market news, trade news, bargain news, personal news, and then we like to tell it.

Some of our friends say we tell too much, but after all that's what makes us worth reading. We are a trade newspaper, and it's our business to tell the news.

The engraver has finished the plates for the cover of our Special Spring and Export Number. They were delivered at our office this week and were examined with a great deal of curiosity by the staff generally, as they are something entirely different from anything we have had before. They are designed for the "three color process," which with three impressions gives the effect of several, and reproduces the design as faithfully as the original painting. An engraver's proof accompanies the plates and gives a result which is surprising when it is considered that but three impressions have been made.

A traveller just returned from the Bermudas brings with him a list of ten new subscribers to The Canadian Grocer. He got a copy from one of our subscribers there and the other Bermudians subscribed on seeing it. Our travelling friend has found that it is much easier to sell goods where the prospective customer is familiar with his firm's advertisement in The Grocer.

The offices of The Grocer in London, England, have recently been removed from 109 Fleet street, E.C., to larger and more commodious quarters at 88 Fleet street. This change has been necessitated by the great increase in the English business of The Grocer. Both circulation and advertising patronage have grown to such proportions in the old land that better accommodation was absolutely necessary, and the manager of the London office has taken prompt steps to secure larger offices.

PAYS TO GROW BEETS.

THE practicability of growing sugar beets in Canada, and the large profits accruing therefrom, was shown in a striking manner at the annual meeting of the Ontario Sugar Company, Berlin, held April 12th.

Valuable testimony to the money-making qualities of the sugar beet was given by a number of large farmers present. One had twelve acres of beets under cultivation last year. He had a crop of fifteen tons to the acre, which brought him on an average over $5 a ton. He received over $900 for his crop, and considered it the best paying crop he could hope to grow, as a matter of fact yielding much more money net than he could have secured from any other crop.

Another who had 26 acres under cultivation received for his crop some $1,600. His net profit was around $550, or nearly $30 per acre.

The experience of beet-growers who attended the meeting was to the effect that while sugar beets required a great deal of labor in their cultivation, there was always a profitable market for the crop; in fact it was sold before it was ready to be marketed. This was something that could not be said of any other crop, which was always dependent upon the rise or fall of the market, and, moreover, the cultivation of sugar beets did not injure the soil, but, on the contrary, improved it, while at the same time it was the best paying crop a farmer could have.

There's Something Doing

Yes, all the time with the progressive dealer who has had the foresight to stock with "Salada" Ceylon Tea, as trial sales have made permanent customers. That's a certainty beyond question. Some grocers commenced buying "Salada" in pretty small quantities, they had heard considerable good reports on it, still they had little faith at heart and did not propose getting caught (as they termed it). But somehow or another these little purchases sold readily and pleased abundantly, with the result that they now sell as much tea in a month as their entire tea trade used to amount to in six months.

There are hundreds of instances like these.

Mr. Reader, where do you stand on the subject?

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Groceries.

Toronto, April 14, 1904.

THE general condition of the grocery market may be characterized as steady, little less business, if any, having been done this week than last. A brisk trade has been doing in canned goods at firm prices. The sugar situation is weaker than it was last week and trade has been quiet. Syrups and molasses are steady at firm prices. A fair business has been done in teas during the past week and firm prices rule. The coffee situation remains unsolved, the Rio market having held very firm, with the result that buyers are holding back expecting prices to drop, which is extremely unlikely. Spices are quiet. The market for rice and tapioca is steady, and firm prices rule, particularly in the latter. There is a seasonable demand for foreign dried fruits, prunes being particularly active, and an advance is reported in sultana raisins, although as yet local prices are unaffected.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market shows signs of firming still further, particularly in corn, peas, beans and tomatoes. There is a brisk demand for all classes of goods at these prices, and one leading firm report their trade in canned goods for the week to have been better than in any other department. SUGAR.

The sugar market for the week under review is quiet, signs of weakness having developed. There have been some sales of centrifugals in New York, on parity of 3 5-8 duty paid, the sugars being San Domingos, which have to pay full duty, and would therefore only fetch $1.94 c. and f. These sugars were afloat and due to arrive. In order to effect a sale it was necessary to make a slight concession of 4c per 100 lbs. The market has been very sensitive for the past week with the tone decidedly in favor of buyers and any pressure to sell sugars would only have resulted in further change.

Refiners' recent heavy purchases have been coming to hand and it has taxed their resources to take care of them. For the present at least they can afford to be independent in respect to offerings of nearby sugars. For weeks past the bulk of receipts have been to refiners and importers stocks in United States Atlantic ports are only 30,000 tons. Stocks in refiners' hands, however, are less than four weeks' supply, and with prospectively heavy meltings they will have to come into the market soon again as buyers. They are to-day buyers of Cuban centrifugals for May shipment on basis of 2 5-16 c. and f., which is equivalent to 1-32 over duty paid parity of this week's sales. Cuban holders are sellers of nearby sugars on this basis, but for later shipments are holding for 2 3-8 c. and f. For some time to come the market will probably favor buyers owing to anticipated heavy receipts. Later on, however, there is likely to be a reaction in favor of sellers with renewed buying activity, and probably some appreciation in values with perhaps occasional fluctuations.

Receipts at United States Atlantic ports for the week ending April 6 were 40,239 tons, with meltings 36,000 tons, which latter figures are equal to those for the previous week and are 11,000 tons more than for the corresponding period of 1903. For the year to date meltings of American refiners are 69,000 tons more than for the previous year. Total stocks in all hands on April 6 were 140,323 tons, which was 66,014 tons less than for the same period last year. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba were 407,323 tons, against 551,021 tons for last year, the decrease being 143,698 tons.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,523,323 tons, against 3,537,939 tons last year, showing a decrease therefrom of 14,616 tons. The number of central factories grinding in Cuba at latest advices was 171, which has been the figure for some weeks past. There are those who anticipate that the total production in Cuba this year will be 1,180,000 tons as compared with last year's crop of 998,878 tons, of which approximately 490,000 was made after March 31. The visible production up to the end of March, 1904, is estimated at 680,000 tons which would leave the prospective production of 500, 000 tons during the balance of the season. This will be mostly required for United States markets as prospective receipts during the next four months from non-preferential countries are expected to be small, notably from Java, which cannot give the United States half the quantity shipped last year between April and July.

Canadian refiners are reported to have been ready buyers of British West Indian sugars at fully 3-16 above parity of recent c. and f. sales in New York. There have been slight shadings in European prices during the week, to-day's quotation being 8s 5 1-4d for 88 per cent. basis f.o.b. Hamburg, which shows a decline of 1 1-2d from last advices. The refined market is dull. One American refiner has been cutting prices 10c per 100 lbs on prompt shipments without finding many buyers, the demand being confined principally to calls against contracts. Other American refiners maintain full list quotations.

There are no changes to record in Canadian refined, though the feeling at the moment is one of uncertainty, buying being only for absolute requirements. Carload business is an unknown quantity at the present time; it will suffer some restriction from the recent regulation of Canadian railways made effective April 1, naming 100 barrels as a minimum carload. SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade in syrups and molasses is reported as satisfactory for the week, the demand being good at firm prices. The first local shipment of West Indian molasses arrived on the market this week and is pronounced to be of very fine quality. It is not unlikely that the new product may take the place of the New Orleans article, as a result of the prohibitive test placed on the latter. Our quotations are as follows:

TEAS.

The tea market continnes firm and strong with active demand for good medium Ceylons, Ceylon greens and some trade in Japans. The feature of the week is the increased demand for high-priced teas.

The latest London report shows that there has been an increased consumption of Indian and Ceylon teas in nearly every important foreign market, an additional quantity of Ceylon tea in America, and of Indian tea in Russia being taken. Our quotations are as follows:

COFFEES.

The principal item of interest in the coffee market this week is the continued firmness of the Rio market. Dealers are practically sold out, and have been asking for reasonable coffee quotations for weeks, but the outcome so far is only for speculators to hold stocks back for higher prices. It looks as if prospective buyers would have to pay the increased price. At present, however, little or no business is doing in Rios. The demand for Mochas, Javas, etc., shows no fluctuation, being steady at quotation prices. Our quotations are as follows:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is not much change to report from last week's rice and tapioca market. Firm prices rule in both, particularly in the latter, and the demand is steady. Last week's prices continue unchanged. We quote the following prices:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

There is a seasonable demand for foreign dried fruits at quotation prices, especially for prunes, which are moving very freely. Advices from Smyrna say there has been a further advance in prices of sultana raisins. As soon as stocks of dried fruits get a little lower it is expected the demand will improve. Our quotations are as follows:

EGGS.

The price of eggs is beginning to show signs of becoming normal, having dropped to 15c, with prospects of a further drop shortly. This gradual decline must continue until the pickling basis is reached. Supplies are coming very freely, although there has been no surplus stock until the last couple of days. A brisk demand is reported. Our quotations are as follows:

Fish.

The fish market continues quiet, with supplies of frozen stock gradually disappearing. Perch are out of the market. Green Fruits.

The green fruit market has been comparatively quiet for the last day or two on account of the cold weather, but as a brisk fruit trade is beginning to open up now it is not expected that such conditions will continue. California navel oranges are still in big demand and firmer in price. Valencia oranges have advanced three shillings in England, but as yet no noticeable change in local prices is reported. The lemon market is quiet and prices are easier; as a matter of fact the local market has been loaded ever since last December. Jamaica grape fruit is quoted this week at $7.50. Florida pines have been supplanted by stock from Havana. Bananas are plentiful and easier in price, the demand for both of these is brisk and it is expected that within a couple of weeks the season will be at its height. Owing to the big demand for bananas it is thought high prices will rule for 30 or 60 days. A few Almeria grapes are seen on the market, and are quoted at $8.50. Florida tomatoes are coming more freely, stocks are improving in quality, the demand is increasing and prices are 75c easier. The market for strawberries is improving and prices tend to become easier. Reports from North Carolina say the berry crop there is not so heavy as usual this year and that it is at least two weeks later than last year. This crop will be here shortly as the end of the Louisiana crop will soon be reached. A few bunches of red bananas are noticed on the market and are quoted at $2.50 per bunch. We quote the following prices:

Vegetables.

The demand for vegetables is good this week, particularly for green stuff, which is difficult to get. Potatoes are slightly firmer. Parsnips are more plentiful and 25c easier in price. Onions have been scarce locally for the last two or three days, but supplies of European onions are expected shortly. There is a fair amount of rhubarb in the market, with a pronounced scarcity of green onions and radishes which have advanced in price. The end of the California celery season is about here, and American speculators have what remains of stocks pretty well under their control. Only a few more shipments are expected. Spinach is easier in price. We quote the following prices:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The market is very dull this week. A general decline in prices has taken place. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is 1-2 to 2 1-2c easier. Manitoba wheat, Northern No. 1 is 3 to 3 1-2c easier. No. 2 Northern, 2 1-2c easier. Red and white wheat are each 1 to 2c cheaper. Oats are 1-2 to 1c. lower, while peas have dropped 6c. The sympathy of the American market is in all probability largely responsible for the drop. We quote:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, April 14, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery trade was generally quiet throughout the week. There was, however, a marked activity in sugar and some splendid orders have been placed by the refiners here for West India sugars. This has restored a kindly feeling between the brokers and refiners. The evaporated apple corner was watched with interest but what amazed the local grocers was that no change in prices had gone into effect at the time of writing, though it is reported that Western holders are asking 6¼c f. o. b. The general feeling in the trade is that whoever was responsible for the corner would have to wait a long time to get any profit. Dried fruit remains in the steady list, with demand good. Small fruits for confectionery purposes were reported slightly dearer, desirable parcels finding ready buyers. The advance in starch and matches has been maintained and eggs have dropped away down to 16 cents.

The green fruit market has exhibited considerable strength, although bananas dropped to a range of from $1.50 to $2.25. There was a slight demand for canned goods, though buyers confined themselves to purchases on the smallest scale possible. The consumptive demand for pepper seems brisk with prices of some kinds lower. Small quantities of Jamaica ginger are being offered though the quality is reported quite inferior. Canary seed has again suffered a reduction of price. Heavy shipments of Rangoon rice to Japan are reported and prices remain firm with every likelihood of them remaining so. In tea and coffee there has been no notable change. Some fluctuations have been reported from New York, but the normal market is maintained. A noticeable drop in the fruit market was the fall in pineapples of $1 and more per case. Florida tomatoes dropped 50 cents a crate. The potato market has been strong all the week owing to the presence of some American buyers who have paid top prices.

SUGAR.

Absolutely without a feature yet full of activity, describes the sugar market pretty accurately. Plenty of West India sugar will be coming to the port very shortly and no doubt prices may be easier. We quote :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The decline reported from the West Indies has been continued and further decline has taken place. There is still said to be plenty of molasses on the way to Montreal and also plenty of molasses in the country. The price at the Island was 9c, and futures were offering at 24½ in car load. We quote :

COFFEE.

This favorite article of consumption continues to be interesting, although the market remains unchanged. The receipts from the countries of production continue to be light and the shortness keeps the operators in the big markets in continuous difficulties when they try to force prices down. Costa Rica supplies are reported coming to hand much more freely. As usual at the end of the season the news from East India it to the effect that the quality already shows signs of deteriorating. That there is little fluctuation is due largely to the speculative interests. On its merits, however, coffee appears to be at a fair price and no change is looked for at present.

TEA.

It would take a keen manipulator of the market to definitely understand the tea situation. It is not apparently as easy as it was a month ago. A good steady demand prevails for Japans and Ceylon greens, yet it looks as if inside a month there might easily be a weak turn again. Buyers are playing the waiting game. Jobbers and retailers seem to be stocked up. No heavy buying is expected for another month. Then some light may dawn as to the future of the tea market. The new Japan crop will be ready for the picking and some idea may be formed of the quality of it. The war will not interfere with the crop at all and there is every indication of a fine first crop. Freight might be affected by Russia succeeding in putting a fleet in Japanese waters. Such a move would have a serious effect on the tea market. The movements reported in India and Ceylon teas were considered satisfactory. Active enquiry has been carried on and the markets are firm and the demand good. We quote :

CANNED GOODS

There is a fair demand for canned goods and the tendency of prices is upwards. Salmon continues to be a feature. The present prices are not popular with the consumer and the quotations will to some extent affect consumption. There does not appear to be any sign of lower prices throughout the best consuming months of the year. Sardines remain firm and the demand is good. Retailers should pay attention to California fruit for they show exceptional value. Apples and tomatoes are selling slowly. Corn should be a good purchase as there is no probability of it being any lower. In canned fruits the C. C. C. Co. have issued a circular stating that an advance of five per cent. will take effect April 25th. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Fair demand has marked dried fruit of all kinds. The advance in small confectionery fruit has been slight. Regarding Sultanas the reports of the unfavorable weather in the districts of Smyrna have received ample confirmation, and a slight advance was reported from abroad. The local market has remained unchanged. Holders are asking good prices here and some further advances may take place before long. Plums and evaporated fruits are in strong demand and prices are firm. It would seem wise to watch out for the advance in Sultanas. From Gridley, California, comes the report of a light almond crop even if there are no killing frosts. The extremely wet weather, while the trees were in blossom, acted to the detriment of the crop, causing the pollen to wash from the blossoms and preventing bees from visiting the flowers. Fruit growers are confident that conditions are satisfactory in other lines of fruit. We quote :

Green Fruits.

The market has shown considerable strength. A remarkable story has been circulated in reliable circles (emanating from Los Angeles, California,) stating that orange growers of Southern California are facing a condition of affairs which, to many of them, will prove ruinous. Throughout the great orange belt, fruit is said to be rotting on the trees. Men conversant with the situation say that it will be utterly impossible to market the crop. One reason assigned for it is the severe eastern Winter, and another, lack of cars to remove the fruit.

Locally bananas have gone down in price and are selling freely at $1.50 to $2.25. Canadian apples have gone up and range with good demand from $2.75 to $4.50 per bbl. Pineapples faded in price at the last quotation from $5.50 away to $4.25. Strawberries still maintain good demand at 40 cents a quart box while some Chicago berries were selling at 25c, the boxes being about three-quarter quarts. Peanuts are dear and were selling at 12c a lb. Asparagus brings $5.50 a dozen bunches but it is sure to be much dearer. We quote :

Fish.

Fresh fish is coming in well in some descriptions but the lake fisheries are backward and no supplies will be obtainable for at least ten days. Most of the big dealers have some very acceptable varieties. Fresh live halibut and live haddock are coming in quite freely and prices are easier. However, the fish market is uninteresting. Some fresh B. C. salmon arrived and were selling well at 18 to 20c. The season for dore will close on April 15, and remain closed until May 15, so that it will not be quoted to-day. A delicacy that will interest the connoisseur will be in the shops shortly. Blue points are referred to. One dealer said he would have some next week. Crabs are a very expensive dish. They are to be had at high prices. No land office business in these lines is ever done in small cities. We quote :

Country Produce.

EGGS.

Once more eggs are at reasonable rates. The market remained steady yesterday and to-day at 15c for lots and 16c for cases. Each day will undoubtedly show a decline. Supplies on the spot seem to be light and the market is comparatively firm. Deliveries to date have been small. Prices being paid to shippers at country points seem to be 13c, making the average cost about 14c in the city. To avoid loss most of the merchants are handling eggs on consignment.

BEANS.

The market for beans is featureless and the demand is fair only. In jobbing lots choice prime beans have been sold at $1.45 to $1.50, and primes at $1.40 a bushel, while car lots of choice primes were sold at $1.40 and primes at $1.35.

HONEY.

No sign of improvement marked the demand for honey. White clover is still scarce at 13½ and 14c. Extracted white clover was quoted at 8½ to 9c in ten lb. tins, and 7 to 7½c in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat still remains 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

Prices ruled strong for potatoes today as there were some American buyers in the Townships offering good stiff rates so that here 90 lb. bags were readily bringing 75 cents, car loads on track. Fair stock would bring 70 cents on track. Broken lots in the stores brought 10c a bag more.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Liberal supplies of maple products of various grades are now in the market and the demand is steady in all departments. The stocks exhibited from Beauce and the Townships are all of fine quality and good prices will no doubt be maintained despite the liberal supplies. We quote :

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

There are marked signs of a waiting game in the flour markets. Retailers and bakers are loath to buy, fearing that the market will fall shortly after the speculators get through gambling with wheat. There is strong sympathy with wheat when it hovers around the dollar mark. However, it is the actual value of wheat, not the speculative, that affects flour. Russia is a great wheat growing country and the war with Japan will hinder the customary crop so that there will be a cause for flour remaining high. Then there is every probability that Manchuria, another wheat producing country, will have but a small crop owing to the war. With these conditions facing our markets, flour should be a grand investment and it may as well be understood that flour is going to be higher. We quote :

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., April 11, 1904.

As usual, the last Winter-port steamers to arrive are full of cargo and are taking large cargoes away. There are also large numbers of immigrants landing. At the time of writing, there is a full complement of boats in. It is said the Manchester line will run steamers here all Summer. Our local merchants would greatly appreciate a Summer service with Liverpool. Our river is not yet open, though steamers are running for a short distance. It is now nearly three weeks later that the river opened last season and rather more than three weeks later than the previous year. It is said to be better for business that the river should not open too early.

In business our merchants report a good movement. Payments are not altogether satisfactory. The extreme weather during the past Winter is said to have affected business throughout the country considerably. The packets running to Nova Scotia and other bay ports have large cargoes of Spring goods shipped by the wholesale trade, as well as some through goods. One item of export to Nova Scotia which is very large this Spring is hay.

In markets the changes during the week have been few. There is still quite a strong tone, particularly in sugar and fish. In spices, ginger continues low. Cream of tartar is quite firm. Nutmegs still low. Cloves not quite as firm.

Oil.

This is the beginning of the quiet season for handlers of burning oil. The wholesale trade are little interested, however, as the trade, particularly in the city, are supplied by the two oil companies located here. Lubricating oils have much attention. Competition is keen. In paint oils stock is now moving quite freely. Linseeds continue low, with turpentine firm at full figures.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt full stocks are held. The receipts during the Winter were about as usual. In price there is no change. There is likely to be little, if any, change during the year, owing to an agreement entered into with the shippers on the other side. In fine salt, Spring orders for Canadian have been placed and the season is now open.

Canned Goods.

There is little of interest. Our trade seem well supplied. Corn is the line of chief interest. Tomatoes are quite firm, but not at all as firm as last year. Peas are in a fair supply. In fruits the market seems well supplied. There is some inquiry for peaches. Meats have shown but one small advance. In salmon the market is well supplied. Oysters are no higher. Finnan haddies are very scarce. The packing season opens soon.

Green Fruit.

While bananas are now freely received, it is early for full demand. Apples are quite high, chiefly Ontario Spies being offered. Oranges are plentiful, Valencias, Californias, and Floridas being offered. Prices are rather firmer. Lemons keep low. In a retail way strawberries and rhubarb are seen on the market.

Dried Fruit.

There is a fair sale for small sized prunes. In seeded raisins the stock is not large, but bulk raisins are quite largely held. Currants show a steady sale at even prices. Evaporated peaches are reasonable in price but apricots are high. Dates are quoted low. Evaporated apples are considerably firmer. Valancia and Egyptian onions are being offered. The first arrivals of the latter were quite low, but the market is now higher. Peanuts are high.

Sugar.

While the market is very firm there has been no change in prices this week. Dealers are holding full stocks.

Molasses.

Quite a stock of new Barbadoes is being held and the price is low. Several cargoes of Porto Rico are due. One cargo having been transhipped from an American port, there is likely to be considerable competition. Quite a quantity of old Porto Rico is still held.

Fish.

As is usual just after Lent, the market is quiet. There is a fair supply of fresh fish. Gaspereaux are now being quite freely received. In dry codfish high prices still rule. Pickled fish are still held at full figures. Smoked herring are very scarce. The season for large Western shipments of haddies is over.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

There has been no change in price during the week in flour. Buyers are inclined to hold off. In feed there has been a steady sale. Oatmeal is still high but package oats were not advanced with bulk goods. The large sale of package foods affects the sale of oatmeal very largely. There is a good movement. Beans are not as firm, and the sale is dull with a fair stock held. Seeds are having attention with prices unchanged. The demand this season is more for good seed than usual.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, April 11, 1904.

BUSINESS for the past week shows a great improvement over the week before. The market practically holds the same price list.

Sugars—The market remains firm with no change in price since the 14th of March. Montreal granulated is quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks.

Eggs—Eggs are very scarce and there are practically none coming in. The dealers ask 25c for fresh gathered.

Butter—There is a heavy demand for choice butter, which is very scarce. The market quotes fresh pound prints from 25 to 28c. Tub butter is also holding its own.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits — All lines remain firm. The market holds evaporated apples slightly in advance of last week.

Canned Vegetables—There is practically no change in prices and the market remains firm.

Canned Fruits—At present all canned fruits remain firm but, as the canning houses expect a poor crop this year, prices on all lines of canned fruits will advance April 25th.

Flour—The situation of the flour market remains strong and practically unchanged. No. 1 patent is still quoted at $2.75.

Cured Meats—The market is a little firmer. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, picnic hams at 13½, shoulders 8¾c, breakfast backs 11½c, long spice rolls 11½c, short rolls 10¾c, long dry clear 9c, and dry salt backs 10c.

Lard—The market is very firm, with pure lard in 50 lb. tubs quoted at $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 5 lb. pails $6.60, and 3 lb. pails $6.65, compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, April 11th, 1904.

THE fine warm weather of the last week has put a little more life into business and wholesale houses now show considerable energy in pushing trade. Travellers' orders are showing an improvement. Business during January and February was up to the average, but March showed a considerable falling off, owing in part to difficulties in transportation. April has now opened well and probably the first four months of 1904 will average up as well as the corresponding period last year. Failures were numerous in the province during January. There were few in February, but March brought forty-four—an unusually large number compared with the failure list in the neighboring provinces. Conditions are unfavorable at Sydney and in the fishing districts. Elsewhere industry is flourishing and trade excellent. The Spring fishery has started up well and very large catches are being made, which will improve matters in the shore counties. At Sydney, the rod mill will shortly be in operation and while no one expects the activity that prevailed when the boom was at its height, a steady expansion and healthy growth will restore to some extent the confidence of traders.

Markets are steady. Flour is now in good supply, as lots contracted for months ago and delayed during the freight blockade, are now arriving. Millers are reported indifferent regarding new business and the jobbers, therefore, are firm in upholding prices. Cornmeal has advanced about ten cents and it is claimed that the price should advance another 25 cents to be on a level with cost of production. Rolled oats are firm at the recent advances.

Cheese is dull and local stocks larger than required this season. There are no fodders being made. Some of the local butter factories have started up and others are preparing to do so. All the early milk will be turned into butter and it is not unlikely that supplies will soon be greater than the market can absorb. This must lead to a fall in the price. Eggs still keep up to 18 cents. The warm weather of the last week has led to an accumulation at country points and a decline is expected.

Sugar has been steady for the last few weeks. A further advance is probable before this is in print. The molasses market has grown firmer and it is becoming evident that the demoralization of trade in the Maritime Province markets for the last month or two was

On Quality rests the ability to repeat the sale to the customer and to the people to whom she recommends the article.

On Quantity rests the burden of making the customer feel fully satisfied that they have got as much as is compatible with quality and price.

On Price rest the burdens of the other two, with this added, that it must be within easy reach of the average purse.

There has been a good deal of activity lately in Prince Edward Island produce at this port. The local demand has not been heavy but quite large quantities are being transhipped to Boston by steamer. Island potatoes are jobbing at 55 cents per bushel at the wharves ex vessel and Island oats at 48 cents. The market is firm at these quotations.

Fresh fish are now quite plentiful and the market well supplied. The Halifax bankers have been arriving weekly with good fares of cod and haddock, and last week they brought in a large proportion of halibut, one schooner having 4,000 lbs. of the latter, which sold at 14 cents per pound.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., April 9, 1904.

WHILE local retail circles report rather quiet business, the wholesale trade is doing well. Outside orders, and especially orders for Northern shipment, are good. Large shipments of goods for up-coast cannery points have already begun to move. Shipments to White Horse, via Skagway, are also heavier than they have been for some time. The movement of people North has begun to assume the proportions expected. The last steamer to leave port was the City of Seattle, which sailed last night with 140 passengers, many of them from this port. Quite a number were returning to Dawson after wintering outside, but a good percentage were en route to the new diggings in the Alsek District.

There are a number of buyers in the city from Dawson already, getting their first stocks ready for shipment to White Horse in time for the opening of navigation on the Yukon. It will be a month yet before it will be possible to send goods North, as the river is not likely to show signs of opening before the middle of May. The merchants of the Yukon are, however, not going to be caught short like they were last year when a combination of circumstances caused great difficulties in getting stocks into the North before the river closed.

Mr. Blakeslee, representing the Frontenac Cereal Co., who has been in the West for some weeks introducing Orange Meat, leaves for the East to-day. He has been interviewed by the daily press here concerning the report that his firm intends erecting a factory here. Nothing definite has been given out. Mr. F. McIntyre, of the W. H. Malkin Co., Limited, is the first salesman in the province to win a gold watch offered as a prize by the Frontenac people for selling 50 cases of Orange Meat to the retail trade. He is in receipt of an order for the watch, having made the sales in less than two weeks.

One feature of the grocery trade in Northern shipments this year will be that the canned goods stock, especially vegetables, will be all cleaned up early, as the Northern buyers show a tendency to get all they can in early. The canned goods situation here exhibits no further changes, prices being steady and stocks being well up to requirements. Retailers bought their supplies early last Fall, anticipating a rise, so that wholesale deliveries locally have been quiet. The price is still as quoted, $1.50 for tomatoes, $1.15 for corn, beans and peas.

Dried fruits are firm and perhaps a half cent higher than last quotations. The price for apricots is now firm at 11½c, peaches and pears 8½c, prunes 4½c to 7c.

Eastern tinned fruits are selling more freely this season than last. The tendency is to buy larger quantities from the East and less from the California packers. This is more especially true in those lines in which the Eastern trade has acceded to the demand of this market for a 2½ lb. tin, the same size as the United States packers put up. It will be remembered that a year ago this matter was pointed out in this column. The trade here now reports that they can get orders filled in the size mentioned, which is an improvement over former conditions. This demand is largely because there is a good deal of trade with people who have lived in the United States and are used to the size mentioned.

Rice is easy in the market here, the price being $98, cleared, for the Rising Sun brand, the standard of the Japanese rice mills. Importations are likely to be light now as there are sufficient stocks for a long time to come.

Flour is unmoved. The carlot quotation is firm at $6 per barrel, while small lots are $6.20.

Rather a large importation for this season of the year was a lot of over 400 sacks of walnuts from California which arrived on the "City of Puebla" from San Francisco on Wednesday night, en route to Winnipeg. What makes it the more noteworthy is that since the arrival of the French stocks two weeks before Christmas, the trade here has not been selling California walnuts. The Grenobles are better by far, and a good deal cheaper.

In produce lines this week there is noted a change in the source of the fresh butter supply. The importations from California were not up to the standard of former importations, and not to the taste of the consuming trade at all. As a consequence there is no more coming. Instead, dealers are buying in Washington State and in Oregon. The finest fresh grass creamery is being brought in and sold at 27 cents, bricked, but the price is firm at that. All held stocks of Manitoba and N.W.T. creamery and dairy are pretty well cleaned up.

Eggs have again become scarce. Local stock has been filling the local demand and shipments north have been very small in this line of late. For a time the price eased off considerably, but now it is stiffer, local fresh being held firm at 25c and very scarce at that.

The first fresh cheese, from California, full cream, arrived by the boat on Wednesday evening. It is quoted at 16 cents.

American brands of cured meats are quoted 1-2c up this week. Canadian remain firm. No change in lard noted this week.

In fruits there is nothing new to report. California still ships oranges freely, but the line of cheap navels which has been on the market all the way from $1.50 to $2, will not be repeated. All the better grades have already gone up a little, though still relatively cheap.

In vegetables the market continues to be well supplied with the fresh stocks from California, while potatoes remain about the same. Ashcroft's are quoted at $24 per ton, and not over plentiful. Some stocks are coming forward from Vernon, but these Okanagan Valley potatoes are virtually the same as Ashcroft's, and are held at the same price.

BREAD REGULATIONS.

ALD. DAGENAIS, of Montreal, is fighting a strong fight for civic reform regarding food stuffs. At the last Council meeting he, as chairman of the Health Committee, made a motion to amend the bread by-law. The substance of the motion was to force all grocers and confectioners to keep their bread inside the shops instead of displaying it outside. This is only one of the many changes in bread regulations which he wishes to make. He believes that much disease is spread by the dirty handling of bread. He too, is going to deal with the bread-sticker question, which was brought to his notice through The Grocer.

A FREE PHOTO FOR MONTREAL GROCERS.

At the last meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, Mr. J. P. Dixon, late secretary of the association, presented the offer of Mr. J. A. Dumas, photographer, St. Lawrence and Vitre streets, to every member of the association to have a cabinet size photo taken free. This offer, Mr. Dixon explained, was made to the members in order that a large group photo might be prepared for the association. The photo exhibited by Mr. Dixon was in Mr. Dumas' best style, and that is the best guarantee. The Grocer takes pleasure in calling the members' attention to Mr. Dumas' offer and trusts they will take advantage of the same. The object is a worthy one and the group will be a pleasant and interesting souvenir for the association's room at the Monument National.

TRAVELLER'S DEATH.

Mr. Archibald McNown, who represented Lockerby Bros., Montreal, in Eastern Ontario and part of Quebec, died on Saturday, April 2nd at his residence in Cornwall. Mr. McNown, who was an old and popular traveller, before entering the life of a traveller, was in business at River Beaudette for 15 years, and after selling out was appointed by the Government as land valuator on the Soulanges canal. About five years ago he joined the travelling staff of Lockerby Bros., wholesale grocers, covering the territory above noted. His illness was a brief one, and the cause of his death was neuralgia of the heart. His age was 55 years. Besides the widow he leaves a family of five sons and two daughters. Mr. McNown was a brother-in-law of Mr. A. L. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros. A wide circle of friends will mourn the loss of "Archie" McNown.

ASSOCIATION NEWS.

Montreal Grocers to Close Early.

AT a meeting of the Montreal Grocers' Association on April 7th, the question of early closing one night a week was discussed, and agreement to close on Thursday nights instead of Wednesday arrived at. The reason for the change is because many are not holding to the original agreement to close on Wednesday. The association decided to assist the retail merchants of Quebec in their endeavor to have trading stamps suppressed. The president and secretary were appointed to arrange for the organization of a federation of the commercial associations of Montreal.

Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held on Monday evening, April 11, in St. George's Hall, the president, F. W. Johnston, in the chair.

Among other items of interest was a brisk discussion on the new fruit regulations, which may possibly be introduced during the coming year. If they materialize retail grocers will be required to haul their own fruit. No decision was arrived at and the association decided not to take any action at present. The balance sheet for the annual at home was presented, showing a balance on hand of $35.80, the largest profit in 15 years.

The event of the evening, however, was an address on "Tea and its Cultivation," given by R. McKay, manager of the Blue Ribbon Tea Company, of Toronto. Mr. McKay has made a thorough study of tea and as it has been his favorite hobby for years he is well qualified to give reliable information on this particular subject. Last evening's address, which is published in full on another page of this issue of Grocer, was instructive in the extreme, and met with a most enthusiastic reception from the members of the association. It is expected that such addresses on subjects of vital interert to the grocery trade will become a regular feature of meetings of the association.

A Retail Grocers' Association has been formed at Collingwood.

INDIAN GREEN TEA AND ARTIFICIAL COLORING.

(Indian Tea Planters' Gazette.)

AS Ceylon, for the most part, artificially colors her green teas, and as she will probably produce some twelve million pounds, as against our four or five million pounds this year, it is possible that Indian green tea manufacturers may deem it desirable to follow suit, simply for the sake of securing some degree of uniformity.

Although artificial coloring has not been adopted by us up to date, it has several advantages which will considerably benefit us, so all things considered, we may find it necessary to follow Ceylon's lead and artificially color a large proportion of our crop. As the American and Canadian markets prefer such teas and insist on having them, there appears to be no way out of the difficulty but to provide them with what they want, and not what we choose to give them.

TRADE WITH JAPAN.

"IN useful work there is no degree. That which is necessary is saved —and nothing else is." This statement was sifted from many other strong ones that referred to Canadian trade and were expressed by Mr. Alexander McLean, the recently appointed Canadian commercial agent to Japan. He was at the Montreal Board of Trade last week for a couple of days where he met local merchants and those interested in the trade in the Far East.

Personally he is an illustration of the truism that every man gravitates to where he belongs, sooner or later. He began life as a general storekeeper. He early discovered his talent for trade. He developed it at every opportunity. Later he became a manufacturer and studied the laws of supply and demand; searched the markets of the world and felt the pulse of general commerce by knowing his own business thoroughly. Then he is well posted on Canada and her trade wants.

It was at the Osaka exposition in Japan last year that Canada made a strong impression upon the Eastern merchants and consumers and that impression has been followed by the Government in the appointment of Mr. McLean. He will be stationed at Yokohama, for which port he will sail on May 2.

Flour, he thought, would be almost certainly the leading product that would be in demand there and he said that it, at present, was supplied by the Western States. He had great hope, too, for cured meats and canned fish and especially salmon. In other lines there should be a profitable opening for woollen and cotton goods, pulp, paper and rubber goods, plated ware, bicycles, sewing machines, hand tools of all descriptions, cut and wire nails, lumber, cabinetware, organs, pianos, hides, leather and even for hays and grains.

THE UNITED STATES RECIPROCITY FAD.

RECIPROCITY talk has become an epidemic in the United States. Only the other day the Boston Herald went to the trouble to publish interviews with American Senators in Washington relative to reciprocity with Canada. Senators Hoar and Lodge, like most of their New England colleagues were in favor of reciprocal relations if only "genuine reciprocity" could be effected, but they make the usual qualification that they would not favor any arrangement along this line that would "result in great benefits to Canada and in detriment to the interests of New England."

Two of the interviews as reported are interesting, as they refer to the fisheries. Senator Hoar thought it was better to accomplish reciprocity by legislation rather than by a treaty, saying afterwards:

"I am not in favor of selling out the Gloucester fisheries to Canada. I take too much pride in the naval history of Massachusetts to do that. I do not wish to be haunted all the rest of my life by the ghost of old John Adams or of John Quincy Adams. I should as soon think of selling the naval school at Annapolis. These fisheries have been the nurseries of seamen from the beginning—from a time long before the revolution. If we may trust Admiral Porter; if we may trust Secretary Moody; if we may trust any naval expert who knows anything about the matter, they were never of greater value than in recent days since the introduction of steam."

Senator William P. Frye, of Maine, said: "If Canada were an independent state, probably a satisfactory reciprocity treaty might be entered into between the two countries, but so long as Great Britain is finally to determine the terms of such a treaty, it seems to me, for reasons apparent to any one, that a problem is furnished very difficult of solution. Canada desires to export to our country, very largely, her agricultural products, while we seek, within her borders, a market for the products of our manufacturers. Will Great Britain ever consent to a treaty giving our country any preference over her in the markets of Canada? Would any treaty under which we only had equal privileges with her be acceptable to us?"

Perhaps the opinion expressed by Congressman Butler Ames expresses the general American sentiment: "All I care to say is that at the present time I am in favor of genuine, not sham, reciprocity."

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFFS OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

A PERPETUAL INVENTORY FOR A RETAIL STORE.

TO know just how a business stands, says a writer in System, a perpetual inventory of stock is necessary. A card, similar to Figure 1, is used for each article in stock and is headed with the name of the article. Below this is kept a record of the goods received, with the date and quantity, and a record of the goods issued or disbursed and the balance on hand. This gives a perpetual inventory. If desired, the cards may be arranged to show the names of concerns from which the goods are purchased, with the prices, so that the cards will show not only quantities, but the values of the stock on hand.

For each article in stock a maximum, normal and minimum limit should be established. These limits should be entered on the space provided for the purpose at the head of the card, so that the cards will always indicate when goods should be ordered.

The cards should be arranged according to the class of goods, first dividing the stock into its various classes and arranging these in alphabetical sequence. A half-cut centre projection guide card is used to indicate each class. In front of these guides the stock cards are filled either alphabetically or by sizes, depending on the nature of the stock.

These stock records may be easily kept by the cashier, as the sales in the different departments may be tabulated on a sheet as the sales slips come in.

In this connection we call your attention to a very simple system for keeping our credit accounts. This is a folder system, using a 4x6-inch folder, as shown in Figure 2.

Instead of copying the items from the duplicate sales tickets, the total amount of the ticket is entered in the debit column on the outside of the folder, the date and ticket number being given. The tickets themselves are then filed in the folder. This makes a filing system and ledger combined. The folders are filed in a regular card drawer, indexed with alphabetical guides.

Two sets of guides are used to separate the open and closed accounts. When an account is paid or balanced, the folder is transferred to the division of paid accounts. Here it is indexed in the same manner as in the first division, so that if the account is reopened the folder may be readily located, and may be used until the space is entirely filled up.

With this system but one copy of the items is necessary, and that when the charge ticket is made out or the order taken. If a customer calls at the store to settle his account, the original entries may be shown him. This makes a satisfied customer, as there is no possible chance for a dispute when the customers see the charge slips themselves. In case an itemized statement is necessary, this can be made out from the charge slips themselves as quickly as though the items were entered on the ledger page.

CORRESPONDENCE RESPONSIBILITY.

UPON those who dictate the correspondence rests a still heavier responsibility, says Profitable Advertising. This is entirely too big a subject for casual comment.

It is one of the greatest fields in any business for the exercise of intelligence and tact.

Not only one's familiarity with the business itself, but one's whole knowledge of men and affairs is called into play.

A man can go on for a lifetime perfecting himself in such work.

In handling a large correspondence constant self-discipline is required to give the dictation life and interest.

The tendency is to degenerate into a mere machine, to use stereotyped forms and phrases.

Most business men seem incapable of putting their own personality into a letter, unless they are angry.

When a man is angry he should call his stenographer and dictate freely all that he feels inclined to say, have it carefully written out, read it thoughtfully, and then tear it up. It gets the load off his chest, and at a later hour or the next day he may be better qualified to do himself justice.

No outward expression of a business is of more vital consequence than the mail that goes out every day; what is said and the way it is said. The spirit of your business is sure to show in your correspondence.

THE MAIL ORDER BUSINESS.

AN interesting phase of the development of the mail-order idea, remarks Profitable Advertising, is the opportunity offered persons with very little capital to go into the business. There are many manufacturers who will furnish printed matter for distribution and fill all orders received, thus obviating the necessity of paying out money for preliminary advertising matter or for stock. The initial expense, then, is merely the cost of postage, which may be made as much or as little as convenient.

It is doubtful, however, if experiences of this sort prove satisfactory. Simply sending out a few batches of printed matter will not establish a paying business, and unless one has some practical knowledge of successful methods of promoting sales he had better think twice before taking this "short cut" to riches.

The mail-order business is a very attractive proposition, but, as in every other enterprise, brains, energy, money, and time are required to make it successful.

A QUESTION OF ARRANGING ACCOUNTS.

The Business World recently published the following from a reader: "The writer desires an opinion on a much disputed question, and the matter is left to you for final decision.

"The subject at hand is one of averaging accounts. The facts are as follows:

"A purchases various bills amounting to $5,185.79 on terms of sixty days, 7-10. These purchases average due May 9. Prior to maturity of these purchases the following partial payments on account are made:

January 3	$1,000
January 9	500
January 23	500
March 17	1,000
May 6	1,000

"On December 12, A settles the above account, deducting cash discount on the total purchases, and tenders B his check for $700 in full settlement, less interest of $23.50, or a net check of $676.33. At the time of sending the check for $676.33 he deducted thirty days' interest, and the $676.33 is supposed to represent the net balance due at date of December 12.

"B maintains that the check of $676.33 did not settle the account, but left a balance due (owing to him), A having deducted too much interest for anticipation. The dispute arises on what constitutes the balance of account.

"A maintains that the balance of the account is the amount due after all discounts were deducted.

"B states that the discount does not enter into the question of average, but that the balance in averaging the payments should be the amount before the discount is deducted, viz.: $1,055 and not $700. As this makes a difference of some days I would ask your respected opinion on same. Trust that you will answer this through the columns of your paper, as it will interest many."

GREEN FRUITS

U. S. Fruit in Quebec.

UNITED STATES CONSUL LANG, of Sherbrooke, writes to his Government on the subject of United States fruit in the Province of Quebec. He says: "Evaporated fruits—apricots, pears, peaches and prunes—from California are sold in this section to a large extent. They are about the only evaporated fruits used and have supplanted the sale of such fruits from other markets. They are well packed in 25-pound boxes, and are very satisfactory. They are brought to Montreal in train-load lots, and the Montreal jobbers supply this province.

"A considerable quantity of California canned fruits, peaches, pears, apricots, and cherries are also consumed here, being bought through commission houses in Boston, Mass., and Portland, Me. They have given better satisfaction than the Ontario goods. California green fruits, plums, Tokay grapes, peaches, and pears are largely used and bought of jobbers in Montreal. They are well packed. California oranges are bought in Boston, Mass., by commission houses and of jobbers in Montreal. I have heard no fault found with the methods of packing of any of these different fruits. In the early season, strawberries are bought in Boston, Mass., and imported for use here. California evaporated fruits now enjoy a monopoly of this market. The use of California canned fruits is increasing among the better customers, and they are well liked, though the consumption of the canned fruits from Ontario is greater because they are cheaper, being nearer this market, and the American goods being subject to a duty of 2 1-4 cents per pound. Nearly all the oranges used here come from California; therefore, the only line in which trade can be increased seems to be in the canned fruits from California, and that can be accomplished only by persistent personal effort on the part of the representatives of the firms dealing in the goods to induce the local grocers to put in a stock and demonstrate their merit."

Apples in Cold Shipment.

An official report from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, states that 8,796 barrels of apples were carried from Montreal to Europe in cool air chambers of steamers during the season of 1903.

Layering Apples in Barrels

A FRUIT dealer and florist in Grosvenor Square, London, Eng., has suggested to the fruit division, Ottawa, the idea of layering choice apples in barrels, using a pulp paper circle between layers. He thinks that fancy apples packed in this manner would land in far better condition and fetch correspondingly higher prices, much more than sufficient to pay for the increased trouble and expense involved in the packing. It might be advisable for some of our exporters to experiment along this line when the shipping season comes around again.

Banana Industry of Jamaica.

SIXTEEN years ago Jamaica had hardly thought seriously of the possibility even of growing fruit for the outside world. To-day, the value of her exports under that head exceeds one million pounds sterling, annually, over sixty per cent. of the total exports of the colony. Nearly seven-eighths go to the United States, and the remainder to the United Kingdom and other British possessions. It is estimated that 33,000 acres are under banana cultivation, comprising 240 estates or thereabouts, varying in acreage from twenty to five and six hundred; and hundreds of small settlers scattered far and wide, with holdings of less than 20 acres. During the past five years the shipment of fruit from Jamaica has just doubled itself. Last year the total number of bananas grown and exported was in the neighborhood of eight million bunches. The largest areas of cultivation lie in the valleys and slopes along the seaboard, but there are also plenty of estates in the hilly districts, and in the 74 miles railway journey from Kingston to Port Antonio, bananas are everywhere to be seen. The route lies for many miles over a stiff mountain range, and on all sides there are small patches of bananas. Even in the crevices of rocks, healthy plants are growing and thriving upon the rich wash mould to be found thereabouts. Upon the plains, too, on the southern side of the island, old abandoned cane lands have been transformed into luxuriant banana groves, yielding, by aid of irrigation, 300 bunches to the acre. There is a great variety of soil in Jamaica, good, bad and indifferent. In some districts little manuring is done, and in others a considerable amount is necessary. To supply this demand a great deal of stock is kept, which, combined with banana growing, seems to be a most profitable business for big and little man alike.

Asparagus Crop Ruined.

Telegrams from San Francisco say that the asparagus crop in the Sacramento River section, California, has been destroyed by recent floods. This is serious news to grocery trade interests all over the United States since the trade is entirely dependent upon the production of this section for its supplies of canned asparagus. The anticipated pack of 1904 has been entirely sold to the trade for delivery when packed, and the jobbers have in turn sold to the retail trade. It will be seen, therefore, that with a failure of the crop both jobber and retailer are in a peculiar position. The loss moreover to the packers will be heavy, as all preparations for the pack had been completed.

Fruit Auction.

The Ottawa Fruit and Produce Company held another auction sale of oranges on March 31, bringing the price to about $2.30 a case. Up to the present time the Ottawa Fruit and Produce Company have been holding on an average two auctions each week. Their intention from now on is to arrange for one every day.

The California association have taken up this manner of selling oranges. They have also fixed the price for fruit jobbers so that they are at liberty to lower their price. At present they are selling slightly under the Ottawa Fruit and Produce Company.

Co-Operative Fruit Growing.

Mr. W. A. MacKinnon, chief of the Fruit Division of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, was a visitor to the Toronto office of The Grocer this week. Mr. MacKinnon expresses satisfaction over the recent action taken by the fruit growers of Western Ontario in forming co-operative associations. Although some harm may come from ill-advised effort or over-hasty action, as is almost inevitable with new organizations, the scheme cannot but result ultimately to the benefit of the fruit industry in Canada. Even if these virgin associations should go smash, Mr. MacKinnon thinks a great deal of good will have been done in pointing out the necessity of organized effort on the part of Canadian fruit growers in the marketing and export of fruit products.

Fruit Shippers Win.

The Railway Commission has given favorable judgment on the application of the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Co., to form a junction with the Grand Trunk Allanburg branch line at Stamford. The principal reason assigned for granting the application is that the interests of shippers of small fruits in the district require it.

Apple Business in Nova Scotia.

According to present estimates there are about 20,000 barrels for shipment to England to come down from the Annapolis Valley yet, which makes the total shipment this year about 400,000 barrels, nearly all of which amount has been forwarded via Halifax. Taking home market figures into consideration, more than a half million barrels of merchantable apples were harvested in the Annapolis Valley last Autumn, which averaged $2.75 a barrel. The outlook for this year is excellent. The snow, which came on early in the Winter, remained, protecting the roots, and as a result trees are already beginning to put forth strong, hardy buds.

Notes.

Horticultural plantings for the coming season in Nova Scotia promise to be the largest of any single year in the history of the province.

Results of experiments in grape culture at the Central Farm, Ottawa, show that no less than twenty-five varieties will grow and ripen in the Ottawa Valley.

H. Walker & Sons, wholesale fruit dealers, Guelph, have purchased a prominent site on MacDonnell street, on which they propose to erect one of the finest fruit warehouses in Canada.

TRADING STAMPS DOOMED.

THE Montreal Grocers' Association have decided to fight trading stamps. This decision was arrived at at a well attended meeting of the association held at Monument National, Wednesday, April 6. The president, N. Chartrand, presided. Many other important matters were discussed, including the decision to make early closing day for grocers the same as for other merchants, namely, Thursday, instead of Wednesday. The question of peddlers' licenses was again spoken of as a nuisance and it took the form of a resolution.

It was moved by the president and unanimoully carried that the city council be asked officially to use all their influence with the Quebec Legislature to make an amendment to the city charter to the effect that power would be given to abolish the peddling privileges in Montreal. A copy of this resolution was forwarded to the city council and also to Mr. Lomer Gouin, representative of the association in the local legislature.

When the matter of trading stamps came up some strong speeches were made. There were present four grocers who are aldermen—Turner, Ricard, Lapointe and Paquin. There are three other grocers who are aldermen but they were absent, so that the association will have solid representation at the city hall. Alderman Lapointe and his three confreres spoke earnestly about the trading stamp situation. Their opinion was that the Traders' Advertising Co. must abide by the law and that the city council should stop the stamp business on the first of May. They were not afraid of the Traders' Advertising Co., even though Mr. Wilder, who owned the said company, declared in his frequent advertisements that he would carry the fight to the Privy Council if necessary. One thing sure was that the stamps must be stopped, and when they were stopped Mr. Wilder, or any other company, could fight as long as they liked. Action would be taken to have the city by-law adjusted to suit the very case in point, and if it was not done in time for May 1st it would not be the fault of the association.

The man who does not pay for his groceries was discussed too, and the secretary, Mr. Beaudry, announced that he had already secured a valuable list of dead beats by his own efforts quite independent of the association. This could easily form the basis of a collection and information bureau as an accessory to the association. A resolution was passed endorsing the secretary's action and the establishment of such a bureau, and members were urged to patronize it. In his information there were 6,000 names of undesirable customers so that the value of such a bureau must be apparent.

The subject of federation of associations was explained by the secretary and three delegates were named, as follows: President Chartrand, the secretary and treasurer, whose duty it would be to confer with deputations of representatives of the different associations, and arrange for some action at a meeting called for April 13.

WORLD'S TEA PRODUCTION.

China is the heaviest tea producer, the annual crop being estimated at from 2,000,000,000 to 2,500,000,000 pounds. Java's annual crop averages about 9,000,000 lbs.; British India, about 190,000,000 lbs.; Japan, about 63,000,000 lbs., and Formosa, about 24,000,000 lbs. Other tea producers are Brazil, Natal, Fiji, Jamaica and a few smaller ones making a total of say 8,000,000 lbs. The grand total is about 2,294,000,000 lbs. About 9,000 lbs. were experimentally produced in 1902 in the United States.

NEW HENNERY.

A new industry known as the Canada Poultry and Produce Company is shortly to be started in Stratford, to raise and fatten poultry for the English market.

Stock of fowls will be composed entirely of thoroughbred barred Plymouth Rocks. When all the buildings are completed the capacity will be 800 laying hens in the breeding pens and 6,000 in the fattening crates, and it is estimated that from 150 to 200 will be killed every day for shipping. The intention, of course, is to raise all these fowls on the premises, but for the first year, at least, the company will have to depend largely on what they can purchase from farmers and fatten, as the buildings can hardly be finished before hatching time is over.

PETERBORO' SUGAR FACTORY.

The Globe is authority for the statement that D. A. Gordon, president of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company, has made overtures to the municipal council of Peterboro' which will probably result in the completion of Peterboro's sugar-beet factory. Mr. Gordon offers to invest $100,000 in the concern if the town will guarantee the company's bonds to the extent of an additional $100,000. In the event of the proposition receiving general support $350,000 will be expended in completing and equipping the plant. Machinery costing $156,000 is to be purchased in Holland and shipped to the factory in Peterboro'.

LABOR-SAVING MACHINERY IN THE STORE.

THE store has long since received the attention of ingenious inventors, old, shopsoiled and damaged ways of bookkeeping and of caring for cash have been discarded by progressive merchants for accurate, infallible machines and systems. The perfect protection afforded store transactions by the use of cash registers has been one way by which many a grocer has turned loss into profit and achieved success, where before bankruptcy stared him in the face.

Naturally the question following such a statement is: How will a cash register help profits? The reason the register increases profits is because it gives the merchant positive information about every one of the transactions which has taken place in his store, which information must be had if the merchant is to have perfect control over the life blood of his business—that is, the money he receives for his goods. Only one way can this information be accurately gained, and that is by using a cash register. With a register every penny handled in the store is recorded. Cash and credit sales, money received on account or paid out, or change made, are all recorded honestly and faithfully and infallibly. Losses and mistakes simply cannot occur.

Leaving out of the question all the other advantages of a register, a machine will pay for itself within a short time with the customers it keeps.

No merchant has carried on business for any length of time without having a dispute with customers over payments on accounts or settlements. Sometimes the customer pays an account and on leaving the store gives an order with the request to have it charged. When settlement is made next time he remembers the date of last settlement and insists the account was paid up to date. At other times the clerk in his hurry has overcharged or even forgot to charge. One way the merchant loses a customer, the other he loses profit — money losses in both cases. Dozens of ways there are of causing disputes with customers, but the cash register is the only way of avoiding them. With the register the customer leaves the store satisfied that whatever transaction may have occurred, all is correct. The proprietor has the same feeling of safety, knowing that every cent of his hard-earned money is secure. A register saves money and therefore makes money; it saves time; it makes clerks and proprietor more careful; it pleases customers; it reduces bookkeeping; it gives a systematic protection to a merchant's business.

Care in Selection of Seeds.

MOST potent among the influences which within the past few years have conspired to elevate the standard of Canadian agriculture and still more firmly entrench the farmers of Canada in their present proud position, is the care and judgment which they to-day exercise in the selection of seed grains.

Mr. Rennie, seedsman, of Toronto, has lent additional confirmation to this statement when he says that only the very best varieties are now regarded as suitable for sowing, a manifest change from a few years ago when farmers were in the habit of marketing their best samples of grain, and retaining inferior stock for the production of the next year's crop. The desire, moreover, for new and improved varieties is widespread and general. With each recurring season, some new variety of grain, or seeds, is launched upon the market, possessing in some way some merit peculiarly its own, some distinctive advantage over present types. The experimental stations established by the several provincial and the Dominion Government have done much in the way of elevating the standard of Canadian grain, and this, coupled with the testing grounds which are inseparable from every large seed warehouse, have proved a source of revenue to producer and consumer alike. Subjected to the most critical and exacting tests, no new variety is placed on the market until its true merit and worth have been amply demonstrated, failing which it is discarded as unworthy of perpetuation. And the history of one well established house is that of all.

The eternal vigilance of the powers that be is further emphasized by the steps recently taken towards the extermination of the weed pest, which has become a serious obstacle to successful grain production in Canada.

New Milling Company Organized.

A new concern under the name of the Keewatin Milling Company, has just been started with a capital of $2,000,000. The large proportion of the stock is being subscribed by Ottawa capitalists. The company will immediately begin the construction of a large mill at the Lake of the Woods, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels of flour a day.

The American Rice Miller's Problem.

THE last half dozen years have witnessed an extraordinary development of the rice industry in the United States. The rice mill has undergone a practical revolution, not only in character, but in being transferred to the rice fields. Under this stimulus of having the mill at home instead of at the ports, the rice area and production have expanded, and with improved methods of cultivation, the rice crop has now reached half a billion pounds.

Unless some increase of consumption comes, however, the rice mills and the rice industry will soon have reached their limit, since the relative consumption of rice in the United States is not large. The trouble is in the retail price of rice. It leaves the mills at a price of from 3½ to 4 cents per pound. By the time it reaches the consumer it costs 8 and 10 cents, and sometimes even 12 cents per pound. This acts as a bar to any large increase in consumption or the much further extension of the industry. Probably under the most favorable auspices rice will never supplant wheat flour to any appreciable extent; but rice millers and jobbers will have to find ways and means of getting rice to the consumer at a more reasonable cost if it is to become more than an article of occasional consumption.

Australian Wheat Exports for 1904.

IT is now possible to form a pretty close idea of the probable export business in Australian wheat during the present season. After making necessary allowances for injury done by the wet weather during harvest, the Victorian yield may be reckoned at about 25,000,000 bushels, the South Australian at about 14,000,000 bushels, and New South Wales at approximately 20,000,000 bushels, or a total for the three states, in round numbers, of about 59,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels. After providing for local requirements for food and seed, this would allow close upon 1,000,000 tons to be exported to Europe, South Africa, and other over-sea destinations, if the whole quantity were disposed of by the farmers. This, however, is not likely to be the case, especially in Victoria; and probably an export of about 750,000 tons from Australia may be expected by the close of the season, the business being spread over a considerable time. The shipping engagements for South Australia are fully adequate to the requirements of that state, where the export trade is being conducted with rapidity and ease. Further chartering will be required for Victoria and New South Wales, but this will be accomplished from time to time during the season as opportunities arise.

Monthly reports of the Australian grain and produce markets emphasize the fact that only a little over 4½ million bushels of Australian wheat and flour has been exported during the current season, at which rate the estimated surplus, which is variously set down at 45 to 49 million bushels, will not be shipped for 12 months. So far New South Wales has not shipped 10 per cent. of her 18 millions surplus, the greater part of the shipments having been made from South Australia.

Big Industry for British Columbia.

ACCORDING to a Western exchange it is probable that preparations will shortly be in progress for the erection of an immense mill by the Frontenac Cereal Co., Kingston, either in Vancouver or Victoria, involving the expenditure of between $250,000 and $500,000, and when completed to provide employment for at least 150 men.

The cereal business throughout the Dominion of Canada has expanded to such an extent that this firm consider it advisable to take steps towards the establishment of a plant in Western Canada, whence the manufactured article can be distributed to all parts of Western Canada at a much cheaper rate than from Ontario. The main inducement, however, to opening a factory in the West is the improved shipping facilities provided for the transportation of cereals to Australia and the Orient, where the demand for Canadian cereals is constantly growing.

French Wheat Doomed.

ACCORDING to a contemporary the French wheat farmer has been guilty of following false gods in latter years in as far as he has been substituting big yielding foreign varieties of wheat for the strong native wheats.

Investigations of the last few years show that there has been a perpetual diminution in the gluten content of the wheat grown in France, for instance, from 10.10 per cent. of gluten in 1891, the flour showed a reduction to 7.80 per cent. gluten in 1895. It has been demonstrated that this decline in the gluten of flour did not arise from the substitution of the modern for the old system of milling, as some had claimed. However, although more modern and more rational methods of analysis have been adopted now for some years amongst millers, yet farmers remain as they were, with the result that the milling value of the wheat grown in France has continued to deteriorate to such an extent that wheat whose flour contains only 6 to 7 per cent. of gluten continues to be offered to millers, who, of course, cannot pay for this wheat the price which richer wheats, such as are necessary to supply bakers with the flour they require, would command.

A Government report published recently clearly shows this deterioration of home grown wheat in France. The report shows that of 29 varieties, commonly sown in the North of France, only 11 can be reported "good" wheats, 5 are "doubtful," and 13 distinctly "bad," the flour made from them containing only 6 to 7 per cent. of gluten. The critical condition to which a continuation of such a state of things must soon bring farmers is well recognized, and the French Agricultural Society has joined the Association of French Millers for the purpose of electing a committee to study the whole question and suggest remedies.

Holland Will Not Tax Flour.

After public and parliamentary discussion for nearly a year, the Dutch Government have finally decided not to take flour from the free list. The proposition of the Dutch protectionists was to put an import tax on flour, equal to about 30 cents per 220.46 pounds, and directed principally against the United States, which imposes a heavy tax on bulbs imported from Holland.

Tobacco Trade in The Grocery Store.

PRACTICALLY every grocer in the country sells tobacco; few, however, give the tobacco trade the care and attention it deserves. It goes without saying that most men are as particular over tobacco as women are over tea, in view of which fact it pays the grocer to give them equal care in selection and arrangement. In most small country stores a various assortment of pipes, cigars, and tobacco is kept, but in many instances this branch of trade is utterly neglected.

Is your tobacco trade flourishing? If not, take a turn round, and find out the reason. A nice show may be made with a very small stock of useful-shaped pipes, cut tobacco in tins, plug tobacco in jars, and cigars, cigarettes, &c. Any grocer who uses his eyes will soon learn what styles of pipes are most favored in his district, and though a big stock is not necessary, a good assortment is. In tobacco, find out what lines will suit your customers' taste, and buy sparingly.

Plug tobacco should always be kept in jars or caddies. The promiscuous heaps amongst which assistants frequently have to search before finding the required brand are not likely to help trade. Each brand of tobacco should have its own special receptacle, and be plainly marked, and—especially during Summer—it will be found advisable to remove all tobacco stocks to a cool place every night. At all events, see that it is properly covered before the shop is dusted.

The cigar trade can quickly be fostered by judicious buying. Find out a good flavored cigar, and recommend it to your customers. Stock only in small quantities, but make a point of always keeping one particular flavor. By this means you should soon find a regular growing demand for your own particular cigar.

Summary of Philippine Commerce.

THE latest summary of commerce of the Philippine Islands shows that there was a decrease of $6,619,355 in the exports of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes from the Philippines during the year 1903, as compared with the exports of the year 1902. The exports for 1902 amounted to $2,501,367, while in the year 1903, they amounted to $1,882,012. This decrease is ascribed to the increase of duties on tobacco in Australia, Java and Japan.

In advocating the reduction of duties on tobacco entering the United States to 25 per cent. of the Dingley rate, a prominent American says:

"I cannot too strongly urge the necessity for the reduction of the Dingley tariff in its application to goods imported from the Philippine Islands to 25 per cent. of the rates therein imposed. I am confident that neither in the sugar market nor in the tobacco market will the effect of the amount to be reduced be materially injurious to any interest in the United States, while at the same time it will be of the greatest importance to the prosperity of the islands."

During October, 1903, only 134 pounds of leaf tobacco were imported into the Philippines, valued at $23, while the imports of leaf into the islands in October, 1902, were 1,516 pounds, valued at $203. For the ten months in October, 1903, the imports of leaf tobacco amounted to 15,420 pounds, valued at $3,248. In the ten months of 1902 the imports were 8,471 pounds, valued at $1,923.

Of unmanufactured tobacco the islands received 887 pounds, valued at $123, in the ten months ending October, 1903. In the ten months of 1903 the imports of cigars valued $876, as compared with an importation in 1902 valued at $2,896. In October, 1903, the imports of cigarettes into the islands valued $801, and in the ten months ending October they valued $5,644.

The exports of unmanfactured tobacco from the Philippines in October, 1903, amounted to 1,661,217 pounds, valued at $79,482, which is a considerable falling off from the exports in October, 1902, when they amounted to 4,362,227, valued at $190,375. For the ten months ending October, 1903, the exports of unmanufactured tobacco amounted to 13,203,830 pounds, valued at $558,844. The Philippines exported to foreign countries in October, 1903, cigars to the value of $28,972, a decrease as compared with a valuation of exports of $107,896 of cigars in October 1902. For the ten months ending October, 1903, cigars valued at $793,002 were exported. The exportation of cigarettes in October, 1903, valued at $1,331, and for the ten months the exports valued $19,912.

Too Much Stock.

In January, 1904, the W. H. Steele Company, 40 Scott street, Toronto, received large shipments of cigars and pipes, at rock bottom prices, which they are now reducing further for the benefit of retailers. As this stock is being offered in large or small quantities merchants will find it to their advantage to purchase now for the Summer trade.

Cuba's Tobacco Export.

According to statistics from Havana the total exports from Cuba in 1903 were over 300,000 bales of tobacco, valued at more than $12,000,000, while almost 209,000,000 cigars were shipped from the island which, at an average value of $60 a thousand would yield a little more than $12,500,000. The United States took considerably more than half of the tobacco in bales, but less than 46,000,000 cigars, or about half what was sold to England.

Cigar Collector.

A new craze has taken hold of Paris. A well-known nobleman has started the craze of collecting cigars belonging to famous persons.

His collection, which is far ahead of all others, counts 300 cigars as smoked by emperors, kings and other famous persons, all numbered and labeled. Side by side you see the favorite cigars of Kaiser Wilhelm and King Edward, the trabuco of Emperor Francis Joseph and the large paper chargette, with the Russian coat-of-arms, affected by the Czar.

No. 6 is the cigar of Gen. Mercier, of Dreyfus fame; No. 7, the favorite cigar of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. No. 35 was given by the King of Portugal to the British Ambassador, while No. 37, belonging to the dollar class, comes from the box of Sir Thomas Lipton.

West Tampa's Fire.

A disastrous fire swept West Tampa on April 4, resulting in losses which will exceed $300,000. Several tobacco and cigar factories were burned down, or badly damaged, among them being the large factories of Santaella & Company, Sam Caro & Company, J. M. Martinez and T. Sanchez. The Santaella tobacco firm alone lost $125,000 worth of tobacco, besides large stocks of fine cigars.

Tobacco Growing in Victoria, Australia.

The experimental tobacco-growing carried out by the Victorian Government at Edi Farm is proving very successful. Samples of the tobacco grown at the farm have been submitted to several Melbourne tobacco manufacturers, who have expressed high approval of the quality. The manager of the States Tobacco Company, reporting on the samples, says, "They are the best samples of Australian-grown cigar leaf we have ever had submitted to us, and we ourselves would be prepared to purchase immediately a large quantity of such leaf at a price which we believe would be profitable to the producer."

Output of Tobacco in the United States.

THE internal revenue stamp returns for the month of February make a better showing than was expected they would from the general trend of the trade. For the record shows increases in every line except in the output of cigars in which the decrease amounted to 18,117,860 in a total output of 466,510,913 against a total output of 484,628,773 in February of last year. In little cigars there was an increase of 13,004,500 in a total output, 58,789,000 against a total output of 45,784,500 during the same period of last year. In cigarettes the increase amounted to 30,107,436 in a total output of 237,762,989 against a total output of 207,655,553 in February, 1903. The increase in manufactured tobacco amounted to 4,263,962 pounds in a total production of 24,842,737 pounds against a total production of 20,578,775 pounds in February, 1903, and in snuff there was an increase of 143,776 pounds in a total production of 1,837,588 pounds against a total production of 1,693,812 pounds in February, 1903.

Morgan's Cigars.

J. Pierpont Morgan has his cigars made specially for him in Havana. Each has a red label with gold lettering and the magic initials "J. P. M." Sometimes after board meetings in various enterprises these labels are found on the floor, and there is a great scramble for them, as they are regarded as mascots, especially in the different Wall street offices, although not quite to the same extent as they formerly were. Mr. Morgan's cigars are very large, and the label is wide enough to make, if it were metal instead of paper, a ring for the finger of any ordinary man—a little loose for the fifth finger and a little tight for the thumb.

Hadn't Time to Take Money.

"I have a little bill here," began the caller as he entered the market, "that I——"

"Haven't time to attend to it now," interrupted the man with the apron. "I'm simply rushed to death. Come in again."

"But," continued the party of the first part, "I want to pay this bill."

"Oh—er—come right in and wait a second," said the busy man with a cleaver. "Here, try those imported cigars—and stick a couple of 'em in your pocket."

Tobacco Notes.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

A TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

IN modern business evolution there is a tendency on the part of the public to trade with the larger markets rather than with small ones. The village store which once sufficed for the needs of the buyer no longer flourishes as in the olden days. The county seat is likewise losing some of its prestige as a trading centre, especially so if there be within twenty, thirty or forty miles a city mart. This encroaching of the city upon the business of the local merchant is becoming year by year more pronounced, and the protest by those adversely affected is growing in volume.

There are several reasons for this condition of things, but the two principal ones are transportation facilities and advertising. Passenger, freight and express service has improved remarkably in recent years; places that once seemed remote are now comparatively near at hand. It is not an unheard of thing for a farmer to send his pork, for example, direct to some big city dealer, thereby getting a better price after every charge has been met than if he sold to a local dealer at local market prices. Similarly many farmers send to the city dealer for their field seeds, willingly paying freight charges in preference to giving the order to a smaller dealer at or near home. Farm produce of all sorts is being shipped by the farmer to the city, and goods of all descriptions are being shipped from the city to the farmer. The local merchant who may think this trade is his by right is being passed over to his certain and severe hurt.

Closely related to better transportation facilities in connection with the diversion of rural or inland trade is the growth of advertising. Newspapers and periodicals are being read more than ever, and the advertising therein contained is being depended upon to no small extent by all classes of people as a guide to buying. "Far away fields are green." Perhaps it is something of this conviction that tempts buyers to get their merchandise from afar. There are other influences, however, at work persuading them to send their money to big city stores, whose advertisements are filled to overflowing with "bargains" or offerings that create and intensify desire to the yielding point. The daily paper is replacing the humbler weekly among the well-to-do, and these dailies carry six times a week into their homes the alluring announcements of city tradesmen. It is not to be wondered at that trade responds to these repeated appeals, to the profit of the remote merchant and the loss of the merchant at home.

Why Not Trade Near Home?

A GREETING

To our Friends and Customers:

We are here to stay. We are here to make a success. We like the country and the people. We like our business and strive to increase it by all honorable means.

OUR CREED:

The Best Goods and the Lowest Prices are what Count

We believe in selling only such goods as give entire satisfaction.
We believe what we say and say what we think.
We want you to believe what we say and that when we say it, IT'S SO.
We believe in giving One Dollar's worth for $1.00.
We are convinced that your interests and our own are closely allied. If we show you it is to your advantage to trade with us, you will give us your patronage.
We fully expect fairness and think you will admit: If our goods and prices are equal with those of other reliable merchants, it is just and right to patronize home enterprise.
We trust that this appeal will bring response and that business may open between us which may continue long, pleasantly and profitable. Careful thinking, wise decisions, prompt acts will win every time.

WHAT WE CLAIM.

We have devoted much time studying how to satisfy the wants of our customers, and now with our facilities we are able to meet any would-be competitor's prices who undertakes to undersell us.
We claim that $1,000 of our money will buy as many goods as $1,000 of our competitor's.
We have light expenses, no electric light, no water privileges, no city taxes. We can and do buy cheap and sell cheap.
We carry as large and as well assorted a stock of standard goods as there is in the country and sell lower than ever before. Our stock consists of General Merchandise of all kinds.

I. G. DIETRICH,
St. Agatha, Ont.

It has been said that one must fight the devil with fire. In regard to the matter in hand to offset the growing advantage of city tradesmen there must be counter advertising,—a persistent, powerful campaign. The very existence of the local tradesman depends upon his resolute and unremitting efforts to establish an acquaintance with his store and wares, and a conviction that the advantages supposed to be obtained through trading in the city are more fanciful than real. Loud talk won't win the fight; neither will grumbling or complaint. What attracted the customer to go abroad was the concise, priced, temptingly stated advertisement of the city dealer. The way to recover a wayward customer is just such concise, priced, temptingly stated advertising on the part of the local dealer. To go into the battle with the city merchant for the home trade the local dealer will have to use his local newspaper and special circulars. If he honestly believes the people of his community can trade at home to their distinct advantage, and at his store rather than at the stores of other merchants, he must let the public know it. The burden of teaching the public rests upon the merchant. It costs money to carry on this work of education and persuasion, but it surely costs every merchant more money in business shrinkage to neglect or refuse to meet this pressing obligation.

Doubtless it is such a condition of affairs as has been herewith outlined that led I. G. Dietrich of St. Agatha, Ont., to make the statements found in his advertisement,—an advertisement, by the way, to be commended for its hearty, straightforward, convincing quality. One is safe in saying this advertiser will compel trade even though, judging from his advertisement, he is a new man in the section of country from which he hopes to draw his trade.

Notes.

W. E. M.—Your advertisement, for the space used, is really a striking one, well displayed and brief. It is faulty, however, in one particular. You are trying to scare people into buying. Fear is a powerful motive, I grant you, but in soliciting favor, in endeavoring to sell goods, I do not advise the use of "scare" advertising. You certainly know how to write, and how to have your advertisement set up, but a more agreeable argument will prove acceptable to most people.

We're spending thousands of dollars educating people to ask for COW BRAND SODA. We shall keep at it till even the simplest person understands the advantage of buying in package form.

Part of our plan in trade is to make business easy and safe for the grocer. Our guarantee goes with every sale. You run no risk at all.

Japan Tea.

THE principal Japan tea might be described as an unfermented natural-leaf tea. It has found favor chiefly in the American market, very little being used in England. The process of manufacture resembles in many respects the process of the manufacture of green tea in China. The tea is picked by the farmers, the pickings corresponding very closely with the pickings in China. The tea is brought down from the farm promptly after picking to the godowns or factories at the shipping ports. It is then fired in metal pans over a slow charcoal fire, being rolled constantly by hand during the firing process. The tea is then carefully sifted, the dust and fannings being sifted out and packed in the usual Japan-matted chests.

No nation has shown a more progressive spirit during the past 10 years than Japan, and as might be expected numerous changes are taking place in her methods of handling and dealing with tea. Some of the factories have introduced modern machinery, following in design that used in India and Ceylon, and it is not unreasonable to expect some improvement in the quality of their product. The opinion is entertained by some that the quality and characteristics of Japan tea are due so largely to the character of the soil and climate, that change in the method of manufacture can make no substantial difference in the quality of their tea. The Japanese have heretofore been adepts in the art of coloring and facing their tea, soapstone and China clay being used to give the greyish color, and indigo being used to give it a bluish cast.

As indicating the relative consumption of Japan tea in tea consuming countries, the exports of Japan to the United States for 1903 amounted to 38,626,368 pounds, and to Canada 5,598,123 pounds. The best Japan teas are mostly exported from Yokohama. The other two ports are Kobe and Nagasaki, stocks from the latter being considered inferior.

India and Ceylon Tea.

The existence of the indigenous tea plant in India was discovered by Major R. Bruce, and some years later, in 1826, some of the plants and seeds were brought down by his brother, C. H. Bruce. At the time they appear to have attracted very little notice. Five years later they were re-discovered. This was the starting point for the great Indian tea industry. As the result of an enquiry by a Government committee, an experimental garden was started by the Government at Lakimpore, which was shortly afterwards transferred to Jaipore. In 1840 this was transferred to the Assam Tea Estates, and inside of ten years many gardens had been started in Assam, from which the cultivation rapidly spread to other parts of India, Keemaon, Durrung, Cachar, Darjeeling, Dooars, Neilgherry, Chittagong and more recently to Chotu, Napore, Travancore and Ceylon.

The Indian product at once got in favor in the English market. Experts praised it and good prices were obtained. There was then a rush to form new companies and to open new gardens. In many cases patches of waste land were roughly cleared, planted with tea seed and sold as established tea estates. Ignorant men put in as managers were anxious to show large output, and thus large quantities of poor stuff were shipped and a disastrous fall in prices occured. A collapse naturally followed, and the years 1865, 1866 and 1867, saw widespread ruin among Indian tea concerns. The disaster was retrieved after some bitter experiences. Tea growing and tea manufacture in India has become both a science and a fine art and in the hands of men of experience and resource the methods both of cultivation and manufacture have steadily improved, until now the methods in use are the most advanced that can be suggested or devised and one might almost say that there is no product grown in the ground which has more time devoted to its care and cultivation than tea in India and Ceylon.

The increase in consumption in India and Ceylon tea has been enormous. From 2,500,000 or about 2 1-2 per cent. of the total consumption in 1864, it increased to 90,600,000 or 49 per cent. of the total consumption in 1888 and in 1903 the production was 354,688,547 pounds.

In India the indigenous Indian plant which is a comparatively large plant and produces large and frequent flushes, as well as the China plant are grown. There have been so many crossed and hybrids that nowadays a pure plant of either species is rarely seen in cultivation.

The picking is in some respect equivalent to a pruning of the shrub. Only the young leaves from fresh shoots are of use for the purpose, and in fine picking only about two leaves and buds are taken. Coarse picking would take three leaves and a bud. The smallest and youngest leaf, that is the bud or budding leaf, make Orange Pekoe; the next size, Pekoe; the next, Pekoe Souchong or Souchong. The leaves are not kept separate at the time of picking but are all manufactured together and after-estate. At that time the leaves so far picked are carefully weighed and turned in. The afternoon picking lasts until about four or five o'clock, when the tea is again turned in.

The next thing to be done is to spread it out in the withering shed on shelves about four feet deep with Hessian or wire netting for a bottom, so that the air can pass freely all about the leaf. This process of withering is carefully watched and when complete the leaf becomes soft and flexible like a kid glove. It may take eighteen hours to three days according to the weather, to complete this process. When completely withered the leaves are of a brown color like an ordinary withered leaf. Withering is a very important part of the manufacture. If carefully done it makes a perfect tea. If the leaf is insufficiently withered it breaks up in the rolling machine and makes a bad looking tea. Sometimes in order to get a very tight roll it has to be over withered. Whether done for this purpose or allowed to happen it spoils the cup quality.

When the withering process is finished the tea is put into a rolling machine, the effective part of which is composed of two rolling disks. The tea is fed into the middle and after the rolling process is complete falls into a receptacle at the bottom. The object of the rolling is to break all the minute cells in the leaf, which contain the sap. It is very essential to the making of good tea that you get good rolling, neither too much nor too little.

Rolling.

If you do not get an even rolling you do not get an even fomentation, and it is consequently an inferior quality of tea when it is drawn. The effect of even rolling is not only to break all the cells, but to crush the juice right out of the leaf. The effect of insufficient rolling is that all the cells are not broken, complete fomentation does not take place, and when the leaf is infused all the desirable properties are not extracted, and the tea is not so good.

Fomentation.

After the leaf is rolled it is taken out of the receptable at the bottom of the rolling machine and spread out on a floor specially constructed for the purpose, usually of cement, and about six inches deep, the depth being according to the weather. The tea is allowed to foment, this process taking from two and a half to six hours, according to the weather and temperature, but three and a half hours being the most usual time. If the tea is under-fomented it is usually a greenish looking leaf, and a light pungent liquor when drawn, but not a good tea to keep. The effect of over-fomentation is that you get a dark looking tea with a black infusion. A properly fomented tea from a good garden should have a bright copper-colored infusion, and be all of one color, free from bits of dark green. The more even the fomentation, the better the tea is, and the better it is likely to keep.

After fomentation is complete, the tea being still moist, it is run again through the rolling machine, the purpose being to give it the final twist, the first roll being chiefly to break up the cells. The next process is the firing. A firing machine consists chiefly of trays one above the other, heated by hot air pipes underneath, the trays being composed of fine wire netting. A draught of air is drawn up through the trays and through the tea, by means of a revolving fan on top, which has the effect of not only distributing the heat evenly through the tea, but of carrying off all steam and moisture given off by the leaf, wards sorted. The picking is carried on steadily every day, the whole season through. On a well managed estate the ground is divided into sections and each section picked in rotation, day after day, so as to insure close and careful picking of the whole at regular intervals.

No old leaves are plucked, the purpose being to keep a strong, vigorous shrub, capable of producing rapid succession of flushes, that is young tender shoots. The manner of the picking in order to keep the plant in good condition and produce a crop high in quality, is one of the most important matters in connection with the management of the estate, and receives the most anxious care and attention from the manager.

Those engaged in picking stop work at noon for half an hour, for a meal, usually of rice, which is taken on the and leaving it completely dry at the end of the process. Speaking generally the more slowly the tea is fired, the better. If fired too quickly, the outside gets properly fired, but the inside does not, and the tea is likely to sweat, the result being a sour, weathery tea.

Sifting Tea.

The tea is then sifted through a sifting machine, consisting of a series of sieves, one above the other, and so graded as to size that the bold Souchong stays on top, Pekoe No. 2 coming next, then Pekoe, Orange Pekoe, Broken Pekoe, the Broken Orange Pekoe, Fannings and finally Dust. The Bold Souchong leaf is put through a cutting machine which necessitates its being again sifted. To take the Fannings and Dust out of the tea, each grade is put into an air-tight bin, and kept until sufficient tea has accumulated to make an invoice. Each grade is then emptied out on the bulking floor separately, and shovelled over with large wooden spades, in order to make the quality perfectly even. It is next run through the firing machine again, but only for a short time to take out any moisture that may have accumulated from the air. Finally it is packed by means of specially designed packing machines, which spray the tea from above into the chest standing on a very rapidly vibrating platform. As soon as a chest is filled a coolie removes it, and another solders the lid carefully; a third hammers down the top of the chest and it is ready for market.

Ceylon Green.

The process of treating Ceylon or Indian green is practically the same as the above with the process of fomentation eliminated. The omission of fomentation leaves the tea a dark green color; another slight variation of the process is that instead of the final firing which takes place with the black tea, the Ceylon green tea is put into a large octagon shaped cylinder with a hollow copper axle heated to a certain temperature. This cylinder slowly revolves around the axle which drives off the moisture and leaves the tea dry, warm and ready for packing. This process obviates the necessity for the use of any coloring matter, and produces an absolutely pure green tea. The various teas produced by this process are Young Hyson, Hyson No. 1, Hyson No. 2, Fannings and Dust.

The development of Ceylon as a tea producing country has been almost sensational. It was known long ago that tea grew wild on the island, but it was not until the leaf disease in the coffee plant had caused ruin to the coffee planters, that tea growing was taken up. It was at once found that the island teas were of the very highest quality and that the gardens were prolific far beyond those of any other country. It is well known that Ceylon teas are, as a rule, matchless for fullness of body and richness of flavor. The Indian teas are stronger and more astringent, but have not the soft, rich flavor of the Ceylon.

MOLASSES PRICES DOWN.

OLD blended molasses have had a shock. It was prophesied by The Grocer some time ago that there was plenty of old time stock in the market, and some holders have parted with their molasses in round lots for as low as 22 cents. This, of course, is not applicable to genuine old Barbados. Several lots of the blended variety have been sold for 22 cents at outside points and some in the city. It was stated by a dealer that the drop from 25 cents to 22 was the only way to get rid of the class of molasses referred to. A recent report from the Indies states that the market there is a quarter of a cent stronger.

THE PROFITABLE HEN.

THE past year has served to confirm the opinion that the hen on the farm is a paying branch of the farmers' occupations, says a local exchange. Time was, when the chicken was regarded as a sideline to provide pin-money for the farmer's wife and his daughters. Eggs available principally during the Spring season were disposed of to the huckster at from 8 to 10 cents a dozen, and the surplus stock of fowl found a market with a like individual in the early fall at from 30 to 40 cents a pair. Exportation of eggs and fowl in recent years has left the home market unglutted, with a consequent enhancement in prices. Chickens are no longer dealt in by the flock at so much per head, but are now treated as other commodities, and a basis of value at so much per pound has been established. With the care bestowed upon other sections of the mixed farm, it is now asserted that the hennery is equally, if not more, rumunerative than some others. Thrifty hens are computed to return at least one dollar each clear profit a year, and an up-to-date henhouse with ordinary care will be found a valuable adjunct to the farm.

A MUSICAL GROCERY.

It is announced that a musical grocery store is about to be started at Crookston, Minn. No explanation of what this means is given beyond the statement that the patrons of the store may have free music lessons for their children. The kerosene oil will now be measured to the famous march air of "Squeeze Me Tighter, John." The potatos may be shoveled into the measure while the orchestra plays "I Have Eyes for None But You." The ham and ham bone will be sold to the tune of "Coon, Coon, Coon." The vinegar will trickle through the faucet while the choir sing "Life Would Be Sweet Without You," and the bills will be collected while the collector plays "I Have Come to Shake You Down."

GROWING TEA IN JAMAICA.

ADVICES from Jamaica say: The culture of tea seems destined to become an important industry in the island. The experimental stage was passed last year, when 5,000 pounds was the crop; this year 15,000 pounds were produced, and it is confidently predicted by those engaged in the business that inside of five years an annual production of 250,000 pounds will be attained. Each year in December the plant is cut off about eight inches above the ground, and as it throws out its bud and leaf bearing shoots the buds are nipped off every two or three weeks through the year, and the curling, fermenting and curing processes contribute to the making of the marketable product. That it meets the requisite standard of quality would seem to have been fully demonstrated for the expansion of facilities on a large scale is in progress.

LESS THAN ASSIGNEE'S FEES.

In connection with a statement of receipts and disbursements on account of the Home Cake Company, insolvent, issued by H. McMillan, assignee, The Grocer notes that a dividend of 3 1-2 per cent. has been declared on claims amounting in all to $4,563.04 and that the amount available for the payment of dividends to creditors, $159.70, is less than the assignee's fees, which total $186.26.

Association News.

Federation of Associations.

ANOTHER step has been taken in regard to the federation of trade associations in Montreal. As announced in The Grocer some time ago the initiatory steps were taken by the Retail Grocers' Association. On Wednesday, April 13, a meeting was held in the Monument National, at which delegates appointed at previous meetings of the various associations came together. The following representatives were present: Grocers—Messrs. N. Chartrand, J. A. Beaudry and A. Bastien. Butchers—Messrs. J. Lamoureux and J. Paré. Boots and Shoes—Messrs. J. G. Watson and Adelstein. Dry Goods—Messrs. J. O. Garneau, A. Giroux and T. Oakes.

By unanimous consent Mr. Chartrand was elected to take the chair. A general discussion as to the possibilities of a federation took place in which the various delegates took part. It was the general opinion that a federation would be desirable, provided that the respective constitutions did not clash in any way. Finally the following resolution was adopted: "That the delegates in session assembled are of the opinion that federation of the different associations is desirable and that a committee composed of the delegates as well as the officers of management of each association reassemble on a date to be fixed by the secretary for the purpose of evolving suitable regulations and constitution for the federation, the whole to be submitted and approved by the respective associations represented."

"REFERENCE TO CANADIAN GROCER."

WRITING from Winnipeg under date of April 15, 1904, J. J. Philp, the Dominion Fruit Inspector, has the following reference to Canadian Grocer:

"I wrote you on September 22nd, 1902, as follows: 'Enclosed herewith please find amount of my subscription to end of year. I took it for six months on trial, but find that there is more news concerning the fruit crop and fruit trade generally than I can get from any other publication that comes under my notice. Since that time I think you have improved respecting the fruit reports, and the only improvement I can suggest is to urge upon everyone interested the necessity of more care in packing.'"

and Cold Storage News.

Butter Making Experiments.

THREE lots of butter made the previous week from the same vat of milk were recently tested at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. One of these lots was made from unpasteurized milk, the other from pasteurized ripened cream and the other from cream the whole milk of which was pasteurized before separating. The class were almost unanimous in pronouncing the sample made from the pasteurized milk cream as being the finest flavor. This is another illustration of the value of making pasteurized butter, especially in Winter, when it is more difficult to get a fine flavor in butter.

There is said to be "nothing new under the sun," but a few tests of making butter by pasteurizing cream, cooling to churning temperature, adding a pure culture and churning immediately after separating would lead one to believe that under certain conditions, and possibly under all conditions, this method may be considered an essentially new and favorable method of making butter. It would save all the labor and expense of cream ripening, the danger from developing bad flavors while ripening, extensive vat and cooling apparatus, as well as a great deal of worry on the part of the buttermaker, if this plan be feasible. It certainly seems worthy a trial.

Cheese Outlook.

SEVERAL cheese factories in Oxford County have already started operations for the season, according to the Woodstock Review, and within the next two weeks it is expected that practically every factory will be manufacturing cheese. Many have been making butter duing the past Winter. The product brought a price above the average, and patrons are well pleased with the result.

The idea of factory butter-making is gaining steadily in popularity on account of its lessening work on the farm, and also because the farmer is enabled to have the sweet milk returned for feeding purposes. It is not unlikely that within the next few years butter making in factories will be as general as cheese-making in the Summer season.

Prospects for a heavy output of cheese the coming season are bright. Dairy stock has increased and is in good condition, and in addition, the meadows and pastures are in excellent shape. A number of sales of cheese have already been made this Spring. The prevailing price has been 9 cents. Some lots sold at 8 3-4 cents and the latter figure promises to be general. The prospects for fancy prices early in the season are not bright. In fact salesmen do not look for anything better than 9 cents for several weeks at least.

Close Season in Tomatoes.

THE canned tomato pack of California for 1903, is estimated at 835,394 cases of 2 1-2 and 3 pounds and 122,901 cases of gallons. Despite the large fruit pack, the market absorbed the goods so readily that the clean up both from packers' and dealers' hands this season will be the closest in the history of the business in California since it has assumed its present proportions. There are some few tomatoes still on hand, but probably not more than will go out between now and the new pack at reasonably steady figures. The pack of asparagus in 1903 was 256,220 cases. The demand for this vegetable is so great that packers are sold out before the asparagus is ready for shipment.

Meat Preservation.

Public tests have been recently held in Germany of a new process of meat preservation which it is claimed will revolutionize the packing industry and go far towards solving the problem of supply for armies in the field.

The process is said to be no more expensive than the simple process of dry-salting. It obviates, however, the costly necessity of refrigerating, while from a hygienic point of view it is pronounced by conservative German experts to be absolutely harmless.

Value of Refrigerators.

"IT'S only a small child yet," said a C.P.R. official referring to the refrigerator car service which their company has been running and intends to enlarge. As the West develops the need for a service for butter, eggs and cheese will be better appreciated. Especially when the output of these commodities reaches such a mark as will ensure a steady demand for these lines in the eastern and British Columbia markets will the value of an enlarged refrigerator service be better understood. At present the demand is not regular and exists only at certain seasons while at other times a return service from the east is not necessary. As the country develops the return service can be used for bringing fruits west and thus a splendid reciprocity be brought about. Mr. G. E. Graham chief inspector of the weighing and refrigerator service is at present in the West on a tour of inspection.

Firms Amalgamate.

AN important amalgamation of two large houses for years engaged in the dairy produce business took place in Montreal last week and should be one of the strongest concerns in that city. The union comprised the business carried on formerly by Mr. P. W. McLagan and that of Messrs. Lovell & Christmas, Limited. The business will be carried on in future under the firm name of Lovell & Christmas and Mr. McLagan assumes the position of managing director jointly with Mr. R. M. Ballantyne.

U. S. Packers Exploiting Canada.

A representative of one of the largest Chicago packing houses is reported to be making large purchases of cattle in Western Canada, to supply the demand created by large orders from the Japanese and Russian Governments. This particular firm are under contract to deliver 2,000,000 pounds of tinned beef to the Japanese army by June 1.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions — The provision market continues steady. The demand in light smoked meats is improving. Prices of live hogs have advanced largely on account of the firming of the bacon market in England although few are selling on the street and more are arriving by rail. The range of prices in heavy mess pork is 50c less than last week, short cut being 50c easier. There has been an advance of 1-4c all round in lard. Lamb is 1c easier than at last quotations. We quote the following prices:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08½	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Butter—The butter market is very active this week, with supplies rapidly increasing, particularly those of pound rolls. Stale stuff is pretty well out of the market now and stocks arriving show improved quality. The demand is good and as yet the local market is not over supplied. Dairy tubs are practically out of the market. Dairy rolls are 1c easier and dairy prints from 1 to 2c below last week's quotations. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22

Cheese—The cheese market continues quiet with no changes in last week's quotations to record. There has been very little new cheese on the market as yet, small quantities, however, selling at 8 1-4 to 8 1-2c at the factories. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.

Montreal.

Provisions—The demand for lard remained strong all over and as the supplies increased there was a drop in pure lard of a quarter of a cent. In one day there were over 1,000 packages of lard received in the city. Trade in hams and bacon is improving and the demand is first rate. Fresh killed abattoir dressed hogs remained in steady demand and brought $7.25 per 100. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00

Butter—The butter market remains in a bad state. The price was much easier to-day owing to increased receipts. Some quantities of fodder butter are being made now and it has to be handled quickly as it is hard to keep. Western rolls are in small demand but little trade is doing. The noticeable feature of the market is that no exporting is being done to the Old Country. We quote:

Fancy creamery	0 19	0 20
Summer goods	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16

Cheese—Cheese is tame and there is nothing doing. At country points the prevailing bid was 8 cents, which is equivalent to 8 1-2 to 8 3-8c here.

St. John, N.B.

Provisions—Barreled pork is dull and rather lower. Beef, while in light demand is unchanged. Pure lard is a large stock. The market, though a little higher than some weeks ago is rather dull. Rolls and hams are slightly lower with improved sale. In fresh meats beef is quite plentiful and low. Veal of good quality is freely offered. It is too early for lamb. Mutton is dull. There is fair sale for pork.

Starch Machinery For Russia.

Twelve new factories for potato starch are in course of erection in the Warsaw district, as a result of the large crops of potatoes in that section of Russia. About 90 potato starch factories are already in operation. There is a large demand for machinery for the manufacture of this starch, and there is a decided tendency to give preference to all foreign machinery other than German.

Largest Frog-Leg Market.

In two adjoining American cities is located the largest frog-leg market in the world, namely, St. Paul and Minneapolis. The total receipts last year from the frog catchers of the State of Minnesota exceeded 500,000 dozen, requiring the slaughter of no less than 5,000,000 frogs. Five years ago no frogs were shipped out of Minnesota. Now the business amounts to upwards of $100,000 a year.

Aluminum in German Sausage.

Somewhat of a stir was caused recently in the Government Bureau of Chemistry, Washington, U. S., when a chemist in the course of his analytic work on imported foods discovered aluminum salts in two distinct samples of imported German sausage, which salts are highly deleterious to the human stomach. The aluminum salts were apparently used by the German manufacturers as a preservative. Since it is within the power of the Government to object to the importation of German sausages containing such preservatives, the result of the official investigations now being pursued will be awaited with interest.

CANE SUGAR vs. BEET SUGAR.

THE following dissertation on the respective merits of cane and beet sugars appearing in the Louisiana Planter, is of particular interest in view of the attention being given in Canada at the present time to the fostering of the beet sugar industry.

The friends of cane sugar claimed in the early days of the beet sugar industry that beet sugars were repulsive, ill-flavored and ill-looking, and entirely inferior to cane sugars. As soon as it was found that pure white sugar could be made in any good beet sugar factory directly from sugar beets, and that such sugar would analyse 100 per cent. pure "cane" sugar from a technical point of view, then other arguments were advanced by cane sugar producers to the effect that while cane sugars and beet sugars were chemically the same, their sweetening power was something so elusive as not to yield to chemical analysis. They advanced the peculiar argument that there was no scientific test by which to determine the relative sweetness of cane sugar as compared with beet sugar, or vice versa, excepting the human test of taste, and thus far there was no measure that could be applied to that, all presumptive evidence being to the effect that beet sugars were inferior in actual sweetening powers to the cane sugar, all other things being equal.

As a matter of fact no really scientific effort has been made to determine whether or not there is any intrinsic difference in the sweetening powers of the two sugars. At the same time it is suspected that the intrusion of this wonderful beet root into the sugar world has aroused the jealousy of cane sugar producers everywhere. Surely, however, unless some definite determination can be had, the intangible charge of less sweetening power ought no longer to be pressed against beet sugars.

It is well known that the use of salt in seasoning food is for the purpose of exciting the gastatory nerves, and cane sugar, especially all kinds of cane sugar short of those absolutely pure, carry with them a certain proportion of the salts of the soil on which the canes were grown, from which the sugars were originally produced. These salts of the soil are generally found in the very thin film of moisture or molasses enveloping the sugar crystals. Any salinity of a brown or yellow sugar, hence, necessarily accentuates the flavor of the sugar, and this has led to the common belief prevailing among sugar consumers that brown or yellow sugars are sweeter than absolutely pure white sugars. Such sugars have been spoken of as having a pleasgnt, or delightful and agreeable flavor. Pure sugar in reality is neutral in its flavor, and conveys no taste, except that of absolute sweetness, and, hence, any perceptible flavor comes from some other element in the sugar, necessarily an element not sugar. The repulsive or disagreeable flavor of beet sugar in its history was due to the same cause, the enveloping film of molasses or moisture on the crystals that, on the other hand, gives the pleasant and agreeable flavor to the present brown or yellow crystals of cane sugar.

IMPORTANT WINNIPEG AGENCY.

PRICE, CHAMBERS & CO., who are the successors to Cameron, Gordon & Co., Winnipeg, have inaugurated their commercial career by obtaining the agency in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories for the many and varied goods manufactured by G. F. Sutton, Sons & Co., the well-known French and Italian warehousemen and manufacturing chemists of London, England, where their goods have a very large sale, and an excellent reputation. It is only a matter of a few weeks before their goods will be well known to Westerners, as the opening orders in Winnipeg far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of Sutton's export manager, M. Niermeyer, who has been making a commercial tour through Canada in the interests of his firm. Mr. Niermeyer left Winnipeg recently after having appointed Price, Chambers & Co. as representatives for the above named territory.

The goods manufactured by this firm are essences, sauces, relishes, dried herbs, curry powders, compound cream of ammonia, etc., etc., the quality of the goods and the neatness of the packages are sufficient to guarantee a ready sale for them in the West.

ABATTOIR FOR WINNIPEG.

Plans have been drawn up by W. R. Perrin, of W. R. Perrin & Co., architects, Toronto, for the erection of the Gallagher, Holman & La France Company's large abattoir at Winnipeg. The site chosen for this proposed building will be the corner of Logan avenue and Brighton street. No expense will be spared in making it one of the most modern and up-to-date abattoirs in Canada and with a frontage of nearly 200 feet on Brighton street it will, when finished, present a splendid appearance.

A TRIP TO THE WEST INDIES.

A CALLER at the Montreal offices of The Grocer last week was Mr. A. B. Hardwicke, the Canadian representative of Pearline. Mr. Hardwicke was on his way home to Toronto from a trip to the West Indies and British Guiana, having left Halifax February 22nd, in company with Mrs. Hardwicke. A most enjoyable and beneficial holiday was spent and Mr. Hardwicke, whose health had not been of the best for some months, returns very much improved in health. The island touched at and visited were, Bermuda, St. Kitts, Antigua, Dominica, Montserratt, St. Lucia, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, Grenada, Tabago, Trinidad, and Demerara on the mainland.

As regards trade impressions Mr. Hardwicke's experiences were similar to those of other Canadian tourists who have visited the Indies—the people are ready and prepared to do business with Canada, but the impression is left on the minds of the merchants that Canadians do not consider their trade valuable enough to encourage it properly. There is not that persistency to drum up the trade that is in evidence with United States manufacturers and merchants. Canadian attempts to get the trade are of a very desultory character, and trips made every two or three years are of no value for building up lasting and profitable trade. The idea of a combination of Canadian manufacturers having a permanent sample room at some important point like Georgetown or Port of Spain has been suggested and the idea is a very practical one. The expense of maintaining the department would be divided and bear but lightly on each individual exhibitor. Trips to the islands by this local representative could be made periodically and regularly and so a good hold could be obtained on the market. As it is now, the expense of the trip is heavy and at times the profits on certain lines will not bear making more frequent journeys.

A good deal of the trade is for cheap goods and these naturally will not stand big profits, but if it pays England and the United States to look after the trade it ought to be equally as valuable to Canadian manufacturers. The best islands are Bermuda, Trinidad and Barbadoes. There is a good trade to be done in furniture, woodenware, umbrellas, flour, butter, soap, etc.

"I noticed a peculiar taste for mottled soap on part of the natives, the old style that prevailed in our Canadian market some years ago, and it is difficult to sell any other soap to the natives. They seem to have a liking for the fancy kind. Among the white population there is, of course, the same variety of choice in toilet and laundry soaps as prevails here. I must say my trip was a most enjoyable one and many interesting facts were gathered."

After landing at Halifax on the 8th inst. Mr. and Mrs. Hardwicke paid a few days' visit to relatives in the Annapolis Valley.

CORRECTION.

In last week's issue of The Grocer, page 41, line 4 of Warren Bros. & Co.'s advertisement read "New style in linen bags 8-12s, now ready for shipment." This should have read "New style linen bags 14—7s, now ready for shipment." Warren Bros. & Co.'s new style wheatine contains 14 very attractive linen bags, net weight 7 lbs. each.

A MENACE IN THE WEST.

WITHIN the next few years the character of the Northwest Territories of Canada will be formed for generations to come. Even to-day, influences are at work which will have their bearing on the future of the country. The importance of taking the utmost care in our dealings with the embryo provinces of the West will be readily admitted by every true Canadian.

The country is there to be developed, and it cannot be gainsaid that Providence has given to the Canadian people the task of bringing its vast resources to light and developing them for the advantage of all mankind. The land must not remain a barren wilderness. Its inherent riches must be exploited and to accomplish this task population must be brought to the Canadian shores and settled upon the vast stretches of unoccupied territory.

With this task the immigration authorities of the Dominion are endeavoring to cope, and with a fair measure of success, so far as numbers go. Statistics show that each year, increasing thousands of immigrants have arrived from Great Britain, Europe and the United States, and have been settled on the Western plains. And yet their coming has been but as a drop in a bucket. Still the call goes forth for more and more. The immigration agents are responding nobly and, if we mistake not, 1904 will witness a phenomenal influx of settlers.

It has frequently been pointed out by opponents of the Government, that there exists a tendency on the part of officials to sacrifice quality for quantity and that they imagine their obligation ends when they have placed another settler, good, bad or indifferent, on Canadian soil. This was particularly emphasized when the colonies of Doukhobors and Gallicians were brought to this country and settled in the West. Opposition to the Government's action was most pronounced at that time.

Without commenting on the wisdom or folly of this particular action of the Government, we would like to speak in general terms on the lamentable lack of foresight which has been displayed by the authorities in another direction. It would appear as if the Government were working entirely for the present, as if their instructions were simply to bring in so many settlers like so many head of cattle and dump them into the West; as if their salaries were in direct proportion to the number of immigrants landed at Canadian ports. They have forgotten the all important thing that a day of reckoning will come for everything they have overlooked.

Possibly the most important feature of the case, which they have overlooked, relates to the method of settling the immigrants. Theq have apparently forgotten that the future weal of Canada depends directly on the proper assimilation of the heterogeneous mass of foreigners, who are annually entering the country. Only a lamentably small proportion of our immigrants are British subjects, inspired with those British ideals of justice and equity which have made Canada what she is to-day. The huge majority lack these traits and to such they must be taught. This can best be accomplished by direct contact. Otherwise the newcomers will offer a serious menace to future progress.

Let us ask, are these new settlers being placed in such a way that they will come into direct contact with sturdy British ideals or are they being herded in isolated colonies, in which their own beliefs and institutions will have an opportunity to flourish and multiply? Are they being placed in such a way that the process of assimilation will be as rapid as possible, or are they so situated that the process will take generations? We are compelled to say that the Government has displayed a serious lack of foresight in placing these colonies, and that in herding settlers of similar race and sympathies together, they have seriously hampered the process of assimilation.

It is an actual fact that in many districts in the Northwest a traveller can journey for miles without encountering a single Britisher, the country being completely occupied by Mennonites and other peoples of peculiar beliefs. This is a condition which should not exist in Canada and the policy which has produced it should no longer be permitted to hold sway. Let us make Canada a united whole, true to British institutions and British ideals, and that as rapidly as possible.

THE GROCERS SAFE.

IT is matter for congratulation that, although nearly every trade suffered serious loss in the great conflagration in Toronto on Tuesday, April 19, not one of the wholesale grocery houses was damaged. The paper supply houses were completely wiped out, and the large dry goods warehouses, with a single exception, suffered a like fate. The hardware men were also included in the ruin. Only among the grocers was there rejoicing and thanksgiving at the preservation of their interests.

But, while thankful for so safe an outcome, Toronto wholesale grocers unite in sympathy with their fellow merchants in their severe losses. They realize that though their own interests are safe for the time-being, much of their future prosperity will depend on the restoration of the properties which have been destroyed.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY.

FROM time to time, out of as well as in Parliament, public attention is called to the meagre salaries paid in Canada to the judiciary, and the bad results which are the inevitable consequence of such misplaced economy.

Canada has become a great and wealthy nation, her industrial and commercial interests are expanding with exceptional rapidity. So matters litigated in our superior courts are often of great magnitude, involving very large sums of money. It is becoming more and more imperative, in the interest of Canadian industry and commerce, that they should have for their determination the best legal talent our country can produce.

No feature of British institutions has been more universally recognized than the importance of having, as the expounders of the law, those who in their day have been the most brilliant members of the British bar. This fact, more than any other, has induced that profound respect for the law which has always characterized the English nation.

Most of the British self-governing colonies have recognized how important it is that the highest legal excellence should be attracted to the bench, and have followed the English precedent as far as possible by making the salaries commensurate with the importance of the office. Consequently, we find that whereas in England the lord justices have salaries of $25,000, correspondingly adequate salaries have been provided by statute in most British colonies. For example: In Victoria, with a population of 1,200,000, the chief justice receives $17,000, and each of the puisne judges $15,000. In Queensland, with a population of only half a million, the chief justice receives $17,500, and each of the puisne judges $10,000. In Cape Colony, with a European population of 400,000, the salary of the chief justice is $15,000, the puisne judges $10,000. And even in little Tasmania, with a population of only 175,000, the chief justice receives $7,500, and each of the puisne judges $6,000, and most recently of all, in the new Commonwealth of Australia, the salaries of the supreme court judges were, at the last session of Parliament, fixed for the chief justice at $17,500 and the puisne judges $15,000. In Ireland, with a population considerably less than Canada's, the salaries are fixed as follows: Lord chancellor, $40,000; master of the rolls, $20,000; vice-chancellor, $20,000; land judge, $19,500; lord chief justice, $25,000; chief baron, $23,000; eight puisne judges, each $17,500. The lord chancellor may be eliminated as not offering any comparison, but the salaries of the other judges, and especially those of the puisne judges, are fair matters for comparison.

In Canada alone do we find this English precedent not followed, and the judiciary treated with the utmost parsimony. The average salary of our superior court judges is but little above $4,000, and the salary of the chief justice of the supreme court of Canada is only $8,000, and the puisne judges $7,000, a sum little more than that given to the corresponding judges in Tasmania, notwithstanding the fact that we have in Canada a population of nearly six millions, and a wealth per capita higher than many of the leading nations of the world.

When the salaries of the supreme court of Canada were fixed the standard adopted by the then prime minister, Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, and his minister of justice, was the salaries paid to the ministers of the crown. At first sight that looks eminently fair. But when it is remembered that these salaries of ministers were fixed at a time when the cost of living in Ottawa was certainly not two-thirds of what it is to-day, and further that the ministers receive $1,500 a year for sessional allowance in addition to their salaries, and enjoy with their families the privilege of travelling free over all the great railway lines of Canada, it will at once be seen how unfair to the judges the standard taken is. No one contends the ministers are overpaid. On the contrary, the opinion of all those whose opinion is worth anything is that they are under paid. Still they receive a good deal more than $2,000 per year beyond the salaries paid to the judges of the highest appeal court in Canada.

Here is a court, comparing smaller things with greater, ranking in Canada on a par with the supreme court of the United States and the appeal court of Great Britain in those countries, and from which is demanded a comprehensive knowledge of both the civil and the common law, who sit in appeal upon cases from the Yukon to Halifax, who by their judgments settle the judicial foundations on which the future of this great country will be raised up, and we pay them about between one-third and one-half of what men in similar positions in other parts of the empire with equal responsibilities or lesser ones receive.

Heretofore mere politicians have succeeded in defeating every proposition to remedy this wrong. A judge, to them, is a judge and no more, whether sitting in a county court or a superior court, settling disputes between their neighbors or sitting as the highest Canadian court of appeal and determining the meaning of the constitution of the country or matters involving millions in money and property to its Government or its people.

We do not desire to under-rate the importance of the duties discharged by the county or superior court judges. But we do maintain that if a general levelling up of the salaries of the judges cannot at present be attained, there can be no question that the time has arrived when at any rate the supreme court of Canada, the appellate tribunal to which cases are carried from the highest appellate courts of every province, should have paid to its judges salaries in some respects commensurate with the importance of the office, and which will avail to attract the best legal talent of our country.

We desire to express in the strongest terms at our command our view that the first step at any rate should at once be taken to remedy this evil, by a substantial increase being voted by parliament for the salaries of the judges of the supreme court of Canada. And we are convinced that in doing so we are voicing the sentiments of the business men of Canada generally.

The absurd answer which from time to time we find made to this state of affairs, and at the last session of Parliament we regret to say expounded by members on the floor of the House, is that there is no difficulty in getting judges at the present salaries. This is quite true, but the question is not can you get lawyers to fill the judicial positions, as to which there can be no doubt, but the important question is, can you get the best lawyers in Canada to go on the bench with the meagre salaries at present paid to the judiciary? We are convinced to the contrary.

It is indeed lamentable that politicians, merely desirous of the approval of the unthinking, should be permitted to obstruct the carrying out of a national duty by declaring that unless the complicated and difficult question of county court and superior court salaries be considered those of the higher courts must not be touched.

Such a position is unwarrantable, indefensible, and it is to be hoped that the present House of Commons will have sufficient regard for the industrial and commercial interests of the Dominion to bear down such petty obstructions and to do justice to the judiciary, beginning where the need is most vital by dealing with the appeal courts, where injustice in the shape of inadequate salaries for the responsibilities and duties appertaining to the judges has too long prevailed.

No business man would allow such a relationship between himself and a valued, trusted employe. Why should the Dominion of Canada treat her most trusted and honored servants as no business man would his employe? The remedy is simple. Increase the salaries to an equitable figure.

This important subject is at present receiving more than ordinary attention from the more thoughtful business men of Canada. It is felt by them to be a matter of supreme importance, not only that the services of the best men should be obtained for our appeal courts, but that when secured they should be paid salaries commensurate with the dignity and responsibilities of their position, and which would ensure the devotion of all their time to the study and decision of the cases before them.

It is a matter of public notoriety that in some, at least, of our principal cities this is not so and that the members of the court have found themselves compelled to accept outside positions of emolument, acceptance of which, while perhaps not absolutely inconsistent with their position as judges, at least gives a great shock to the traditions which Canadians have inherited and maintained with respect to the judiciary. For our own part we have no hesitation in saying that a system which not only tolerates but in the cases of those judges who have large families compels a resort to these methods of eking out an insufficient income is an intolerable one.

DEPRESSED CHEESE SITUATION.

CANADIAN cheese merchants and dairymen have not escaped the general depression ruling the market at home and abroad at the present time. A glut in stocks is reported on both sides of the Atlantic. The nearness, moreover, of the new-make season, together with the ridiculous underestimation of stocks in the east and west has exaggerated the unhealthy condition of the market. Dealers have been dropping money right and left for the past two months, and many who formerly made trips to England have been compelled to cut them out this season, and trust to agents.

It is hoped for the sake of such losers that the new make of cheese may open low enough to enable them to clear out old stocks at a fair price. Present indications point to the possibility of the bulk of first productions being turned entirely into cheese, the volume of which promises to be away behind that of last year, the reason being the poor outlook in butter.

Shipments of cheese for the year 1903-4, covering the period from the opening of navigaion May 19, 1903, to April 14, 1904, show an increase over those of last year of 396,727 boxes, the figures for 1903 and 1904 being 2,498,132 and 2,894,859 boxes respectively. Shipments for the week ending April 14 are interesting; those from Portland, St. John, and New York being 572, 5,767 and 16,961 boxes, as against 1,014, 97 and 3,066 boxes respectively for the same week last year.

Butter shipments to the same date show a decided falling off, those of 1904 being 361,402 packages, while those of 1903 were 592,850 packages, a decrease of 231,448 packages.

JAPANESE FLOUR TRADE.

IT is quite businesslike on the part of Canada to seek new markets for her food stuffs of all descriptions. Just at present, two markets, in which there seem to be bright prospects for the development of a Canadian flour trade, are being brought to the attention of business men. These are the West Indies and Japan. Heretofore Canadian flour has not been sold to the extent it deserves in either market.

Owing to the war, the prospects in Japan have been more or less emphasized. Statistics show that in 1901 and in 1902 the United States supplied 97 per cent. of the flour imported into Japan. In 1903 the Japanese were preparing for war. They had an intuitive belief in the inevitable and they bought accordingly. The imports of flour reached 269,000,000 pounds, or three times the total imports in 1901.

Canada had only a small share in that amount. Yet, as Mr. McLean, the newly appointed commercial agent to Japan, said, last year Canada made a notable impression with her exhibits of flour at the Osaka exposition. What has been the result? Canadians have been stirred to a new interest and rightly so, for American millers are after the Japanese trade with great eagerness.

The New York Journal of Commerce the other day published a long interview with the Japanese Consul at New York pointing out the advantages of the Japanese market. He stated that the Japanese had been very successful in cultivating wheat and, now that the war would prevent them from working the farms, other countries would be looked to for supplies. In his remarks he said Canada was looking out for the market and kindly added that Americans who had previously supplied such a large percentage of the flour might be superseded.

Canadian millers will certainly be considered very much behind the times if they do not energetically set to work to co-operate with Mr. McLean in an endeavor to capture the flour trade of Japan.

There is another important aspect of the wheat situation in the Far East. Following the steady advance of Japan towards civilization, it is only sane and natural to believe that, when war shall have ceased, Japan will have become a wheat-eating nation. Rice will have declined in popularity and flour will have advanced. Then, too, the grade of flour used there now is not the highest. The change from the use of low-grade to high-grade flour will be a matter of evolution. To give an idea of how little wheat has been grown in Japan, let us quote from the official reports on commerce. These show that in 1902 there were cultivated 1,063,915 acres of wheat yielding about 15,370,000 bushels, or 14.4 bushels to the acre; rye, 1,592,145 acres, yielding 30,285,000 bushels, or 19 to the acre; barley, 1,600,199 bushels, yielding 34,045,000 bushels or 20 bushels to the acre.

MR. JULES COTE A BENEDICT.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, April 21, 1904.

Groceries.

TRADE in groceries has been quieter than usual this week, doubtless owing to the backwardness of the season. One wholesale grocer says the outlook is unfavorable in the extreme, and the situation will become aggravated in proportion to the prolongation of the bad weather. Canned goods are active, particularly canned corn, peas and tomatoes. Sugar is decidedly weaker this week, and the market is quiet. Syrups and molasses are in active demand at firm prices. The tea market is quiet at firm prices, and Japan teas are gradually getting into smaller compass. The Rio coffee market is still largely in the hands of bulls, and increased supplies of milder coffees are reported. Peppers and cloves are reported easier. The demand for prunes continues brisk; advices from Smyrna say there has been an advance in raisins. Currants are also firmer.

CANNED GOODS.

The market in canned goods is firmer and fairly active this week. Stocks are moving freely, particularly corn, peas and tomatoes, which are becoming light in bulk. Prospects point to a further advance in canned fruits next week, probably owing to the fact that the condition of stocks demands it. We quote the following prices:

SUGAR

The weakness indicated in last week's report has developed during the week under review and shortly after going to press last week there was a sale of 4,000 bags of Cuban centrifugals on spot at 2 1-4c c. and f., which is equivalent to $3.59 duty paid for 96 per cent, test, thus establishing a decline of 1-32 on spot sugars. The concession in price was made in order to avoid putting sugar into store. Since there have been sales of further lots totalling about 30,000 bags of Cubans, at an additional decline of 1-16 duty paid, the cost is now equal to $3.54 or fully 1-8 below the recent highest point of the market. Apparently there is nothing in the general situation to warrant this decline which has been caused solely by the precipitancy of Cuban holders in shipping sugars to American markets beyond the absorptive capacity, especially in view of former heavy sales to U. S. refiners for present month's shipment, which are now coming to hand so freely that refiners find it necessary to order arrivals into store for their account. They are therefore indifferent buyers at the moment and sales could only be effected at a further decline. Sellers, however, are not disposed to force sales now, in view of refiners' indifference, and supplies of unsold sugar in port, will, it is understood, be ordered into store.

Refiners are still buyers of sugars for delivery and are offering 1 16 over present spot value for May shipment and are believed to have obtained a limited quantity, say 30,000 to 35,000 bags at 2 1-4c. As a rule, sellers are holding for 2 5-16c c. and f. for May shipment.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for week ending April 13 were 49,325 tons, with meltings increased for the week by about 3,000 tons, say to 39,000 tons, which is 9,000 tons in excess of the same week last year. Total stocks in all hands are estimated at 150,648 tons, or 61,704 tons less than for corresponding week last year. The present stock is the highest recorded for this year so far. There are signs that grinding in Cuba is now on the way, there being 169 central factories grinding, which is two less than at last advice; receipts at shipping ports for the latest week being only 30,000 tons.

Stocks in United States and Cuba together are 413,648 tons, or 149,223 tons less than last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,420,648 tons, which is 44,300 tons less than for corresponding week of 1903. As an indication of steadiness in the market we hear of the sale of a cargo of nearby Cuban centrifugals to speculators on basis of 2 3-16c c. and f., which is the price last paid, and the article is evidently considered a good purchase on current basis.

London reports are firmer with beet advanced 1 1-2d for the week, being 8s 6 3-4d basis f.o.b. Hamburg, which shows a recovery to recent highest quotations. On this basis cane sugars have a differential of 26c per 100 lbs in their favor in New York markets.

There are no changes to note in Canadian or American refined markets. In the latter, Arbuckle is still selling 15c per 100 lbs below competitors for prompt delivery, while his price for 30 days delayed shipments is only 5c per 100 lbs less. The demand for refined sugar is very light at the moment and little new business is heard of in Canadian markets. There are no indications for the immediate future, but the fact that Canadian refiners are paying prices for British West Indian raw sugars equivalent to full c. and f. parity of Cubans in New York may be taken as a sign of continued steadiness. SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

A steady market in syrups and molasses is reported for the week at firm prices. Stocks of West India molasses which arrived recently on the local market are meeting with ready demand although this article cannot yet be said to be more than a novelty. Heavy stocks of New Orleans molasses remain on the market and must be disposed of before large sales of Porto Rico molasses can be expected. Our quotations are as follows:

TEAS.

The tea market is somewhat quiet for the week with firm prices ruling. The demand for Ceylons and Indian blacks is in the lead while that for Ceylon greens has only been moderate. Japan teas are in small compass in Canada today, very little tea remaining in first hands, and stocks held by dealers generally light. The demand for Japans is not brisk. Notwithstanding this fact, the quantity available is so small in the country that higher prices are looked for before any low priced teas may be expected from Japan. Owing to war conditions in the East it is entirely problematical whether there will be any low priced tea during the season.

In Ceylon and Indian blacks buyers are numerous for low grades at prices of a month ago, but as there are no sellers on this basis, business may be said to be dull notwithstanding short supplies. Doubtless buyers will have to pay the market price on these grades as no tea is expected before June shipments from Ceylon and October shipments from Calcutta.

There is some demand for China Young Hyson teas for export to the United States and it is believed they are used for mixing with Japans in order to reduce the cost of the latter. There has also been some export to the United States of higher grades of gunpowders. We quote the following prices:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues very firm with comparatively free movement of milder grades of coffees, and reports of increased arrivals of the same at primary markets. The Rio market continues to become firmer, and the local demand is increasing slightly; prices for Rios are advancing in primary markets. Reports as to Rio crops in Brazil are conflicting and bears and bulls have caused prices to fluctuate at times from 35 to 40 points. Owing to the fact that dealers stocked heavily last September when prices were easy they have not been compelled to buy recently. With supplies gradually dwindling, however, it looks as if they would have to pay the increased price very soon. We quote the following prices:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is no special feature of the rice and tapioca market to record this week, except a steady demand for both at firm prices. Our quotations are as follows :

A fair demand is reported for spices of all kinds at quotation prices. Cloves are somewhat easier than last week, and a slight decline in peppers is noted varying from ½ to ¼c per lb. We quote the following prices :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The demand for dried fruits continues steady at firm prices with prunes still the special feature of the market. Since the improvement made in Oregon prunes, these have largely taken the place of the California variety. The demand for prunes is particularly brisk. Increased sales of currants are reported at advanced prices. Advices from Smyrna say that the rumors of the previous week regarding the coming crop of Sultana raisins have been confirmed. There is little doubt but that the damage from frost will amount to fully 15 per cent. of the crop, and in some districts it will be even greater. This fact has influenced buying to a considerable extent and together with an improvement in the demand abroad has caused an advance in prices on an average of 4s. per hundredweight above the level of a fortnight back. Dealers in Smyrna, following instructions from their clients in the interior are either asking substantial advances or withdrawing stocks from the market altogether for the present. Evaporated apples are quoted this week at 6½c per lb. We quote the following prices :

Green Fruits.

The green fruit trade has been somewhat quieter as a result of the recent cold spell and fruit dealers who looked for their usual week-end rush were disappointed. Supplies of California navel oranges have been plentiful and quality good, but they are beginning to give way to pineapples and bananas for which there is an improved demand. Valencia oranges are quiet, very few fancies having been sold this week. Lemons are quieter and prices have dropped 25c. Grape fruit is practically out of the market although some fancy stock is offering at fancy prices. Receipts of pineapples have been heavy and stocks are extra fine. The price of pines is easier and the same remark applies to bananas. Florida tomatoes are in active demand at easier prices. Strawberries have advanced in price and are arriving freely to supply increased demand. We quote the following prices :

Vegetables.

There is a good demand for vegetables this week with supplies of cabbage, beets, carrots, parsnips, and green stuff difficult to obtain. Cabbage is 25c firmer, and carrots 15c firmer. Potatoes are scarce and slightly firmer, although local prices have not been affected as yet. Onions are scarce and will continue so for a week. Valencias have advanced 50 to 75c. Supplies of Egyptian onions received on the local market have been undersized and not fully matured. Lettuce is quiet and easier in price. California celery has advanced 50c to $1.50 and is very hard to get. The last shipment of California celery is reported to have reached Toronto, so that very little more will be procurable. Bermuda potatoes have advanced 50c. Green peas have appeared on the market for the first time this season. Our quotations are as follows :

The market for breakfast foods continues brisk at firm prices. QUEBEC MARKETS.

Groceries.

Montreal, April 21, 1904.

A VERY quiet week has passed in the grocery trade. Business in spices has been limited. Black pepper is dearer than it was last year at this time owing it is said to the smaller arrivals and the smallness of the stocks. Chillies for instance are more plentiful while the price is higher than it was last year. There is a large amount of Jamaica ginger in stock and the price is low with little demand. Sugar remains active with steady prices and fair demands. From the demand noticeable in the country it would appear that no heavy stocks were being carried by retailers and the policy of maintaining their holdings at a rather high level has been adopted. In the United States a sudden falling off has been noticed in the Cuban receipts and the value of raw sugar has been well maintained. Grocery crystallized seems to be very cheap and no doubt will attract some attention. Walnuts have become much easier and are selling at 18 and 19 cents. There is a continuous general demand for currants and dried fruits at the advanced price. Pickles are getting scarce and are dearer. Canned fruits are in splendid demand. The drop in molasses has been maintained, though steadiness now characterizes this market. In green fruit the activity in some lines has been noticeable. Grape fruit jumped from $7 to $9, with a good demand. Celery has advanced $1. Pineapples have dropped from 50 cents to a dollar a crate in New York. In tea there is a period of expectancy now awaiting some early news of the new crop of Japans. There has been little change in price, the general tone being firm. In coffee news comes from abroad that the drouth and unexpectedly hot weather in Sao Paulo has injured crops. It will be good for the Mexican coffee if the Costa Rica crop should continue to be short. The unusual arrivals of large quantities of Egyptian onions will tend to make the market easier. Canadian apples are decidedly firm and good Spies, extras, have brought $5 a bbl.

SUGAR.

A steady market has ruled all the week and plenty of offerings from the West Indies still maintain harmony between refiners and brokers. Some important arrivals have been reported at Halifax and as soon as navigation opens Montreal will be alive. We quote.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The decline recorded last week is holding well. According to other reports it is likely to go further. There is a fair demand and the dealers seem to act as if there was abundance of stock in the country. We quote :

COFFEE.

The market up to date has not changed but the big merchants are dubious as to future prices. Reports from Brazil show discouraging conditions, owing to the drouth and excessive heat. We quote :

TEA.

The position of tea seems to have strengthened. Taking into account the demand, which is steady, the supply appears well within requirements, though the statistical position however would not indicate an easier market than last year. The arrivals of Ceylons seem to be lighter than last year and the demand is fair. From China the report comes that Russia still keeps up continuous demands and the local trade there has made some calls so that China tea shows a considerable increase with notable shrinkage in stocks. Stocks in the hands of the large dealers would indicate an exceptionally strong position, disclosing the likelihood of a further advance in all the lower descriptions. At any rate tea is worth watching now as the markets are peculiar. We quote :

CANNED GOODS

Holders of canned goods are reserved and in salmon the interest remains unabated. Dealers short of stock are trying by some adroit methods to find sellers at prices quoted last week but without any marked success. For the retailer the market should be acceptable as he can buy without any likelihood of a decline for the next two months anyway. Canned fruits are in good demand but the California reports are discouraging. Canned pines have advanced owing to short crop. There has been no naming of prices except on a speculative basis. However, the report from the Niagara and Erie district is also discouraging for a circular to the trade states that field mice have ravaged the peach and other trees, also the cold and snow has killed buds, etc., so that short fruit crops may be looked for. The big wholesalers here look upon the circular as an usual thing and tactitly smile with a sort of a hint at the idea as a business dodge. The future will indicate who was right. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

With no marked change in prices the demand has been first rate. From the east it is learned that further damage has been sustained by the Smyrna Sultanas and experienced dealers believe that the yield will be of a restricted character. Valencia raisins are very likely to increase in price owing to the reports of stocks. Any grocer who has an all year round sale for these fruits should watch the market as an advance is likely. The low price of Sultanas might check the demand but the stock this year is light in comparison to last. We quote :

Green Fruits.

Strength and animation mark the fruit market. Grape fruit, which has been high enough at $7, with one swoop rose to $9. Some dealers reported that special lines brought as high as $11. This is exceptional, of course. Then there seems to be a chase after high grade Canadian apples and some beautiful Spies brought as high as $5 a bbl. Celery jumped from $5.50 to $6.50. Sweet potatoes have advanced 50 cents. Cucumbers have dropped from $2 to $1.50, and spinach also hardened 25 cents. There has been a free demand for strawberries at 40 cents a quart. We quote :

Fish.

There is still a lull in the fish market. Owing to the continued cold weather and the delay in the ice leaving the lakes and rivers, early fish are quite a luxury to-day. Even in halibut, consumers have had to fall back on the frozen stock, so little fresh being available. Haddies are scarce and it is almost impossible to keep up a regular supply. Prices remain about the same as last week in most lines. Live lobsters are coming in more freely and are selling at from 17 to 18 cents. Oysters have gone up a little, selects selling for $1.75 and standards at $1.50. The close season has set in from the 15th for pickerel and bass; for the former it will last until May 15, and for the latter until June. We quote :

Country Produce.

EGGS.

Quite a surprise has dominated the egg market as it has refused to slump. Firmness was maintained and dealers were sometimes puzzled to understand the situation. For instance the arrivals on Monday amounted to about 630 cases, merely sufficient to fill regular requirements. The demand remained active at 15 to 15½ cents per dozen.

BEANS.

No new features have shown themselves in beans; in fact the same old prices rule. In a jobbing way some sales were effected of choice primes at $1.45 to $1.50. Primes also sold at $1.40 a bushel, while car lots of choice primes sold at $1.40 and primes at $1.35.

HONEY.

The tone of the honey market remains steady and prices are unchanged from last week. White clover is still scarce at 13½ and 14c. Extracted white clover was quoted at 8½ to 9c in ten lb. tins, and 7 to 7½c in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat still remains 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

The market is still firm and a good demand has been recorded. Firmness all over is reported and 70 to 75 cents a bag was quoted ex track.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

A steady trade has been done all week in maple products and the prices have risen slightly. Some of the stock coming in has not been as good as tne earlier deliveries. We quote :

Maple syrup, in wood, per lb	0 05½	0 06
Maple syrup, in large tins	0 80	0 85
Pure sugar, per lb	0 07	0 07½
Pure Beauce sugar, per lb	0 08½	0 09

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Flour remains firm and the demand is still good. No doubt the prophecy of The Grocer that flour will go up in price will come true and the consensus of opinion among the big dealers is in concurrence with that idea. The manufacturers are all preparing for the advance and wheat of course in its natural value, that is in distinction to its speculative, will likely be in sympathy. We quote :

Winter wheat patents	5 10	5 25
Straight rollers	4 85	5 00
Extra	3 80	3 90

FEED.

No change has been noted in the feed market. The demand is good with fair prices ruling. We quote :

Manitoba bran, in bags	19 00	20 00

OATMEAL.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,

St. John, N. B., April 18, 1904.

BUSINESS is quite good in spite of the late Spring. The river has only just opened up, being later than for several years. At the Winter port the active season is about done. several steamships having made their last trip. One encouraging feature of the increased export business done via St. John is that several of the lines are finding it to their advantage to continue their sailings to our port during the Summer.

The molasses situation, which has created so much interest here growing out of local conditions, is again a matter of particular interest. New Porto Rico is now arriving freely and the consumer is enjoying the benefit of the competition in the low prices. This is a very large importing point. Not only is general business good here but what is more encouraging is the large amount of building and re-building which is being done.

There has been quite a movement in potatoes during the past few weeks. American buyers, going through the province, have picked up a considerable quantity. Cream of tartar is again higher. In fish, the stock held is light and prices are high. Rice continues to be offered low. Large shipments have been received.

Oil.

In burning oil there has been no change in price and it is doubtful if the reported decline in the States has affected the market. Business is light. Linseeds are still offered low. Large shipments are being made on account of previous sales. Turpentine is high. Lubricating oils have considerable attention at this season. Fish oils are scarce.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt there is quite a large stock held. Arrivals will be less frequent as the Winter port steamers cease sailing. This will lead to rather higher prices, as orders will be filled ex store in place of ex steamer. In Liverpool factory filled there is improved demand. The stock held is light. Canadian fine salt is having increased sale as the season advances. Shippers promise more prompt delivery than last year.

Canned Goods.

There is a steady trade. In vegetables quite a heavy stock is held. Corn with some is rather short. In fruits the market seems well supplied. Peaches are about the only short line. Blueberries are firmly held. Salmon remains unchanged though quite firm. There are a few lobsters. Meats begin to move more freely. Oysters are firm at rather higher prices. Domestic fish are in light supply, haddies being very scarce.

Green Fruits.

The backward Spring causes rather dull business. Some four cars Western apples, chiefly Spies, have been received. In oranges prices are firmer. Lemons are still low. Bananas have been in rather light supply. Pineapples are offered but the sale is small. Tomatoes have little demand. In rhubard and strawberries some business is being done but total sales are not large.

Dried Fruits.

There is only a quiet business. In prunes dealers buy small sorting lots, chiefly small sized. Some evaporated peaches are offered at low prices. Apricots are high. Currants are unchanged. Dates are low. In evaporated apples market is higher and firm. Onions have free sale and prices keep quite firm. Burmuda onions are offered. There is said to be a large crop.

Sugar.

There is no change in price but the market is firm and dealers are holding full stocks and are expecting a nice profit.

Molasses.

Three cargoes of Porto Rico arrived this week for one of our importers. The molasses war, so called, is still on, though our local importer does not seem inclined to meet the present price quoted by the American firm with whom all the wholesale trade except one importer seem to be working. This American firm still carries a large stock of old goods, while Barbadoes is rather easier at the island and there is a large crop. The reports from Porto Rico advise that the crop is likely to be quite short.

Fish.

The supply of fresh fish is light. Gaspereaux were quite plentiful last week but the colder weather seems to stand them off. In halibut there is a fair supply. The high price of dry cod fish is still held. Smoked herring are in very light supply. Pickled herring are scarce and high. The outlook is for firm prices for some time.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

In flour the market is not so strong. During the past week Ontarios went off ten cents. Feed is scarce and high. Large quantities of New Brunswick hay continue to be shipped to Nova Scotia. Oatmeal is firm at the high price. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans are rather easier. A fair stock is held. Seeds are moving slowly. The season is backward.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, April 18, 1901.

BUSINESS for the past week has been good and jobbers report that they are well satisfied with the appearance of trade in general. It is reported that the rising of the South Saskatchewan River at Saskatoon has carried away two spans of the C. P. R. bridge on the main line. This will undoubtedly delay traffic to some extent west of Saskatoon. Throughout Southern Manitoba there is some anxiety over the prospects of a flood. The Red River for a time has been rising at the rate of 10 inches in 24 hours, but it is yet a long way from the flood danger line and at present it is nearly stationary.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are firm with the exception of evaporated apples, which are very scarce and have gone up in price, being now quoted at 5½c to 6c a lb.

Corn syrups are a little higher owing to the advance in corn. The market quotes corn brand, 2 lb., at $2.40 a case; 5 lb. at $2.80; 10 lb. at $2.50, and 20 lb. at $2.45.

Sugar—The market is still firm, Montreal granulated being quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows at $4.25.

Teas—The market is firm and prices on Japan teas and other lines practically remains unchanged.

Flour—The flour situation is unchanged. No. 1 patent is still quoted at $2.75.

Eggs—The market is a great deal easier and eggs are now jobbing at 20 cents.

Green Fruits—The market is firm and bananas are scarce and are quoted from $3 to $3.50 a bunch. Apples from $5.50 to $6. Box apples, 50 lb. cases, $2. Cucumbers, $2.25 per dozen. Tomatoes, 6 basket crates, $5, and onions, radishes and lettuce, 60 cents per doz. Oranges, $3.50 a case, and fancy brands $3.50 to $4.

Cured Meats—The market remains firm. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, shoulders 8¾c, picnic hams 9c, breakfast bellies, 13¾c, breakfast backs 11¼c, long spice rolls 11¼c, short rolls 10¾c, and long dry clear 9c.

Lard—The market remains firm with pure lard in 50 lbs. $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 3 lb. tins $6.65, and 5 lb. tins $6.60. Compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

CARTAGE OF FRUIT.

LOCAL fruit dealers are evincing considerable interest in a prospective fruit regulation for the Toronto market. The upshot of such a regulation will be that retailers will have to do their own carting from the fruit markets. At the present time wholesalers undertake the responsibility of delivering fruit to their city customers.

The principal object in view of wholesale fruit dealers in suggesting the new cartage regulation is to bring about an early morning market which has always been much sought after by wholesaler and retailer alike. Under present conditions such a market is impossible. The wholesalers claim that they cannot supply all or even the majority of their customers with supplies early in the day, when they have to guanantee the delivery of goods. They are not slow, however, to see the advantage of supplying their customers with crisp, fresh fruit and produce, so that it can be placed on show in ample time to catch the morning marketer, and the disadvantage in a retailer being obliged to wait for supplies until the day is well advanced.

Apparently wholesale fruit dealers will have nothing to gain if the new regulations come into force, beyond sharing in the results which will undoubtedly accrue from a general improvement in trade. They claim that they will have to double their staff in order to be able to meet the demands of trade during the early hours of the day, whereas at present a much smaller staff is quite able to manage a day's business which is spread over eight or nine hours instead of three or four.

Meetings have already been held by Toronto wholesale merchants with a view to arriving at a solution of the question, but so far no definite plan has been formulated. Certain retailers express themselves as not being willing to do their own carting. As we shall soon be in the middle of the fruit season, it is unlikely that the present Summer will witness any change in the regulations in force at present. It has been thought advisable, however, to have deputations from the retail and wholesale dealers meet and try to overcome some of the existing difficulties.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, have received a full car of Florida tomatoes direct from Southern Florida.

The Imperial Biscuit Co., Guelph, have an attractive proposition for a 10 cent Saturday candy special. A card would bring the price list.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of a car of Redland Beauty California navel oranges, also of a mixed car of California Beauty and Magnolia brands of navels, together with fifty half boxes of blood oranges, the latter of which are being offered at $2.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, report good business in figs resulting from fig ad. two weeks ago. See ad. to-day.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, report the arrival of an extra fine shipment of pineapples.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Hopkins, senior member of the retail grocery firm of that name, St. John, is dead.

Baird & Peters, of St. John, N. B., landed three direct cargoes of Porto Rico molasses this week.

Anderson & Letteney, wholesale fish dealers, Digby, N.S., have dissolved partnership. Mr. H. Anderson will continue.

Mr. William Rankin of Halifax was introduced on 'Change, Montreal, by J. E. Hunsicker, one of the leading flour merchants.

Mr. S. A. McGaw, of Goderich, Ont., and Mr. Howard Holmes, London, Ont., were introduced on 'Change this week by Robert Meighen of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co.

Mr. W. H. Dunn, Montreal, has been appointed agent for Gillard & Co., London, for the Province of Quebec, and City of Ottawa. Mr. Dunn has a consignment of Gillard's Relish on the way.

A company to be known as Elliott, Marr & Co., Limited, has been incorporated under the Ontario Companies Act, to carry on the business of wholesale grocers at London. The share capital of the company is $100,000.

The Telfer Bros. & Co., wholesale grocers of Collingwood, Ont., have just asked for tenders for the erection of a five storey brick and stone warehouse on Lombard street in the City of Winnipeg, which will greatly add to the appearance of the wholesale district.

On 'Change this week the following were introduced: B. Swenerton, of Halifax, introduced by Mr. S. Cookson; Mr. Alex. Miller, of Pembroke, Ont., by J. E. Hunsicker; H. M. Weston, of Minneapolis, by Mr. John Corbett, of the C.P.R.

Mr. Chas. W. Gillett, only son of the late Mr. E. W. Gillett, was in Toronto last week, and while here was elected to succeed his father as president of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Mr. Gillett was accompanied by Mrs. Gillett and it is understood they enjoyed their visit to Toronto very much.

Mr. Frank Britton, representing Imperial Extract Co., (Shirriffs), Toronto, was a visitor to the trade in Montreal this week. Mr. Britton was on his way home from the Maritime Provinces, where he reports he had very successful trade. An interesting line he carried was a new style jar of shredded marmalade. The quality of the goods and the general appearance of the package should make it a profitable line for the trade to handle.

Mr. John Turnbull, general manager of the Nasmith Co., Limited, Toronto, was a caller at our Montreal office on Tuesday last. Mr. Turnbull is making a business trip to New York and Philadelphia. Interviewed as to business he stated that every department of works was running to its fullest capacity. "Permits have been taken out for our new factory on Sherbourne street, and when completed this building will permit of our doing full justice to the demands of the trade, as situated at present. While our capacity is very great we are very much handicapped."

BRANCHING OUT.

A representative of The Grocer while in Dundas this week was shown through the works of the Dominion Canister Co. by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. W. E. Woodruff, and witnessed with interest the various processes in the making of a canister. Mr. Woodruff reports that the season is opening very satisfactorily and with their increased capacity a good year's business is anticipated. The company are opening a branch in Victoria, B.C.

NEW CANNING COMPANY.

The Dominion Canning Company, Limited, has been incorporated at Toronto, with a share capital of $100,000 to carry on the business of manufacturing and of purchasing, selling and otherwise dealing in all kinds of canned goods. The provisional directors are P. A. Barry, W. H. Millman, W. J. L. McKay, A. D. Ellis, and J. Montgomery, all of Toronto.

LOBSTERS.

A novel method of shipping lobsters has been inaugurated with some little success by Maritime dealers. The difficulty of transporting live lobsters and the further inability of many prospective consumers to properly cook them, has occasioned the experiment of boiling them before shipping, carefully packed in ice. Results are reported as very satisfactory. It may interest retailers to know that lobsters should be boiled till red (about 20 minutes) in salt water.

FLOOD DANGER OVER.

All danger of a flood in Montreal is over now. The wharves are practically clear of ice and water, and the harbor is alive with tugs and small steamers which are busily engaged pushing ice out to the current of the main river where it may be carried down. No serious losses were sustained by the large commission houses whose cellars were threatened all last week.

FLAWS IN THE TREATY.

Before ratification a flaw has been found in the Anglo-French treaty. The Newfoundland herring fisheries are threatened provided the second clause in the treaty is enforced. This clause states that the British and French must cease fishing on October 20 each year. It simply means that the condition would be worse than before for the Newfoundland fishermen. For six months in the year there would be no fishing at all. It would prevent herring fishing in the Bay of Islands and Bonne Bay. These are vital issues enough but then there is the possibility of trouble with United States and Great Britain, as the American nation secured a right to fish there by a ratified treaty as far back as 1818. It is understood that the Newfoundland Government will not guarantee to ratify the treaty until these points are adjusted.

The paper and stationery houses suffered severely in the Toronto fire, Douglass & Ratcliffe alone escaping the general disaster.

BOUGHT A CREAMERY.

The insolvency of a large creamery in St. John's, Que., has led to the purchase of it Mr. A. J. Bryce, Montreal, at the cost of $12,000. Mr. Bryce is one of the best known and reputable produce merchants in Montreal and this creamery will no doubt profit by the change.

HAMILTON GROCERS MEET.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association last week, the sum of $100 was voted to the free department of the National Sanitarium Association, Gravenhurst, Ont. The members of the association were also addressed by Captain T. N. Lester on the subject of Fire Insurance.

PURE SPICES.

F. H. Leggett & Co., New York, invite attention to their announcement of pure Saigon cinnamon in bbls. and drums. They also make special prices on white and black whole pepper. Look up this firm's advertisement.

The Grocer extends sympathy to E. W. Gillett Company, Toronto, the only wholesale firm directly interested in the grocery trade whose plant was totally destroyed in the conflagration of April 19. Although the Gillett firm are badly crippled the announcement that they have a duplicate set of machinery in another building, and will be enabled to turn out goods within a reasonable time, is welcomed by their numerous friends.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCRE.

WHERE CONDITIONS ARE A HANDICAP.

THE following letter voices a condition of affairs met with everywhere in Canada; namely, a merchant who is willing to do newspaper advertising, but who has no newspaper in which to advertise.

Maple, April 8, 1904.

Advertising Department,
Canadian Grocer.

Dear Sir,—I enclose copy of "dodger" for your criticism. I am aware that you do not approve very much of this class of advertising, but our business is done in a small village without the medium of any local newspaper; our nearest printer is four miles away and then he has only a limited assortment of type, etc, so that we are handicapped in getting proper display for even a "dodger."

BRIGHTEN UP!

Now is the time to brighten up your home. We have the stock to do it with and our prices are easy on your pocket.

Wall-papers — We have recently passed into stock the most up-to date assortment of Wall-papers that we have ever handled; prices from 3 cents to 15 cents per roll. We also have for your inspection, samples of high-grade Wall-papers, orders from which will be promptly filled by us.

Wall-colors — Sixteen shades to select from. One p'k'g will cover 500 square ft. and cost you 25c. The quality is "Sherwin Williams" quality; that's one of the reasons that it sells so easily.

H. C. BAILEY,

MAPLE, April 8, 1904. TELEPHONE STORE.

There are in Canada to-day thousands of storekeepers in small villages and hamlets similarly situated as we are, and when we have not got a local paper, we find the "dodger" the next best medium of regularly reaching the homes of our customers.

We try to send them at least once a month, use good paper (when procurable) and whenever possible we mail it to "The Lady of the House."

Yours truly,
H. C. BAILEY.

This letter recalls another received two or three months ago from a firm of merchants in one of the territories of the Northwest, who stated that there was no local newspaper covering the section of country from which they drew trade. This firm sends out hand-written circular letters, reproduced by a neostyle mimeograph, or other duplicating device, using the mail service as a means of distribution.

In such communities, with such conditions the circular and "dodger" are certainly commendable. The object aimed at is likely to be secured—the securing of interested attention. This comes about because of the personal quality of the advertisement. In a large town or city, where the houses are deluged with circulars of all sorts, this form of advertising is weak, but in places where the distribution is comparatively rare, and where every merchant is likely to be known personally by almost everybody reading the circular or handbill, the effect is of quite another sort. The "story" is read by a larger percentage of the community, is read leisurely, attentively, and with an answering interest. In the large town or city, such an advertisement would be merely glanced at, to be immediately consigned to destruction in the great majority of cases. What may be good advertising one place is not necessarily good advertising another place.

So much for my opinion as to the value of this form of advertising. Something remains to be said, however, concerning the preparation of the circular. Mr. Bailey uses a printed handbill 6x9; Messrs. Brown & Black, in a town in Assiniboia, use, as has already been remarked, duplicated handwritten letters. This latter style can be very good or very bad—it depends upon the excellence of the handwriting and upon the clearness of the duplicate copies. In the case of Brown & Black, the handwriting was good—simple, small and neat. I have had two examples of their work. The first one received was altogether good; the second, I am sorry to say, was far from good—the writing was so faint as to require a very dili-

BRIGHTEN UP!

Now—when the Winter has gone. Your home needs brightening—Paper and Paint will help. May we not help, too?

Wall Papers — 1904 patterns are exceedingly pretty. It is really wonderful what a newness, freshness, the new patterns show. One can buy paper—a really good paper—sufficient for the ordinary room for as low as 75c.—border included.

Prices per roll range from 3c. to 15c.
For higher priced papers, we are prepared with sample books and can fill orders promptly.

Wall Colors — Many people prefer to paint their walls — and there is much to say in favor of paint—ease of putting on; walls can be washed; economy, etc. Twenty-five cents will buy paint enough for a big room.

16 shades.
Sherwin-Williams Paints.
Everybody knows and trusts "S-W-P." brand.

Paints — Paint saves everything painted. Paint improves the looks of things. Barns, sheds, houses, implements, interiors, floors, and what not. Use paint. It saves its cost in life prolonged.

Full stock of Sherwin-Williams Paint on hand.
Every can guaranteed by the makers and ourselves.
Since selling "S-W-P" paints, our paint trade has grown enormously. Last year if was just double that of our previous best year.

H. C. BAILEY - Telephone Store

gent effort to make it out. A good idea is often marred in its execution.

To leave a good impression, a sense of pleasure, of satisfaction, the workmanship must be good: if it be otherwise, criticism is provoked, and disfavor. So much really good work of an advertising sort is being sent into the homes of people nowadays, that the public is quick to perceive the defects of poor work. With regard to Mr. Bailey's circular it is very fair. The paper is of superior quality—better far than most of the handbills one sees; the ink is good, and the "lay-out" or arrangement simple and readable. Possibly had this "dodger" been printed in a larger office, with a wider range of type at its command, something better would have been produced, yet as it stands it is a creditable piece of work.

The "matter" of the circular is perhaps more open to criticism. "Brighten up!" is good. Its double meaning is not objectionable. "Now is the time, etc." is not so good. In the first place the style is a little hackneyed, and in the second place the argument contained in "We have the stock——pocket" is neither strong nor convincing. In the sections devoted to wall papers, wall colors, and paints, the attempt is not so much to stimulate desire, to persuade, as to give information, of more interest to the advertiser than to the desired customer. This is a common failing with many advertisers—the tendency to tell their story from their point of view, telling of things of interest to them, rather than from the customer's point of view. For example, I do not suppose that a single buyer of paints cares a five-cent piece about the increase of Mr. Bailey's trade for 1903. I grant that it is a fact of value, but I do not think it constitutes in the manner in which it is stated, a compelling reason for buying paints from Mr. Bailey. The same fact differently presented can be made more pointed, more influential, but the appeal or argument must be from the reader's point of view rather than from the advertiser's. The section devoted to "Specials" is good. It is short, suggestive and there are no waste words. Prices are quoted, and prices are invariably interesting. The firm name is not displayed with sufficient strength. It would have been better from the view points of good advertising and of "balance" or symmetry for "H. C. Bailey, Telephone Store," to have been extended across the full width of the sheet.

I am re-writing this handbill to suggest a different treatment and at the same time endeavoring to strengthen it.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ANNOUNCEMENT.

On Wednesday afternoon April 27 at 2 o'clock. the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association will inspect the factory of Christie, Brown & Company. CANNED GOODS FROM NORWAY.

Producers of high class canned goods abroad are awakening to the growing importance of the Canadian market. Messrs. Bickle & Greening, of Hamilton, the other day showed a representative of The Canadian Grocer a line of samples just received from Chr. Bjelland & Co., Stavanger, Norway, which for the first time were being offered to the Canadian wholesale trade. The goods include sardines in oil, anchovies and fish in a multitude of ways, meats and game. The packages are very attractive in appearance and Mr. Greening says the contents are quite equal to the promise.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE.

HOW much trade might be done by a steamship service direct with Italy remains to be seen. Such a line is likely to be started shortly. At least so said Mr. Lawrence Contecin, son of the Hon. Louis Contecin, chevalier of the crown of Italy and founder of the Italian Society of Immigration in New York, who was in Montreal this week. He was there in connection with business interests in citrous fruits, his firm having large consignments of the 12,000 boxes of lemons now en route to Montreal from the Mediterranean. In this fruit matter he explained that a regular service would dissipate the annual glut in the fruit market caused by the first arrival of three or more big cargoes all at once. This, he thought, could be adjusted by a regular service so that the quality of all the fruit would be better.

The movement for the steamship service was instigated by a large Italian company having 120 boats. Further he hoped that the Dominion Government would grant a subsidy and that they would go further and grant a preferential duty on Italian goods, such as Italian wines, olive oil, nuts, brine, and other products in exchange for an Italian preference on coal, flour, lumber, wood pulp, petroleum, agricultural implements and other products that Canada exported to Italy.

Three Italian immigration commissioners are now on their way to the Canadian Northwest to select desirable wheat lands for the immigrants from Italy expected to come out this year.

FORESTRY PLANTATION.

The Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, is branching out in every department of agricultural education. Some thirty thousand seedlings will be planted, principally Norway spruce, white pine, white ash, basswood and sugar maple. These young trees will be ready for distribution among the farmers in the Spring of 1905 and 1906.

EXPORT FIRM FAILS.

A winding-up order has been applied for in the case of the Canadian Export Company, Toronto, insolvent. This company was incorporated in October, 1902, to act as purchasing agent on a commission basis for houses in South Africa, Australia and Great Britain, and to conduct a general commission business in Canadian manufactured goods.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

The Window an Advertisement.

THE merchant who does not pay attention to the possibilities offered him in his window space shows a carelessness and a lack of thought that tell strongly against efficiency in any other department of his business. It is hard to see how he can be up-to-date in anything if he is so short-sighted as to neglect his show window.

Is it possible that he fails to see the strong advertisement a well arranged display can give him? How can he be so dense as to fail to grasp the fact that a daily newspaper with an actual circulation of 4,800, 100 square inches (not square feet) would cost approximately $10 per day, and in this space you can put only cuts of the articles themselves, and as a rule the cuts but imperfectly represent those articles. Now your window space presents a surface 144 times as great as your $10 newspaper space, has a depth in addition to surface, and in it can be displayed the articles themselves, true to life as to color, size, shape and everything, and, furthermore, they are seen at the entrance to your store, inside of which a salesman stands his displays may reach a great many people?

A Cincinnati paper says in this connection: "To appreciate the value of window display you should do a little figuring. How many people pass your store in a day? If the average is 10 a minute, in the eight busiest hours of the day 4,800 people would pass your window. This number, 4,800, represents what in newspaper parlance is called 'daily circulation.' Now, your show window occupies, say, 100 square feet surface, and in it you can display attractively quite a line of goods, changing the display as often as you wish. In ready to give additional information and exercise his ability in making a sale. This window space is yours every day and all day, it presents wonderful possibilities as an advertising medium, and it's up to you to get those possibilities out of it. If newspaper space properly used is worth its cost (and we are firmly convinced it is) how important it is that so valuable an advertising medium as the show window should not be neglected."

This Week's Illustration.

In the window illustrated this week is shown a good example of the stacking arrangement, which is the only style possible where a great range of goods is carried in the grocery stock. The display is made up entirely of Heinz's goods—pickles, catsups, soups, etc.,—and was displayed by A. A. Perry & Company, Westmount, Montreal.

The method of display shown here is sometimes done to death by merchants whose ideas go no further than the simplest forms of stacking. The arrangement of the bottles and tins illustrated is effective, however, and, contrary to the average window built on the same principle, shows considerable care and intelligence. Stacked goods, as has been said, form the basis of a great many arrangements which fail utterly in their purpose. Many of them require little thought, a small amount of time, and mean no expense in fixtures and trimmings. The result is a succession of them that surfeits the spectator and makes him pass without a look. Still they have their place, and interspersed with other styles form a pleasing variety and a good advertisement.

The stacking here is not of the ordinary kind and the number of different shapes of packages afford great opportunity of departing from the monotony of symmetrical and similar stacks. The foundation is evidently of soup tins. On the top of this at the sides are high stacks of tinned goods and a general arrangement of bottles. At the front are other stacks of canned and bottled goods, the latter making a pleasant variety. The outside decorations are sheaves of grain and a large central advertisement supplied by the Heinz people.

CANALS OPEN MAY 2.

The Welland canal will not open until May 2nd. A report to that effect signed by Mr. Schreiber, based on a report of the chief engineer of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, was posted in the board of trade hall on Monday. It was stated that owing to the lateness of the ice removal it was impossible to guarantee an opening of the canals before that date.

TRAPPISTS IN JAPAN.

TO a province like Quebec, where the per centage of the population is French Canadian, there is a natural strong respect and interest in affairs that have a bearing on the Roman Catholic church. When the church or those connected with it become concerned with trade, interest in commerce attaches. Near Montreal are the busy self-sacrificing Catholics known to the trade for their famous Trappist cheese and butter. They are monks who during their probationary studies devote spare time to cultivating the soil, perfecting the animal breeding and advancing the general welfare of the farm. Their life and character may be dealt with later as they are a mine of interest and their products have an enormous sale in Quebec. In fact the purity and excellence of their cheese and butter has never been surpassed for the prices charged. However, it is interesting to find from a Japanese traveller that away off in the Far East in a comparatively remote corner of the country, the Trappists make butter and cheese. In fact he declared that at Tobetsu near Hakodate there was a monastery and, there, in the neighborhood the most delicious butter was produced by the Trappists on their farms. At Tokio it brought big prices.

POTATO ALCOHOL

The use of potato alcohol to furnish light, heat and motive power has been developed rapidly and to a very high degree in Germany. Germany produces about 55,000,000 tons of potatoes a year, and uses for human food, stock food and starch only about 35,000,000 tons. The remainder is converted into alcohol, and used as a power generator for both land and water motors, and for cooking, heating and lighting. The alcohol vapour is burned like gas in chandeliers and street lamps, and gives a very bright light. In districts distant from mines it is cheaper than coal.

U. S. BEET SUGAR.

Similar difficulties to those which have confronted the beet sugar industry in certain parts of Ontario, have overtaken the same industry in certain sections of the United States. A refinery at Binghampton, N.Y., is to be moved to the State of Idaho, because it has been found difficult to persuade farmers in the veinity to raise sufficient supplies of beets.

FODDER SHIPMENTS FROM VICTORIA.

It may interest Canadian exporters of agricultural products to know that very large shipments of fodd r are being regularly made at Melbourne for South African ports. The brand which is in the greatest demand is that supplied by a company who claim to subject their fodder to a patent process of moist heating, by which means it is said it will keep for any length of time.

Shipment is made in hydraulically pressed bales of about 112 lbs. each, steel hooped, and covered with coarse hessian. The fodder is composed of a mixture of oaten hay, bran and oats. The pressure to which the various ingredients are subjected requires considerable force to loosen the materials of which the fodder is composed. Some ordinarily prepared compressed fodder is also exported, but is not popular with shippers, owing to the fact that the slightest moisture causes the swelling of the oaten hay and the consequent bursting of the bales.

A NEW IDEA IN MARMALADE.

The Imperial Extract Co (Shirriffs) Toronto, have placed on the market a style of marmalade jar that should commend itself to the grocery trade. It is a small "individual" glass and contains sufficient shredded marmalade for one person. This package should sell freely to restaurants, clubs, hotels, dining cars, boats, camps, etc., and can be sold profitably at 5c. a glass. Its use does away with the serving of different people with the same spoon. It is a decidedly good idea and those of the trade who have not seen it yet can no doubt secure a sample by addressing the company and mentioning The Canadian Grocer.

THE SCOTCHMAN'S OATMEAL.

The following story, told in a daily paper, is worth repeating:

An old Scotchman while visiting this country and travelling on the Grand Trunk Railway got into conversation with an American. The latter asked him what he thought of America. He replied, "Weel, it's a verra big country and the folks are a verra nice, but they are a' too busy makin' and talkin' aboot dollars to ha' much pleasure in this warld." He continued: "There is one thing I notice the folk here have learned from Scotland, and that is that oatmeal is a grand article of food for man as weel as beast. But I don't know wha learned them to take sugar wi' it, to defile their stomachs and rot their teeth:" The American asked him what the Scotch took with their oatmeal. "Weel," said the Scotchman, "when we're short of sweet milk or buttermilk we tak' a wee drap whusky."

LIQUOR ADULTERATION.

A BULLETIN has been published by the Inland Revenue Department showing the results of an analysis of liquors sold in Canada. Ninety-one samples of rye whiskey were examined, twenty-four of Scotch whisky, two of Irish whisky, twenty-seven of gin, twelve of rum and thirty of brandy. The analyst, Mr. McGill, reports that he found no deleterious substances in any of these samples. Search was made for alkaloids in all whisky samples having less than seventy-five per cent. proof strength, but none were discovered. The liquors most tampered with in this way are those most in demand, rye and malt whisky and gin. Except in the case of gin and brandy the results show a decided improvement in the quality of these spirits in the last twelve years. Gin shows a noteworthy falling off in strength.

WINNIPEG BUSINESS CHANGES.

CAMERON, GORDON & CO., wholesale commission agents, of Winnipeg, have changed partners, and the firm from the first of this month will be known as Price, Chambers & Co. The change is very slight except in name, as Mr. Price bought out Mr. Cameron a year ago, and has been a partner with Mr. Gordon ever since, and Mr. Chambers has recently purchased the interest of Mr. Gordon. Mr. Chambers has been connected with the firm for the last ten months. The new firm are still to be found in the Oddfellows Block and are always open to receive communications of firms who are interested in the Western Canada markets.

INDUSTRY FOR HAMILTON.

Hamilton has secured another industry, which, though at present only of modest size, yet bids fair to blossom into something more important. A. C. Shaw & Co., formerly of Orangeville, have secured a portion of the premises of the Kerr & Coombes' factory at the corner of Queen and Peters streets, and will can all kinds of fancy syrups.

IF you, for example, were to begin the manufacture of Soda Biscuits, could you not equip a plant equal to the finest in the land? and buy the finest flour? But could you make an article equal to

Fresh and Cured Fish

Requirements of Salmon Industry.

IN his report for 1903, the fisheries commissioner of British Columbia attributes the small run of salmon in the Fraser River during the past season to the excessive fishing and the consequent absence of fish upon the spawning grounds. The greatest movement of the sockeye seeking entrance to the Fraser passes through the American channels of Puget Sound. With no limitation on the United States side as to the taking of sockeye in those waters, all, or most all, of the fish which attempted to pass through those channels were captured by trap, purse or drag nets. On the Canadian side an excessive number of gill nets were used.

After showing the advantage of hatcheries over the natural methods of spawning, the commissioner advises the construction of hatcheries at the head of Lillooet Lake, at or near the mouth of Owl Creek, on Birkenhead River, and on Oweekayno Lake, at Rivers Inlet, as well as the enlargement of the Skeena River hatchery.

With proper protection in both provincial and American waters, and an annual plant of 100,000,000 of fry in the Fraser, an average yearly run of salmon to that stream would be insured in time which would approximate in number the year of the present big run. The establishment outlined means an initial cost of $50,000, and an annual expenditure of $35,000.

Branding Fish.

A MONTREAL fish dealer has stated that it would be a good thing if Canadian members of Parliament would urge the Government to take some action regarding the branding of fish, especially canned salmon. In the United States there is a bill just now before the Senate to prevent the misbranding of salmon. The dealer declared that there was ample room for such action in Canada, as it was notorious that fish, inferior to the poorest brand of salmon, have been branded and sold as the best salmon, etc. This same misbranding applies to all fish and, in a country like Canada, famed for its reliability in trade, it would be beneficial both to the consumer and to the producers to have such a law.

Present advices from the lake fisheries show that they will not open up for about ten days, so that customers can only be supplied by Winter caught fish.

Lobster Fishing in Nova Scotia.

A petition is being circulated among the residents of the eastern shore of Halifax County, N.S., requesting the Dominion Government not to enact the law permitting only licensed packers to ship live lobsters from the Dominion of Canada, which is likely to be introduced at the approaching session of Parliament. The petitioners claim that a large number of fishermen along the eastern shore of Halifax County have been in the habit of shipping lobsters to Boston, New York and elsewhere on their own account, and that the proposed legislation will be injurious to their individual trading.

Further U. S. Legislation.

The Ohio Legislature has before it at the present time an amended game and fish law, the important feature of which is a closed season extending from November 1 to March 1, during which all net fishing in Lake Erie shall be prohibited. This will be the first time an Ohio law has provided for a closed season in Lake Erie, but it is recommended by the State Fish and Game Commission as absolutely necessary for the preservation of the fish during spawning periods. Further restrictions are to be placed on the localities for fishing. There will also be definite regulations regarding the size of fish which may be taken with nets.

B. C. Cannery Operations.

The British Columbia Packers' Association will operate seventeen canneries this season, according to the Pacific Fisherman. This reduces the number of plants rather more than one-half, it having originally taken over forty-one canneries. The plants to be operated, however, are the very best, supplied with the most modern equipment and in the choicest locations, so that their total capacity will not be materially reduced. The association will this year pursue a policy of retrenchment in all departments. Last season a large pack was anticipated, and heavy stocks of materials laid in, and as the runs of fish did not materialize they have carried over sufficient supplies to do for this season. No new canneries will be built and no improvements of importance made.

Operations Against Carp.

The Department of Fisheries of Ontario is making an effort to destroy the carp in Ontario waters, because of the ravages committed by them among other more valuable members of the finny tribes. To that end permits to fish for carp have been granted to the Toronto and Big Creek Fishing Company, the St. Clair Flats Fishing Company, the Turkey Point Fishing Company and the Longue Point Fishing Company. It is stipulated that the fishing must be done under the supervision of a responsible officer of the several companies.

Fishing Laws for Lake Champlain.

The Senate of the State of New York has passed a concurrent resolution for the appointment of a committee of two senators and two assemblymen to confer with the Vermont authorities and those of the Canadian Province of Ontario as to uniform fishing laws for Lake Champlain.

Fish Notes.

A fish ladder is being put in at the Quesnel dam, British Columbia, by the Provincial Government.

J. H. Todd & Sons, Victoria, one of the largest canning firms in British Columbia, will next month commence the construction of fish traps on the southern coast of Vancouver Island in preparation for the coming salmon fishing season.

Lake Superior fishermen are petitioning the Ontario and Dominion Governments against the proposed alterations in the fishery laws. They object particularly to the size of whitefish and trout being increased and to the establishment of a close season for herring on the lake.

The Government are about to appoint a commission to investigate the Georgian Bay fisheries, the particular object being to enquire into the vexed questions of pound nets, submerged trap-nets, seines and gill nets. The commission will probably also investigate and report upon the extension of the close season in the fall, as suggested by the Provincial Fisheries Department.

GREEN FRUITS

Money in Orchards.

P. J. CAREY, Dominion Fruit Inspector, was in Toronto last week on his return from the western counties, where he has been engaged for the last month attending a series of Fruit Institute meetings.

Mr. Carey reports that in many sections farmers display a great lack of interest in the care of their orchards, due largely to the fact that the present unsatisfactory system of marketing the fruit gives but little encouragement to the orchardist, yet a new interest has been awakened by the movement now on foot to promote the better handling of the fruit when ready for shipment. The "central packing house" system of co-operative shipping is being adopted in many localities, and "power spraying," as introduced in the County of Oxford last season by the Fruit Division of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is now a live question. Local associations are purchasing outfits, and the work of spraying the trees will be performed by competent men for the members.

Another thing that tends to stimulate fruit growing is the fact that while last season's crop was an enormous one, the fruit found a ready market at high prices. The European markets took some 3,500,000 barrels, while the Northwest took large quantities. There is no danger of overproduction, providing the fruit is of good quality and properly and honestly packed.

Advice to Apple Growers.

A LOCAL apple exporter gives the following timely advice on the export of apples to Great Britain:

"Packers should only put up one grade of apples, the very best, and the greatest possible care should be taken in packing in order to guard against slack. The use of paper pads for the tops and bottoms of the barrels is to be highly recommended for this purpose. In about 2,000 of the barrels shipped by one Canadian firm to Great Britain during the past season these pads were used, the balance of their consignments going in the ordinary way, and the difference in the condition of the apples in the barrels in which the pads were used afforded ample proof of the importance of the use of paper pads. Shipments in small lots, say a car or two at a time are also recommended. Sometimes a shipment of 2,000 or 3,000 barrels will cause a temporary glut in even the largest markets in Britain and on occasions of this kind the system of large shipments tends to create a condition of uncertainty that prompts commission men to sell apples at sacrifice prices.

"Newtown Pippins, Golden Russets, Greenings and Baldwins are the best apples to ship to Great Britain. Spies are a little too delicate to stand the journey and it is very difficult to land them in the British markets in good condition."

Oranges Are Rotting.

Advices from Los Angeles state that the orange growers of Southern California are facing a condition of affairs which to many of them will prove ruinous. Throughout the great orange belt fruit is rotting on the trees. Men conversant with the situation say that it will be utterly impossible to market the crop. Representatives of the California Fruit Agency state that the severe eastern Winter is responsible. They also say that the railroad companies have failed to supply cars for transporting the fruit.

Fruit for Montreal.

INSIDE a couple of weeks it is likely that the docks at Montreal, now so dangerously flooded and flecked with huge chunks of ice, will be packed with one or two of the largest cargoes of oranges and lemons yet seen. The first boat from the Mediterranean sailed a week ago from Sorrento and as she has several calls to make on the voyage, she may not reach Montreal before the first week in May. On board there are 69,135 packages of fruit, 37,985 of which were shipped from Sorrento and 31,150 from Messina. Last season and the season before the Fremona was the first ocean steamer to reach Montreal. She is usually caught in the ice in the Gulf and her reports are graphic and interesting.

Australian Dried Fruits for Canada.

IN the way of rendering assistance towards building up reciprocal trade between Canada and Australia some sample cases of Australian dried fruits were recently forwarded to Vancouver. These fruits are grown at Mildura, Victoria. The Mildura Fruit Growers' Association are hopeful of securing an opening for their fruits at Vancouver, and possibly as far east as Calgary, or perhaps Winnipeg. The various qualities of raisins, known as "Brown Lexias, Extra Brown Lexias, and Golden Lexias," grown at Mildura, command a large sale throughout Australia. The growers look forward to the benefit of a preferential tariff in Canada at no distant date.

Snow Kept Apples.

Samples of local apples have been received, says the Acton Free Press, which have lain in an orchard all Winter, and are in prime condition. Snow came before the packers arrived, and the apples were covered temporarily with straw. Owing to heavy snow storms which followed, the apples were left outside until a few days ago, when they were discovered perfectly preserved and untouched by the frost.

Bad Winter for Fruit.

W. T. Macoum, horticulturist of. the experimental farm, Ottawa, confirms the reports of the disastrous effects of the recent severe Winter on the fruit crop for 1904. Mr. Macoum states that fruit trees from points in the Province of Quebec, as far west as Leamington, Ont., have been affected.

About Cured Fruit.

An American contemporary has the following interesting information about cured fruit: A car of cured fruit will weigh about 30,800 pounds, while if the fruit is fresh—that is, green—it will weigh 24,000 pounds. Pears are packed in 50 pound boxes, requiring 480 boxes to make a carload. It takes 1,117 boxes of peaches for a car, as this fruit is packed in 21½ pound boxes, plums and prunes being placed in 26 pound crates, 924 of them making a minimum carload. Apricots and grapes are figured at 25 pounds to the crate. Of oranges it takes 362 boxes to make a car and 312 boxes of lemons.

Apples From Orillia.

The fruit division, Ottawa, received on April 11 from C. L. Stephens, of Orillia, a basket of very fine Salome apples. These had been stored in a cellar all Winter, but are still in perfect condition, although the Salome is generally considered an early Winter apple. Their handsome appearance and excellent condition in the month of April are highly creditable to the Orillia district as an apple growing section.

Foreign Lemon Agreement.

If reports from Italy are true that an agreement has been reached between importers of lemons and steamship companies, under which the latter will not speculate in lemons and the former will limit cargoes to 25,000 boxes, says an American exchange, two important points have been gained in the rehabilitation of the lemon business in this country. The next thing to be done is to stop the division of shipments, concentrating them all in this country, and the business will once more resume normal conditions.

Prefers Canada.

A prominent fruit dealer in Paris, France, writes the fruit division, Ottawa, that "in years like 1903, when French fuits were scarce, the amount of business done between France and California was very large, and that this trade might have been done as well with Canada, the sympathy being greater between France and Canada."

Provincial Orchards.

The Committee on Supply of the New Brunswick Legislature now in session have been discussing the question of the Government planting, of orchards. The proposal is to plant an orchard of two acres in each county. The farmer will prepare the soil, while the Government instructor will set out the orchard. The former will be required to sign a bond to keep his orchard in a proper state of cultivation for ten years. The object of the Government is to foster the fruit-growing industry in New Brunswick.

OFFICE AT WINNIPEG.

Owing to the large and increasing business to and from the Old Country, some of the largest and strongest Atlantic steamship lines, including the Dominion, American, White Star, Red Star, Atlantic Transport and the Leyland, now realize the necessity of having a general western office. Mr. Wm. McLeod, who has been connected with the passenger business of Winnipeg for a great many years has been appointed general agent for Western Canada to represent these lines. His office will be at 210 Portage avenue.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

RECENT advices from Newfoundland represent the condition of affairs in that colony as extremely satisfactory and flourishing. The general industries of the country have almost doubled in every branch during the past fifteen years, while the import and export trade have almost doubled. New industries are springing into existence and being prospected with marvellous rapidity, among which is an extensive cold storage system for the preservation and preparation of fresh fish for the foreign markets. The company have engaged to erect or establish a system of cold storage plants for that purpose between St. John's and Port-aux-Basques, on the southwest coast, as well as at such other points as may be agreed upon, capable of shipping at least 100 tons and of freezing daily at least thirty tons of fresh fish. The company will also undertake the storage and preservation of a bait supply for service of the fishery.

The total foreign trade of the colony has increased within the last five years (1897-8 to 1902-3) from $10,406,677 to $18,305,065. During the same period the revenue increased from $1,541,488 to $2,328,044. The general result is that the total exports of the province have increased from $5,326,933 in 1897-8, to $9,975,864 in 1902-3—that is, they have nearly doubled in that short period.

JAPANESE TEA OUSTED IN RUSSIA

OF late years Japanese tea has gradually been ousted from the Russian market by the Chinese article, says the Japan Times. This is, of course, partly due to a heavy duty on Japanese tea in Siberia, from which Chinese tea is exempted within certain limits on the boundary between that region and Manchuria. According to the report of the Bureau of Commerce and Industry in the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, however, the failure of Japanese tea in Russian dominions is to be traced in the following three causes: (1) That its quality does not suit the taste of Russian consumers; (2) that it is so imperfectly packed as to be utterly unfit for transportation to distant countries; (3) that the plan pursued in trying to find new markets is defective. Though Japanese black tea is now fairly good in quality, it cannot yet equal the Chinese product, while brick tea from Japan is almost out of the question. As already intimated, the defective condition of the packages is often the cause of much inconvenience while passing through the Russian customs. Lastly, almost all the attempts to develop Japanese tea trade with Russian dominions have proved so far a failure, the only success attained being in the retail line, which has steadily developed.

CANADIAN EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. Bruce, general merchant of Aberdeen, Scotland, has been in St. John, N. B., within the past fortnight looking into the possibilities of increasing the exportation of goods from Canada to South Africa and Great Britain. With this end in view Mr. Bruce will look over the Maritime Provinces and endeavor to persuade eastern farmers to do more in the production of live stock for shipment. Later he expects to go west to agitate the raising of more live stock for the export trade.

BROOM CORN TRUST.

The forming of a gigantic broom corn trust by which the entire crop of brush in Illinois as well as other states will be controlled, is occasioning considerable interest across the line at the present time. It is not known definitely what effect the combination will exert on the planting and cultivation of broom corn in the United States. Everything depends on what prices prevail for the crop of this year.

BEET SUGAR IN IRELAND.

Encouraged by the success of experiments in sugar beet culture carried on in England during the last four or five years, Irish capitalists have completed arrangements for the purchase of a large tract of land in the Emerald Isle which will be given up to sugar beet growing. It is interesting to note that the quality of beet grown in England is 1903 was pronounced superior in every way to the German grown product.

TRADE IN NEW ZEALAND.

ACCORDING to the latest report money is hardening a little owing to advance in interest offered by Government savings banks, but trade in New Zealand continues to be good and increasing. The wheat promises a large yield, and the acreage is eighteen per cent. over that of the previous year. Oat prospects are not quite so good. The shipments of meat and butter were larger in 1903 than in 1902, while that of cheese was slightly less. The total imports of merchandise the last two years were: 1902, £10,945,171; 1903, £12,075,959.

There is strong complaint in New Zealand that British ships are carrying foreign goods at a lower rate than is charged on British. In some lines the figures are one pound two shillings per ton on foreign as against one pound seventeen shillings and sixpence on British. In these lines the difference in freight is about equivalent to the preferential duty. Unless closely watched, Canadian trade may be affected by similar discriminating freight rates. Minimum freight rates are the foundation of a successful export business.

PETERBORO' SUGAR COMPANY.

The proposal of D. A. Gordon, president of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company, to complete the Peterboro' Sugar Company's plant has been accepted by the municipal authorities on condition that the ratepayers of Peterboro', to whom the question will be submitted on May 5, approve of the scheme.

CHAIR OF POULTRY.

AMONG other interesting items of news from the State of Missouri, U.S., comes the announcement that a chair of poultry has been established in the University of Missouri. The study of poultry raising has been put on an equal plane with studies in other academic departments, and full instructions in the breeding and handling of domestic fowls and the production of eggs will be given.

The reasons for extending the course are due to the increasing importance of the poultry industry, and the remarkable interest manifested at the university last year, when the study was first introduced. Records show that it proved to be the most popular course ever offered at Missouri University. Another reason for the extension of the course is that the poultry business has become one of the leading industries in Missouri, the annual income from the same now being estimated at over $10,000,000.

SOLUBLE TEA.

A new commodity is being placed on the Australian market, known as soluble tea. It is in the form of a powder prepared by a patented process, and the particular advantages claimed for it are first, its concentrated form and consequent portability; second, its freedom from fatty acids which are often the cause of bitterness in leaf tea; and third, it is soluble in cold or hot water which obviates the necessity for boiling.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

More Flour Mills Needed in the West.

IT is doubtful if, in the general development of Western Canada, the milling industry has received due consideration, says the Winnipeg Free Press. In the growing prosperity of the country the fact has been overlooked that the first object of Canadians should be, not to rush the wheat into foreign lands, but to mill it into flour, and thus reserve to Canadian labor and Canadian capital the money spent in that necessary process. A recent shipment of flour for export from Kansas City consisted of four trains of 24 cars each. With Canadian flour in big demand in foreign markets, the uninitiated may wonder why export cargoes of these proportions are never taken from our shores. The explanation, of course, is that Canada has not, as yet, the necessary milling capacity to supply such quantities of flour. There is every reason to believe that if more Canadian capital were employed in erecting flour mills, a greater percentage of the amount of wheat that now goes to other countries would go in the shape of flour. The result would be a decided advantage from a Canadian standpoint, for it would give to Canadian workmen the money that must be spent somewhere to turn the wheat into flour.

The record of the large milling companies already existent in the Dominion shows that milling is exceptionally profitable in Canada; and Canadian enterprise and capital may be relied upon to develop this industry to its fullest capacity.

Other large milling companies will inevitably be called into existence by the obvious business opportunity which exists. A large mill is shortly to be built in Winnipeg with a daily output of 2,500 barrels; and there are well-founded reports that additional mills of large capacity are to be established in the near future on the Lake of the Woods, which as a milling centre is not unlikely to rival Minneapolis.

The building of immense flour mills in the interior of Canada will also have an important bearing on the fortunes of the new transcontinental railway. While wheat lends itself easily to water and rail carriage, owing to its adaptability to transhipment, all-rail shipments are preferable for flour; and a national transcontinental railway with low rates, is expected to do a very considerable business in hauling flour for export from interior points to Canadian seaports. The higher the proportion of wheat turned into flour near the source of supply, the more all-rail freight business there will be for the new road, and the more trade there will be for Canadian seaports.

The building of large modern and fully equipped flour mills at points in Western Canada easily accessible from the sources of wheat supply would be a decided advantage to the country. The success of the present mills implies that new mills under capable management would also be financially profitable to their owners. The country would enjoy the advantage of having the work of transforming the raw material into the finished product done at home—a decided advantage when commercially feasible, as it is in this case. The valuable by-products would remain in the country.

Another advantage would be that a larger consumption of wheat for milling purposes would help to safeguard the wheat market against the speculative flurries which from time to time demoralize the Canadian grain trade.

Canadian Flour in Norway.

SOME idea of the favor with which Canadian flour is looked upon in foreign countries can be had from a letter recently received by the Keewatin Flour Mills Co., from Christiania, Norway.

It is to the effect that Norway grows practically no wheat, which makes the comparative imports very considerable. In 1902 these amounted to 500,000 bags of 220 pounds each, and the consumption of wheat is steadily increasing. The bulk of this trade so far has gone to the United States milling concerns. Last season, however, the large Canadian milling companies, Ogilvie and Lake of the Woods, commenced work in Norway, especially the former, with satisfactory results. Besides disposing of large quantities of flour they established a market for Canadian rolled oats. Other Canadian mills of lesser capacity have also tried to sell their flour there, but have been unable to compete with the larger mills. It is easily seen that there is ample room for effort on the part of Canadian mills to cultivate a large and profitable outlet in Europe.

Manitoba Expects Bumper Crops.

It is estimated that no less than four million acres will be seeded in Manitoba this year. Experts are agreed that with favorable weather from now on 1904 will be a bumper crop year, as it is a remarkable fact that a hard Winter always means a better yield from grain crops.

New Milling Company.

The success that has attended the operations of the large Canadian flour mills has induced the incorporation of a new company, to be called the Keewatin Flour Mills Company, with an authorized capital of $2,000,000. It is said that a flour mill having a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day will be erected at Keewatin, and that elevators will be provided throughout Manitoba and the Territories. The company will in all probability manufacture exclusively from the grain products of northwestern Canada.

U. S. Bill re Bran and Milling By-Products.

A bill which is now before the Congress of the United States proposes to allow American millers grinding imported wheat in bonded mills and exporting flour, to sell their bran and other by-products in the United States on payment of the duties that the bran and by-products would be liable to if imported. The millers of the Northwest States who grind Canadan wheat for export have trouble in disposing of the bran. As the law now stands they can either de-

This Company has been formed for the purpose of carrying on a general flour milling business.

It is proposed to acquire a water power situated at Keewatin, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, 129 miles east of Winnipeg and 4 miles west of Rat Portage, with about 18 acres of land fronting on the railway. This water power, it is estimated, is capable of being developed to the extent of at least 5,000 h.p., and is a permanent, never-failing power, having the Lake of the Woods, about 3,000 miles in area, for a mill pond.

The Company intends to erect a flour mill at Keewatin with a capacity of 3,000 barrels per day, so designed as to be capable of being extended as future requirements may demand. Large storage capacities at the mill and elevators throughout Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, will also be provided.

Manitoba and the Northwest are already recognized as the coming granary of the Empire, and the unequalled reputation of the flour made from "Manitoba No. 1 Hard Wheat" must ensure an increasing demand for it in the markets of the world.

The Company proposes to manufacture exclusively from the grain products of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories.

MANAGEMENT—It is the intention of the Directors to secure men of the highest experience for the management of the various Departments.

PROFITS—The great success achieved and large profits shown by leading Companies engaged in manufacturing flour from Manitoba wheat, indicate that under proper management, and with the advantage of economical power, this new enterprise offers an excellent opportunity for investment.

It is proposed to organize the Company on a strictly cash basis, with a present issue of $1,000,000 stock. A large amount of this has already been taken, and the remainder is now offered for subscription. It is not the intention to issue bonds or preferred stock.

Application will be made in due course to have the stock of the Company listed on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

As far as possible stock will be allotted pro rata in case the amount is over-subscribed, but right is reserved to allot small amounts in full, or to decline any application.

TERMS—20 per cent. of the par value on application, and the balance in calls not exceeding 10 per cent. per month, as the Directors may determine.

Forms of application for stock may be obtained and subscriptions made at the offices of The Bank of Ottawa and The Bank of Nova Scotia throughout Canada.

Subscription lists will be open on 14th April, and closed on 22nd day of April, 1904.

stroy it or export it. In theory they can ship it abroad as readily as they can ship flour, but in practice they cannot do so. The value of the bran is not sufficient to leave much profit after paying freight, and the bran is liable to great deterioration in shipment. If, therefore, United States millers engaged in this trade are to be able to compete with their flour in European markets on even terms with Canadian millers they must have some means of disposing of their by-products at an advantage.

Big Profits in Canada.

SOME idea of the very large profits made in the milling business in Canada, when well managed, is given by a reference to the returns submitted by two of the largest concerns in that line. In one case when the prospectus was issued a couple of years ago the average net earnings for seven years were shown to be $284,293, or over 14 per cent. on a capital of $2,000,000. The following year they appear to have earned over $300,000, and a comparison of the last two balance sheets shows that last year they claimed earnings of about $650,000. Another large milling company has been equally successful in proportion to its capacity. On an original capital of $500,000 they paid handsome dividends for years and increased their reserve until it reached $1,000,000, when they paid a 20 per cent. dividend and divided the reserve by paying a stock dividend. This establishment has since been sold it is understood at a large advance, over $1,500,000, and continues to prosper. From these fiugres it looks as if there was money in a good-sized, well managed milling business.

U. S. Flour in South Africa.

A SHORT time ago one of the largest shipments of flour for export on record was made from the Kehler Flour Mills Company's Rex mill at Kansas City, Mo. It consisted of four trains of 20 cars each. That should at once bring home to Canadians the fact, that, although there is such a marked demand abroad for Canadian flour, Canada is not able to supply that demand. The question arises, why? Because she has not the milling capacity. There is every reason to believe that if more Canadian capital was employed in erecting water-power flour mills, a great percentage of the amount of wheat that now goes to other countries would go in the shape of flour. The result would be a decided advantage from a Canadian standpoint, for it would give to Canadian workmen the money that must be spent somewhere to turn the wheat into flour. The record of the large milling companies of the Dominion shows that this industry is exceptionally profitable in Canada.

Seedsmen Complain.

Prominent Canadian seedsmen are complaining in regard to the proposed Government bill for regulating the sale of seeds, that it is theoretical but not practicable, and have suggested a number of amendments. The necessity for the Act has risen owing to the discovery of a large quantity of inferior seed on the market against which purchasers must be protected.

Cereal Notes.

The Ogilvie Milling Company have purchased additional property at the corner of Dock street and North Wharf, St. John, N.B., which they intend transforming into a modern office building.

The Empire Elevator Company are reported to have closed a contract with a Minneapolis firm for the erection this season of a terminal elevator at Fort William with a capacity of one and three-quarter million bushels.

According to the Winnipeg Free Press the Northern Elevator Company, Winnipeg, have issued a writ against the Lake Huron-Manitoba Milling Company, Goderich, claiming $10,000 damages for the wrongful conversion of 10,000 bushels of wheat, which they say was consigned to the defendants, to be held to the order of plaintiffs, but was conveyed to the defendants' own use.

Tobacco Leaves.

THE first Europeans who saw tobacco smoked were two men whom Columbus dispatched on an embassy immediately after the discovery of the Island of Cuba. The names of these envoys, worthy of memory by the smoker, were Roderigo de Jerez and Luis de Jerez and Luis de Torres, the latter a Christianized Jew of special proficiency in Arabic and Hebrew. Six days were allowed to these two worthies in which to accomplish their mission, but after penetrating inland for some twelve leagues and stopping at a village of a thousand inhabitants they rejoined Columbus on November 6th, 1492, and recounted the several wonders which had fallen under their notice.

It was on their way back to the Spanish caravels, accompanied by three natives, that they first saw smoking practised. Several of the aborigines were making use of dried tobacco leaves which they formed into a long roll, lighted and put in their mouths, swallowing and puffing out the smoke. These primitive and gigantic cigars the natives called tobacos, a name since transferred from its original application to the plant itself.

Cigarmakers Ask for More Wages.

At a meeting of the Cigarmakers' Union, Hamilton, on April 13, the wage scale was discussed, and it was decided to ask for an increase of $1 per thousand for the manufacture of cigars, dating from May 1.

Apprentice Deserting.

A LAW concerning apprentices in the cigar trade was emphasized in the Montreal courts the other day. Two young men were sentenced to a fine of $5 each and costs, for deserting their employer at a time before their apprenticeship was completed. They were used as examples to try to check an evil which has become rampant. The average apprentice in the cigar making trade is quite accomplished after three years of training and thus is anxious to earn money in keeping with his abilities and not to hang on at apprentices' salary for another year; the compass of the trade-learning period being four years. Desertions have been frequent and often to the loss of the employer, as the efficiency of the latter years was the only compensation available for the first weak years.

Tobacco and the Cold.

THERE has been a marked shrinkage in the output of cigars and manufactured tobacco in the United States so far this calendar year, as compared with the corresponding period last year, says an American exchange. The falling off in the demand for these products is not confined to sections, but is general throughout the country. The reason is the unusual cold weather, which "acted as an embargo on smoking extensively in the open air." There was an increase, however, in the demand for "short smokes," such as cigarettes and small cigars, which, according to authorities on the subject, are in popular favor for indoor smoking.

It is stated that the falling off in the output of cigars in the entire country for January amounted to 36,114,493 in a total production of 468,275,713, against a total production of 504,390,206 in January, 1903. The output of manufactured tobacco decreased 4,345,640 in a total output of 19,878,402 pounds, which compares with a total output of 24,224,051 pounds for January, 1903. The production of snuff, which aggregated 1,577,165 pounds, decreased 234,491 as compared with the corresponding month in 1903. The output of cigarettes and little cigars showed substantial increases, amounting to 26,619,104 and 12,217,730 respectively.

Japanese Monopoly Bill Amended.

DESPATCHES from Japan state that the monopoly bill, which proposes to form a Government monopoly of the tobacco business in that country, has been amended in such a manner that the total sales for the past three years of all cigarette and tobacco factories will be considered as the basis on which payment will be made on account of good will. It was proposed heretofore to give a sum equal to the profits for the past three years only. The bill will undoubtedly pass in its present form.

The regulations governing the Japanese tobacco trade are as follows:

Leaf tobacco is sold by the Government according to fixed prices, but when necessary it may be sold at auction.

Nobody except a manufacturer or dealer can buy or receive any leaf tobacco. An exception is made to leaf tobacco bought as samples under permission of the officers authorized.

No manufacturers can make use of any material other than tobacco in manufacturing, nor can a dealer buy or sell any material other than tobacco with the object of supplying it for manufacture of tobacco.

Any manufacturer or dealer who has any leaf tobacco placed in warehouses outside of his establishment shall send a report, countersigned by the proprietor of such warehouses, to the local monopoly office, indicating the location of warehouses and quantity of each of different kinds of leaf tobacco, this report to be repeated whenever the places of storage are changed.

Manufacturers and dealers must keep books, and enter therein particulars of all business transactions to be submitted to the examination of the proper officers, who will visit them from time to time.

Any leaf tobacco not sold by the Government, if found in possession of any manufacturer or dealer, will be collected by the Government, whomsoever it may belong to, and remuneration will be paid at the proper rate.

The Government can inspect warehouses or any place of storage of tobacco belonging to anyone whatever, and the officers authorized can enter any place where tobacco is kept, or supposed to be kept, and take necessary measures for proper supervision. If in course of transmission it can be examined on the spot, wherever it may be.

With regard to the effect of this monopoly upon the tobacco growing industry of the Japanese empire, in the interest of which it was adopted, United States Consul Lyon, of Kobe, Japan, in his last annual report makes the following interesting statement:

From January 1 to August 15, 1899, there existed a duty of 35 per cent. on leaf tobacco; and from the latter date the Japanese Government has monopolized the import. While the 35 per cent. duty was in force, and in anticipation of the exclusive importation by the Japanese Government, there was imported by merchants and manufacturers an enormous quantity of leaf tobacco, valued at $2,533,004, against $2,254,774 in 1898, and $159,785 in 1897. The import of 1899 seems to have glutted the market during the two years following, and to have destroyed the Government's chances to do much business in the commodity, the value of the import having decreased to $226,237 during 1900, and to $15,075 in 1901. The establishment of the Government monopoly has had the effect to encourage the raising of tobacco in this country upon a much larger scale than formely, official estimates increasing the acreage to yield 78,177,012 pounds.

As to quantity the Japanese are not such excessive users of tobacco individually as are found in many other countries. They make more frequent use of it, but in lesser quantities; the small Japanese pipe, carried at the belt and holding less than a thimbleful, being emptied many times a day. Tobacco is largely used by the natives at seaports and in larger cities in the form of cigarcities. Many are consumed by the jinrikisha men, and when one is called, he places the cigarettes behind his ear, ready for another draw at the end of his run.

Leaf Tobacco for Free List in U. S.

A BILL has been recommended by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the United States, by which all restrictions will be taken off the handling of leaf tobacco in its unstemmed condition. This amendment to the existing law will remove all external revenue changes or charges of any kind from unstemmed tobacco in the natural leaf which is unmanufactured or altered in any manner. It will be lawful, moreover, for any person to buy and sell such unstemmed tobacco in the leaf without payment of tax of any kind, such person selling natural leaf tobacco to manufacturers of tobacco, snuff or cigars, however, to be considered a dealer in leaf tobacco and to become subject to all the regulations in respect to the same. Farmers and growers of tobacco may sell leaf tobacco of their own growth and raising to manufacturers of tobacco, snuff or cigars without being considered leaf dealers or manufacturers of tobacco.

Union of U. S. Tobacco Interests.

A conference of various American tobacco interests has recently been held in Louisville, Kentucky, looking toward the formation of a combine between a number of cigar, stogie, and plug tobacco manufacturers. It is reported that there is $20,000,000 behind the new venture, and that the intention is to conduct the individual concerns interested as separate factories and make combination offers of its cigars with the tobaccos.

Tobacco Men's Petition.

The Toronto News is authority for the statement that a deputation of tobacco-growers from the Counties of Joliette, Berthier, l'Assomption and Montcalm saw Sir Wilfrid Laurier last week, and asked that the Government introduce legislation to forbid contracts which the American Tobacco Company makes with storekepers, binding them to handle no other company's goods. They ask also that the distinctive stamp by which Canadian tobacco and cigars are now recognized be abolished and that the Government increase by ten cents the excise rate payable on imported tobacco.

Trade and Commerce in the Magazines

Rice Supersedes Cotton.

SEVERAL years ago the cotton planters of Louisiana and Texas were face to face with a problem, which threatened the complete extinction of the cotton-growing industry. The boll weevil, an insect pest, invaded the country and destroyed the crops year after year. In Collier's Weekly of recent date, C. Arthur Williams narrates the interesting story of how the planters solved the difficulty by transforming their cotton plantations into rice farms.

"Everybody talked rice and soon rice-growing spread all over the great stretch of country along the Gulf of Mexico, between Bayou Teche, in Louisiana, on the east, and a point not far from the mouth of the Rio Grande on the west. It is still spreading, and unless all indications are at fault, it will continue to spread for many years to come. There are now about 340,000 acres of rice lands under cultivation in Louisiana, and something like 250,000 in the coast country of Texas.....A few years ago all the rice raised in the United States came mainly from the Carolinas, with a small production in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi. Now the centre of production has moved far to the west, and last year the Texas-Louisiana fields produced approximately 5,000,000 sacks of 162 pounds each, as against only 470,000 sacks for all the other states named."

The Beef Trust

The Outlook for April 9, explains the reason for the investigation, ordered by Congress, into the disparity between the prevailing prices of live beef cattle and the selling prices of dressed beef in the United States.

"Last August good to extra fresh beef sold in Boston at $8.37 1-2 per 100 pounds. In the preceding April such beef, in the same market, had brought only $6.50, although the packers in Chicago had actually paid a few cents more per 100 pounds for the live cattle in April than they paid in August. In April, with live cattle quoted at $5.35 in Chicago, the dressed beef in Boston brought only $1.15 more per 100 lbs., while in August, with live cattle quoted at $5.17 1-2, the same quality of beef brought $3.20 more—a difference of 61.8 per cent. between the live cattle and the marketable meat. It will be hard to convince the public that such a rise, within four months, was due to any combination of natural causes."

Contraband of War.

Macmillan's Magazine for April contains an instructive article defining "contraband of war" and explaining the international law regarding it. By the Declaration of Paris in 1856, the principal nations of Europe bound themselves to respect certain principles. The first and most important has been expressed in the jingle, Free ships, free goods.

"The early practice of nations had been to seize their enemies' goods where they could get them. Sometimes they confiscated the neutral carrier as well; occasionally they went so far as to prohibit all trade with the enemy at all.... The leading innovation of the Declaration of Paris, was, accordingly, the protection of the property of belligerents when on board neutral merchant vessels. Clearly, the new rule, Free ships, free goods, protected the neutrals' carrying trade; for under its operation belligerents could safely put their goods on board neutral carriers without fear of capture; and moreover, the vexations ancillary incidents of stoppage, search, and adjudication, were gone. On the other hand, neutral property still remained safe on belligerent ships; the converse rule, Enemy's ships, enemy's goods, was unrecognized, and neutral goods, which could have been confiscated if lying on an enemy's wharves, were safe at sea under his flag.

"The Declaration, however, has never been signed by the United States, Spain, or Mexico; and Japan and Russia can accordingly seize each other's goods on United States' ships, though they are not in the least likely to do so."

Three Imperial Trusts.

Three trusts made the British Empire, according to Hartley Davis, who writes in the April Muncey about the Hudson Bay Company, the East India Company and the South Africa Company.

"The founders of the original trusts had the same motives as the organizers of the modern ones,—the making of more money; but they wanted the money for itself rather than for the power it gives. Merchants of London, conning their account books in dim and musty offices, grew lean with discontent over the safe and moderate returns of an ordinary, conservative business. Their imaginations were inflamed by tales of treasure to be won in strange and mysterious lands beyond the oceans, and their covetousness made them take gamblers' chances in the boiling jungles of the tropics, amid the eternal ice of the Arctic seas. These tradesmen, seeking only to fill their strong boxes with gold, became the sovereign rulers of three hundred million people and of six million square miles of territory. The area of the whole continent of North America is but little more than six million square miles, and its population is less than one hundred million souls. The three great chartered companies gained for England practically all her important colonial possessions save Australia."

WANT A UNION.

The Canadian Meat Cutters and Butchers' Workmen, who are affiliated with the Amalgamated Union of America, will make a big effort at the annual convention to be held in Cincinnati on May 9 to have a Canadian organization formed. They believe that the membership in Canada warrants the formation of a separate organization, though they will retain their connection with the Amalgamated Association. Delegates will be sent from Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London and other western Canadian towns and cities. The Canadian delegates will also try to bring the next convention to Toronto, which would mean about 1,000 visitors.

The Toronto butcher workers announce that they have decided to ask for an advance in wages. Several firms have already agreed, but one of the largest abattoirs in the city has declined to consider the new wage scale. At present the men engaged in the trade are divided into 37 different classes, each of which has a separate scale of wages.

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly-caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

Highest Quality Always.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

CO-OPERATIVE TRADING IN EUROPE

IN an address delivered in England in 1874 Prof. Goldwin Smith said that when negotiations were once going on between Napoleon Bonaparte and the Austrian Government, before the treaty of Campo Formio, the Austrian Government offered as a concession that they would acknowledge the French Republic. "The Austrian Government might as well offer to acknowledge the sun in heaven," was young Bonaparte's answer. And an attempt to defend co-operative stores, continued Professor Smith, to attempt to show that co-operative stores might be successful and beneficial would be like offering to acknowledge the sun in heaven.

Since that time the co-operative movement in England has made enormous strides and in the twenty-six years preceding 1890 the sales made through the societies amounted to the almost incredible sum of £471,200,000, and the profits for the same period amounted to nearly £40,000,000. In 1890 there existed in Great Britain one thousand five hundred and fifteen societies with over a million members and a capital exceeding £11,000,000. Their annual business at that time amounted to upwards of £40,000,000 and their yearly profits to £3,755,646. Of the number of members of the societies Lord Rosebery said: "We have an army as great again as the army Napoleon led into Russia, and the capital of the movement is as great as the national debt of England in the reign of Queen Anne; and the co-operative annual income is as great as the income of England during the reign of William III."

Mr. Gladstone speaking at West Calder in 1890, remarked that co-operation in the distribution of commodities was attended with immense economy. "Most heartily," he said, "wherever it can be had, in manufacture or in agriculture, I for one cordially wish it well."

The co-operative societies in England are chiefly trading concerns, but they also carry on numerous mills and factories and many of them own a large number of houses and other properties which have been acquired for the use and benefit of their members. Mr. Holyoake, author of the "History of Co-operation in England," and other economic works, says: "The reader who has proceeded thus far will understand what are the signs of the co-operator and will almost know him at sight. You may know one in the streets of Yorkshire—the men are better fed and the women better dressed, the children are healthy and plump. In the face of a co-operative workman there is more satisfaction, his face has fewer furrows of care." The same author further says: "No store ever fails that pays a fair dividend and no store ever fails to pay a fair dividend whose members buy at it."

At the British Co-operative Congress held in 1902, reports were received from 1648 societies doing business in the United Kingdom, with a membership of 1,919,555, a share capital of £24,595,706, and profits of £9,000,000, or nearly 37 per cent. on the share capital. The annual sales reported for 1901 were £81,782,949.

Prominent among the English co-operative societies are the wholesale concerns, which are really the purchasing organizations for the retail stores throughout the country. The Economic Review for April, 1903, speaking of the annual report of the co-operative wholesale societies says:

"The Wholesale Annual, as it is popularly called, never appears but it has a tale to tell of growing business and strength which thoroughly astonishes outsiders. For what is related must appear to them truly fabulous. The Manchester society alone has in the latest instance in the report for 1901 £17,642,082 of sales to record, as compared with only £8,766,430 ten years previous, and £3,574,095 in 1881, and only £758,764 in 1871. That society began business in 1864. Up to 1901, inclusive, it sold in all £208,163,058 worth of goods, netting £3,073,251 of profits, which means that the latter sum has been paid back through this society into the pockets of the purchasers. From year to year the society has gone on extending its business, perfecting its methods, widening its sway like a great empire; laying new provinces under contribution, unceasingly conquering, annexing, absorbing, consolidating. It has its branches and depots now established all over the world, in Australia, in Ceylon, in France, in Denmark. It runs its own flotilla of steamers backwards and forwards to interconnect them. It grows its own tea out in China on its own plantation. It manufactures its own boots and shoes, every description of clothing, its own furniture, its own soap, cocoa and other provisions.

"The Scottish wholesale co-operative society, which is smaller and newer, but really more abreast with the times, comes in to swell the total by £5,700,743 of sales in the year, with £251,686 profit."

IN GERMANY, AUSTRIA AND FRANCE.

Complete statistics concerning the co-operative societies of Germany are not available. The principal sources of detailed information about them are the reports published by the Central Union. The union, however, only furnishes statistics for those societies which accept its rules and make regular reports to its central office. The co-operative movement in Germany appears to have originated near the middle of the last century and in 1888 a statement compiled by the union gave the names of 5,950 societies with two million members and an annual business of about $700,000,000. The German societies carry on various lines of business, including banking and manufacturing and the supplying of machines and other goods to farmers.

In the Austrian Empire and the Kingdom of Hungary statistics gathered in 1883 show a total of 1,872 societies. Eight years later when a convention was held in Prague it was estimated that considerable progress had been made but no statistics were available, there being no central bureau for the gathering of information of any kind.

In France it is probable that in the case of co-operative societies, as in the case of other institutions, the Government keeps complete statistics from year to year, but up to the present time I have not been able to get any satisfactory statement. The farmers of France, however, supply themselves very extensively through co-operative societies with their agricultural implements and other articles required on the farm, and to such an extent is this the case that the large American implement companies find it necessary there to set aside their ordinary methods of doing business and place goods to a considerable extent through the farmers' organizations.

ateur Francais, in January, 1888, "formed originally to obtain for their members the articles necessary for their business, such as manures, implements, &c., show in their development one of the most surprising social facts ever witnessed in France or elsewhere. They date from the law of March, 1884, which permitted such bodies to be formed, and already they number seven hundred. They have done what they professed in securing to their members the increase and amelioration of their produce by buying cheaply and under protection against fraud what constitutes the elements of good agricultural produce."

In Italy the co-operative movement is making remarkable progress. Until within the last few years it had to meet with the determined opposition of the Government, who feared its political power. In Turin there is a society which owns seventeen general stores and two chemist stores, and in other parts of the country the movement is gaining a firm foothold.

CO-OPERATION IN DENMARK.

In no other part of the world has co-operation among the agricultural classes reached so complete a development as in the Kingdom of Denmark. The total population of Denmark is about 2,000,000, the adult male population is estimated at 580,000. There are 900 co-operative stores with a membership of about 140,000, and annual sales amounting to $7,000,000.

In addition to these stores there are 1,057 co-operative dairies with a membership about equal to the store membership. The extent of the co-operative dairying societies may be imagined when it is stated that over eight-tenths of all the cattle in Denmark are owned by the co-operative societies. It was estimated last October that in the whole country there was about one million cattle of which the co-operative dairying societies owned 850,000. The co-operative dairies in Denmark did not come into existence until 1882, and it will therefore be readily seen that their growth has been simply marvellous. In the year 1901 the co-operative dairies of Denmark sent to England 162,140,000 pounds of butter, or 42.2 per cent. of all the butter imported by England, and so great an effect has the co-operative movement had upon the quality of dairy products that the butter sent to England from Denmark brought an average of 1¾ pence per pound higher price than other butter sold in England. At the last World's Fair held in Paris, the first prize for dairy products was taken by Denmark, notwithstanding the fact that the butter sent from that country had been made several days before the date set for the judging, while it had to compete with fresh butter brought in by French peasants immediately before the test.

So marvellous had been the success of other co-operative enterprises that in 1888 the Danes set to work to establish co-operative slaughter houses. Their growth may be gauged by the fact that in 1888 the one co-operative slaughter house then existing did a business valued at about $250,000, while in 1901 their annual business had reached a total of nearly $10,000,000.

Another co-operative society in Denmark is the Danish Co-operative Egg Export Company, which last year sent to England alone nearly a million dollars worth of eggs.

The total membership of the co-operative societies of Denmark is estimated at 400,000, or within 180,000 of the total male adult population of the kingdom. Their total sales amount annually to nearly $50,000,000.

CO-OPERATION IN BELGIUM.

The growth of the co-operative movement in Belgium during the last twenty years has been very rapid. Two great trading concerns, the "Vooruit" of Ghent, and the "Maison du Peuple" of Brussels, had their beginning with a few hundred francs and in a cellar. To-day, less than twenty years after, these two co-operatives each possess real estate to the amount of more than $300,000. So poor were the people who started them that the membership fee of ten francs (1.93) was paid during a term of years, the candidates for membership not being able to pay it all down. It seems incredible that from such small beginnings such great enterprises should be built up but the dominant factor in co-operation is not the capital contributed by the members but their purchases.

On the 1st of January, 1901, there were in Belgium more than 1,800 co-operative societies of all classes. Unfortunately there are no complete statistics for these societies, but Mr. Louis Bertrand, who represents Brussels in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies, in a magazine article written in 1901, estimated their membership at 200,000, which on a basis of five persons to a family would represent a total of a million consumers or more than a seventh of the population of the country.

The same writer, speaking of the co-operative movement in his own country, says: "To-day the movement is indestructible; it has roots too deep for any crisis to overturn them. It makes an integral part of our national life, it has entered into our customs and nothing henceforth can arrest its forward march."

The widespread character of the co-operative movement in Belgium is shown by the divergent channels into which its energies are directed. Of the new societies founded during the three years ending with 1900 there were 116 savings and loan societies, 210 creameries, 191 trading societies, 65 breweries and distilleries, 18 manufactories, 31 insurance societies and 45 miscellaneous organizations.

English Butter Imports.

IMPORTATIONS of butter into England for 1903 totalled 4,061,044 cwts., of the value of £20,768,706, and Canada contributed to this amount 185,464 cwts., of the value of £866,249, while in 1902 Canada shipped to the value of £1,347,345. The following statistics, taken from the Trade and Navigation Returns of Great Britain for the years 1902-3, show the quantity and value of importations of butter to England for 1902 and 1903 respectively from the various producing countries:

The export of butter from Canada for 1903 shows a remarkably large falling off, principally due to the high price cheese commanded throughout the season, inducing the farmers to send their milk to the cheese factories, as well as the high price obtained for butter at the creamery doors, being higher than offerings for export.

Canadian Butter Satisfactory.

According to one of the Canadian Government's agents residing in Great Britain the quality of Canadian butter on the whole has been satisfactory, and it should continue to be made with the utmost care and shipped as fresh as possible. The great competitor in this market is Danish, which realises 10s. per cwt. and sometimes 15s. higher than the average price of Canadian. The proximity of Denmark to this market for fresh made creameries, gives it an advantage over the Canadian production, but this may to a great extent be counteracted by the super excellence of Canadian butter. As a proof of the fine quality of Canadian butter some dealers rather unscrupulously sell it as Danish to customers who prefer the latter.

New Zealand Butter.

New Zealand butter is advancing to a prominent place as to quality, and it endeavors to conserve such a position by a thorough system of grading, so that a buyer cannot be deceived as to the quality he is obtaining.

Russian Butter.

The import of Russian butter into Great Britain has increased very materially in the past few years, and the utmost attention and large sums of money have been expended to bring it to the highest state of perfection. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that no effort should be spared by the Canadian creamery managers to bring their products up to the very acme of excellence so that this immense market may be conserved to them, not through any friendly, cousinly feeling, which is rather a slender reed to rely on in business relations, but solely upon the superior quality of the article, stimulated not only by a desire for the trade of England, but from patriotic pride in the productions of the glorious land of the maple leaf.

Butter Market in England.

THE latest market report from Manchester, Eng., says that the price of Danish butter has not been so low in April for fifteen years as it is to-day. On April 9 it was within one kroner of the lowest point reached last year, which did not occur till the end of May, in the full flush of the grass season. This low price so early in the season can only be accounted for by the heavy shrinkage in wages in Lancashire, and the receipt of an increase of 8,000 tons of butter for first three months of 1904 as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The indications are for cheap prices this Summer, but much will depend on the weather. The increase is mainly from Australia, where the growth of grass has been phenomenal, after years of repeated droughts. Imports of Australasian will now cease, but their place will be taken by Irish and Dutch creameries. It is probable that the lowest point for butter this season will be as low as any touched for the past twenty-five years.

Another New Industry.

An English firm are looking about Western Ontario for a suitable location for a factory which will be devoted to the manufacture of powdered or dry milk and condensed milk. It is likely that Stratford will get the new industry.

Dairy Farmers' Trouble.

F. W. HODSON, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, in his report on the dairy prospects in Ontario, says the great difficulty is to secure proper help on dairy farms. The Northwest is attracting many good hands and comparatively little competent help is arriving from England. As a result, several Ontario dairy farms are practically out of business. Even the Government dairy farm was afraid for a time that it would have to shut down.

Mr. Hodson expects to receive very shortly from Kennedy's, the famous Scotch makers of dairy appliances, some machinery on trial, which it is said very greatly economizes labor in dairies.

It is just possible, he thinks, that the retirement of the cattle commissioners of the St. Louis Exposition and the appointment of new men may mean that Canadians will yet exhibit at the Exposition.

Argentine Shipments to England.

A new freight and refrigerated meat service has been inaugurated between Manchester, England, and the River Plate. Three big vessels have been put on the line, and the first has arrived at Manchester with a full cargo of tallow, wool, grain and miscellaneous produce. These vessels are not yet equipped with refrigerating apparatus for the care of dressed meats, but this will be effected soon.

The Victoria Creamery, of Victoria, B.C., has started operations for the season in its new building.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision market continues steady with last week's prices unchanged. The demand for smoked meats continues fair. There are no further advances to report in live hogs notwithstanding the fact that the English bacon market continues to improve slowly. Latest London reports not an advance of 1 to 2s on Canadian goods. The fresh meat market is active. We quote the following prices:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08½ $0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½ 0 13

Butter—Supplies of butter are arriving very freely, particularly dairy rolls, and as a result stocks are already beginning to accumulate with prices declining considerably. The easiness ruling in dairy rolls is reflected in creamery butter, in which the market is a little off for the week. A number of creameries have begun operations which also has a tendency to make the market easier. Dairy tubs, best quality, are out of the market. Creamery prints and solids are each 1c easier, and dairy rolls and prints 1c easier respectively. Dairy tubs under qualities have a range of prices smaller by 1c. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 20	0 21
" solids, fresh	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls, large	0 13	0 14
" prints	0 14	0 15

Cheese—The cheese market continues quiet, with supplies of new cheese beginning to arrive. Prices rule easier than last week. New fodder cheese is quoted at 8 1-2 to 9 1-2c, although one dealer says 9c is the outside price. Old twins are from 1 to 2c easier. with no new twins offering as yet. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 09½	0 10½
" new fodder	0 08½	0 09½

Provisions—The generally strong feeling that dominated the pork market the last day or two is a notable feature. The arrivals of provisions have been large, yet, owing to the competition among buyers, prices have advanced. This applies to hogs alone and the advance reached $5.40 to $5.50 per 100 lbs. Following this, in sympathy, came the advance in fresh killed abattoir dressed stock which advanced 25 cents per 100 lbs. Demand was good yesterlay and sales were made at $7.50 to $7.75. A fair demand has been noticed for hams and bacon from local and country buyers. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50 $18 00

Butter—The butter market is exceptionally quiet and prices have not been so low for years. This can be well understood when we quote fine fresh creamery at 15 3-4 f.o.b. country points or 16 cents spot. We quote:

Fancy creamery	0 15½ 0 16

Cheese—This market is featureless too and business is dull. Full cheese quotations as to shipments are given elsewhere. At present the price current is down to 7 1-2 cents.

St. John, N. B.

Provisions—Pork is dull and easier. Beef, while unchanged, is a small business. In pure lard, prices are still low. The stock held here is large. The low price of pure lard has affected the sale of refined and compound lard. Smoked meats are unchanged and show a fair sale. In fresh meats there is a fair supply of beef and prices are unchanged, but quite firm. Veal is low and freely offered. Mutton is rather higher. It is early for lamb. Pork shows a fair sale at even prices.

New Potato.

L. Burbank, of San Francisco, Cal., who produced the potato which bears his name, has produced an entirely new potato, which may supplant all others. Some time ago he secured from a remote part of South America some potato seed, which he planted and watched carefully. He crossed and recrossed the plants in his mode of hybridization and now says he has produced something new. The potato is sweeter than the old. Its pulp is almost a carrot hue and very palatable. Mr. Burbank declared the new potato would revolutionize the new potato industry of the world.

Irish Bacon Trade.

A writer in the Irish Times attributes the falling off in the Irish bacon trade to the competition of Canada, where 30,000 pigs are killed weekly, to Ireland's 5,000. He suggests, as a remedy, that on all foreign bacon be branded the country of origin.

VINEGAR FROM APPLES.

Glencoe, April 21, 1904.

Editor Canadian Grocer—

Dear Sir,—During my travels in Nova Scotia last Fall I called at the town of Bridgetown, N.S. This is a very pretty town of about 1,000, situated on the Dominion Atlantic Railway. Here I found two cider vinegar works, one operated by Messrs. Beeler & Peters, who were grinding up such class of apples as were unfit for shipment into cider vinegar. They had at that time four large tanks of a capacity from 20,000 to 22,000 gallons of cider. They were busy getting stock for a fifth tank giving them a total capacity of something like 100,000 gallons. This, as soon as converted into vinegar, is put into barrels and sold in quantities to suit the buyers. Whether such concerns are in operation in the apple districts of Ontario or not I am unable to say, but I have never come across one, and I think the field is large for the manufacture of pure cider vinegar both for home consumption and for export, as we have thousands of bushels of apples going to waste fit for this purpose. The machinery was imported from the United States.

AUSTRALIAN SALT FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Some time ago trial shipments of South Australian salt were made to British Columbia, but the heavy freight charges from Adelaide to Vancouver resulted in the venture being a financial loss. There is now a prospect of another shipment being made to try the Canadian market.

TAPIOCA STILL SCARCE.

THERE must be some reason for the report that some business men are circulating to the effect that there is no scarcity of tapioca. Tapioca is scarce and The Grocer has it from a direct source that in Penang and Singapore only the very largest factories are continuing the manufacture of tapioca. Several smaller ones have had to give up, and even the managers of those factories still working believe that it is a losing proposition to continue, owing to the extremely low prices prevailing. Some force is at work according to trade history, to make tapioca sell better, or at least for a better price.

AMERICAN CAPITAL TO DEVELOP FISHERIES OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

A bill has just been passed by the Legislative Assembly of Newfoundland which is full of significance for the future of the fishing industry of the island colony, and possibly of the Maritime Provinces as well.

The bill, as recounted by a special representative of the Toronto Globe, now in Newfoundland, provides for the granting of assistance to a United States company which proposes to go into the cold-storage business on a large scale. The company is guaranteed for twenty years a dividend of 5 per cent. per annum on a capital of half a million dollars on condition that $250,000 is spent on a cold-storage plant and $200,000 expended yearly in the purchase of fish in the island for export. The company also undertakes to preserve bait in cold-storage, and distribute the same at a reasonable price wherever it is needed by Newfoundland fishermen, an undertaking that will undoubtedly be a great boon to the fishermen, enabling them, as it will, to overcome the difficulty they have hitherto labored under, of frequently being unable to obtain bait in localities where fishing is good.

Ship Fish Into United States Free.

The company, as has been said, intends to go into the business on a very large scale, and instead of being capitalized at half a million it will probably issue stock to the extent of two or three millions, and instead of spending $250,000 on plant, a million will be nearer the mark. It proposes to establish a central cold-storage station, and a number of sub-stations in various parts of the island. At these sub-stations fish will be purchased, shipped to the central depot and thence to the United States.

The American duty on fish, both fresh and dried, averages about three-quarters of a cent per pound. The Bond-Hay treaty looks to the removal of the duty on dried fish, the Washington authorities refusing absolutely to consider any change in respect to fresh fish.

The Newfoundland Cold-storage Company, the concern which has been given assistance by the island Government, will be able to ship fish, both fresh and dried, into the United States free of duty, and this is how it can be done :

The law department at Washington has given an incontrovertible opinion that, under an Anglo-American treaty signed in 1818, any American citizen may fish in certain waters of Newfoundland, and that the fish so caught in such waters are not liable to duty in the United States. On representations from the Newfoundland Cold-storage Company that certain disabilities exist preventing Americans from deriving full benefit from the treaty concessions, and that it proposes to remove those disabilities by employing Newfoundland fishermen to assist in supplying the company with fish, the Washington authorities have declared that there is nothing to prevent all the fish shipped in American bottoms by the company to the United States from entering free of duty, even though not entirely caught by American fishermen.

In other words, the company referred to can apparently take into its employ, if it chooses, all the Newfoundland fishermen, and ship the product of their labors into the United States free of duty.

Newfoundland Now Helpless.

The leverage the Newfoundland Government has hitherto used in its endeavor to obtain concessions from the United States has been that at any time it could enforce a bait act against American fishermen, such as that now in operation against the French, or raise considerably the license fee now imposed. But the Newfoundland Government by its guarantee has connected itself financially with the Cold-storage Company and cannot place any disabilities in its way without materially affecting its own interests. It has guaranteed this company 5 per cent. interest on its half-million capital for twenty years, and cannot restrict its operations. The bill providing for the guarantee was a special bill, and, therefore, practically grants a monopoly to the company, and hands over to it, to all intents and purposes, the control of the bait supply.

Enormous Saving in Duty.

An idea of the concession which has been granted to the company may be gathered from the fact that, should it confine its operations to storing and shipping 50 tons of fish per day, the saving in the American duty at three-quarters of a cent per pound will alone amount to $225,000 yearly. The company proposes, however, to operate a line of steamers, and the probability is that its output will be from 100 to 150 tons per day.

The company originally proposed to export the fish to the United States in bond via Sydney, Cape Breton, establishing at that point a cold-storage warehouse, but the severity of the past Winter having proven that Sydney is not a Winter port, it is most probable that this idea will be abandoned and Boston made the receiving port.

All the advantages of the agreement will not by any means be on the side of the company. The island fishermen will undoubtedly benefit very considerably. They will obtain not only all the advantages of the Bond-Hay treaty, but their fresh fish will be admitted into the United States free; they will have the benefits of a great modern cold-storage system, and in addition will be enabled to obtain frozen bait in localities where bait is scarce.

So valuable is the concession to the company, however, that there is very little likelihood of the Government being called upon to make up any deficiency in the profits.

SMALL OYSTER CROPS.

MARYLAND is facing a serious diminution in her oyster crop, and the once famous fisheries of that State are being rapidly depleted. A writer in Collier's devotes some space to a discussion of the question. He says: "A recently published table of statistics shows that in the last 17 years the number of bushels of steamed and raw oysters purchased and marketed in Baltimore, has decreased from 7,500,000 approximately to 2,800,000. Throughout the State the same ratio of reduction of output has held, and now arguments, flippant and serious, are being hurled at the Maryland lawmakers to prove that legislation is necessary to recover the prosperity lost through the exhaustion of the natural beds.

"The former flourishing oyster trade of Baltimore is said to be almost extinct. Many packing houses are closed and 10,000 employes have been thrown out of employment. The oyster fund of the State Treasury is bankrupt. Packers and the boatmen themselves are suffering from the prevailing famine. The price of this food is so high as to make it prohibitory to the average consumer. It is to repair the shattered state of the trade that a measure, known as the 'Haman Bill' is before the Legislature of Maryland. This bill has had the indorsement of practical men in the trade, and has also been approved by experts appointed by the United States Fish Commission. Its object is to stimulate an increase in the supply of oysters by opening the now unproductive parts of the bivalve beds."

THE COMING CROP OF FILBERTS.

Latest reports from the filbert-growing districts in Sicily state that owing to recent hailstorms it is feared the new crop, which is already expected to turn out small, has been seriously damaged. Under this impression sellers, both of old and new crop, have completely withdrawn from the market, although buyers are not pressing forward, and prefer to await further developments.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Trap Fishing.

SINCE the announcement from Ottawa that the taking of salmon in traps is to be permitted, it is interesting to note the opinions of cannery men as to the probable effect upon the industry of the new regulations. Men prominent in the business on the mainland of British Columbia predict a great revival on the Fraser River. Others say those who experiment with traps will be heavy losers, for the reason that traps cannot be successfully operated along the shores of Vancouver Island. They hold that strong tides and heavy storms will frustrate any attempts to plant such paraphernalia as is used with marked success by the cannery operators on Puget Sound.

It is to be supposed that the people who have been agitating for permission to do business upon identical lines with their rivals in the United States have calculated all the advantages and disadvantages and are agreed that there is at least some prospect of success. In any case they are willing to enter upon the experiment. If they do not succeed, a controversy that has caused a good deal of ill-feeling amongst the men and between the sections interested in an important industry on this coast will be permanently disposed of. If they are successful, Canadians will have within their grasp a possible means of solving the greatest problem confronting the salmon industry at the present time.

B. C. Canners Fix Salmon Rates.

THE Fraser River Canners' Association have anticipated the annual threats of strike by the salmon fishermen, and fixed the rate to be paid for sockeyes at 20 cents per fish. This will apply from the commencement of the season early in July to its close the latter part of August. Last year the canners offered the fishermen the choice of a flat rate of 12 cents per fish or a sliding scale, the latter being accepted by the fishermen. The rate now offered is the highest paid for four years.

While the canners have been busy discussing the price of fish, the Chinese contractors have not been idle in looking after their interests. They have decided not to make contracts for packing fish unless the canners guarantee 75 per cent. of their contracts. These contractors provide the labor for packing the salmon inside the canneries, and claim to have lost money through the poor catches of recent years.

An advance in the price of packing salmon has also been demanded by the Chinese contractors. They ask 50 cents per finished case instead of 48 cents, and the difference, if granted, will amount to $10,000 in the course of the season.

The Chinese who make a business of contracting with the canners claim to have put up the price because of the scarcity of labor this year as compared with past seasons. They announce that the increase in the head tax on Chinese entering the country has cut off all immigration and that Chinese labor is becoming very scarce. They state that since January between 1,500 and 2,000 Chinese have gone from this coast to points in the Northwest and to Eastern Canada. British Columbia contractors are therefore going to take every advantage of the exclusion of their countrymen from Canada.

Fishing Crews.

The aggressive policy of the United States fish concerns in Boston and Gloucester in giving added inducements to Canadian fishermen to ship with them, with the object of crippling the chances of the fish houses of northern Nova Scotia in finding a crew, is causing grave apprehension this Spring. The majority of Canadian fishing vessels are owned by fish concerns who pay the men a monthly salary or ship on shares. The United States vessels pay on shares only and as a result of the increased price received for their catch the fishermen receive almost double what can be earned in Canadian vessels. This will tend to force Nova Scotia dealers to pay higher for the catch, if good crews are to be had. A large number of Canadian fishermen have already shipped on American vessels and the class left are those who prefer the life of American tourists to the strenuous task of fishing. The practical result is seen in many Canadian vessels lying idle a good part of the season. All natural advantages lie with Canadian dealers, the three-mile law keeping the Americans out of good ground. In export trade Canadians at present can lay down salt fish at almost half the Americans' figures However, the fish dealers of Boston and Gloucester by buying any quantity and paying a higher price than Canadian dealers are tending to gradually minimize the available supply in Northern Nova Scotia. Canadian dealers must pay higher wages to their crews in order to avoid disastrous results.

Fresh Spring Salmon for B. C. Markets.

The institution of trap fishing in British Columbia will mean among other things the supplying of fresh Spring salmon for the local market in quantity that will ensure to British Columbians, a plentifulness of this kind of diet the year round. Formerly there has been a scarcity except during the immediate fishing season. This will now be remedied and the fresh fish business will be developed along the entire British Columbia coast.

Alaskan Hatcheries.

British Columbia cannerymen will be interested in learning there is a likelihood that the present session of the United States Congress will end without any action looking toward the establishment of salmon hatcheries in Alaska, or the enactment of any other important legislation to protect the fisheries in the territory. The proposition to establish hatcheries is a Government measure, pure and simple. Some of the cannerymen would like to have the measure carried through and all of them are more or less interested in the matter because they would probably be relieved of the legal provision which requires them to plant a lot of salmon fry in the Alaska streams every season. This provision is, however, almost a dead letter; at least it is physically impossible for the cannerymen to comply with the letter of the law.

Bass and 'Lunge Season.

A change in the close season for black bass and maskinonge has been announced. This will now extend from January 1 to June 30, instead of from April 15 to June 15.

5,861 PARTNERS.

I LIKE to think of my customers as business partners and to treat them as such. I do that by giving them teas they can sell to their own advantage, and to the satisfaction of their customers.

I depend for my success on selling—GOOD TEA—put on the market in proper shape so it will please and retain these business partners of mine whether times are good or dull.

In 1903 I had 5,861 BUSINESS PARTNERS—Firms to whom I sold tea. I expect to have a good many more in 1904.

It has taken good teas and I suppose fairly good business management to accomplish this result—a result of which I am very proud

If you are not already a business partner of mine, I would much like to have the opportunity of corresponding with you.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea." Good for everyone who handles or uses it.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY.

PROOF of the interest taken in the agitation for more adequate salaries for the judges of the Supreme Court has been furnished The Grocer in a remarkable manner since the publication of the article on the subject in last week's issue.

Several letters have been received on the subject from men well qualified to speak on it and whose views are well worthy of attention. These will be given in due time. It is manifest that Canadian business men realize that this subject is not one of moment merely to the legal fraternity. It is one that is intimately connected with so many transactions which affect industrial and commercial conditions in such a material degree that all business men whose operations or interests are of any considerable magnitude are keenly sensible of its importance and timeliness.

There is general recognition that it is of the utmost moment to the average litigant who cannot afford to pay the excessive fees which wealthy corporations are called upon to pay, that the ultimate court where the law is settled for all Canada, and the court which all the provincial courts must look to for their guidance, should be composed only of members whose judicial strength is such that no matter who the member of the bar may be who appears before them the court is not overawed by his presence and does not feel that the bar is superior in knowledge to the bench, the result being that the poorest litigant represented by counsel, who perhaps is appearing for the first time, is sure that whether his counsel takes all the points in his favor or not, the bench will be astute enough to appreciate every consideration and not be misled by the sophistry of the abler counsel.

This matter has been before the Dominion Parliament several times but in each case decision regarding the matter has been deferred. The interests of the business community, apart altogether from the injustice to the judges at present in office, demand attention to this matter. It is, moreover, imperative that attention to it be given at this session. Vacancies may occur at any time and the salary attached to the office should be at once raised to a level that would attract the most brilliant members of the bar. It should ever be the ambition, the great desire, of each member of the bar throughout Canada to attain, as a crowning end to his career, to a seat upon the Supreme Court bench.

The matter is of such magniture that to refer to the financial aspect of it seems trivial. If the salaries of the Supreme Court judges were placed at a minimum of $12,000 per year for the puisne judges and $12,500 for the chief justice, it would only mean an increase of $30,000 a year, which is a mere bagatelle as compared with the importance to the country of having a court the decisions of which would command respect and confidence throughout the whole Dominion.

When one considers that the Government reports issued a few days ago showed a revenue of over $52,000,000 and a surplus over all charges of over $12,000,000 in the first nine months of the fiscal year, the expenditure of $30,000 to ensure the maintenance of the highest possible standard of judicial strength in the Supreme Court of Canada is seen to be such a small consideration that the expense entailed will hardly be put up as an objection to the proposal by even the least reasonable of its opponents.

Nor should it be necessary to consider the other objection which has been raised in the past, the necessity entailed of re-arranging the salaries of the judges in the other courts. The Supreme Court is essentially in a class by itself. It is not in a position similar to any provincial court since it is laying foundations for law throughout the whole of Canada, and since, as the country is growing by leaps and bounds at the present time this work is likely to be of the greatest importance within the next few years.

WILL TRADING STAMPS GO?

IT is with great expectancy that the Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal are waiting for the coming May Day, that being the time appointed for the law to take its course in regard to trading stamps.

It is recognized that the manufacture of anything in the form of money without special license and Government authorization is against the law. Trading stamps have been pronounced by one of the best legal authorities in the Dominion to be illegal because they come under the category of selling money. Very few of the grocers who handle the stamps ever stop to think who is producing them and why. That is the vital question. What living merchant in the world can give a bed, a Morris chair or a baby carriage for the face value of a lot of green or red stamps that have been given out with groceries? Who naturally is paying for these things? Simply the retail grocer and his customers.

In Montreal the stamps have been given a certain status by the fact that a time proven establishment has championed them, used them and is going to fight the law regarding them.

There is another point worthy of attention. This money that goes to the trading stamp man is being diverted out of the regular channels of the grocery business. One grocer uses the stamps because his neighbor does and so on. The grocers themselves in and out of the association can stop the trouble if they want to, simply by refusing to use them.

POTATOES AND EGGS SCARCE.

THE Toronto market witnessed a slump in potatoes some three weeks ago, following upon which American buyers entered the market and bought wherever they could lay their hands on available stocks. Several cars intended for Southwestern Ontario were taken up by Detroit buyers, notwithstanding the duty of 25c. per bushel. The result is a comparative scarcity in the local market this week, aggravated by the fact that Ontario farmers have begun seeding operations, and cannot afford the time to bring potatoes to market. One dealer tried half a dozen potato-growers who are in the habit of supplying him with large lots, but was unsuccessful in procuring a potato. It is said that only mixed stock is available in Ontario and a report from Quebec states that potatoes are already in small compass in that province.

So far Toronto dealers have not been seriously inconvenienced as they were fortunate enough to put in plentiful stocks at the time of the slump, and they expect to be able to supply all demands in spite of the fact that stocks in outlying districts are difficult to obtain and reported to be frost-bitten.

The egg market in Toronto begins to show signs of bullish operations. Whether owing to the lateness of the Spring season or to an exhibition of stubbornness on the part of the kindly hen, certain dealers say there is going to be a scarcity of eggs, and are backing up their statement by sending agents through the country to buy eggs at a higher price than is ruling in the market at present. One provision dealer goes so far as to say there will be no eggs for exportation this year.

JAPAN TEA MARKET OPENED.

THE GROCER is in receipt of a message from C. M. Bernard, of Chicago, to the effect that the new Japan tea market has opened about ten per cent. lower than last year.

This news has been awaited with interest by Canadian tea brokers and the trade generally, who have been in the dark as to the prospects for Japan tea. It has been known for some time that stocks of Japans were getting gradually into very small compass, and notwithstanding the fact that Canada's consumption of Japan tea is not as yet an overwhelmingly large item, it has been apprehended that the war in the East, if prolonged, might have the effect of materially reducing the world's supply of Japan teas, which would ultimately mean firmer prices for Indians and Ceylons since they would have to take the place of Japans to a large extent.

Among the reasons responsible for the lowering of the Japan market, is the fact that the early crop is much larger this year than last, more having been planted. Another reason is because Japans had a very large run in the United States last year; people bought recklessly and had to unload at a loss. It goes without saying that they will not allow themselves to be caught needlessly again.

It is not thought that lower prices for the early Japan crop will affect prices in Canada since we use very little of the early Japan tea. In Canada the trade thinks twice before buying early Japan at 30 or 35c, when another article which answers the purpose equally as well is to be had for almost half that price. The later Summer market is where Canada is concerned, and it is much too early to prophesy about it with any degree of certainty.

LET US HAVE BETTER FISH.

THE bargain just consummated between the Government of Newfoundland and the Newfoundland Cold Storage Company, particulars of which are given elsewhere in this issue, means more for the fish trade of the island colony and the Maritime Provinces than perhaps appears on the surface.

For years The Canadian Grocer has pointed out the splendid market afforded by the inland provinces of Canada for the products of our eastern coast fisheries. The chief difficulties in the way of building up a trade in fish of very great importance have been first the lack of proper cold storage and transportation facilities for placing the fish on the inland market in first-class condition, and second the crude and unattractive condition in which fish have been heretofore offered to the public.

The new company, it is understood, comprises a number of Canadians, and it is their intention to exploit the fisheries not of Newfoundland waters alone but also of our Maritime Provinces. Cold storage warehouses will be built and arrangements made with the transportation companies to supply the markets of the United States and inland Canada with fish in first-class condition.

This is what has long been needed. True, the consumption of fish, which is a wholesome and desirable food, has increased in Ontario and Quebec, but not to the extent that might have been expected, nor to which it will doubtless yet attain. The market needs to be further developed. It is capable of absorbing a large quantity of fish if properly managed.

It rests with the producers first to deliver their fish at western centres in first-class condition; after that the dealer must be prepared to offer them to his customers in an attractive shape. The cleaning and preparing of fish is distasteful to many people; in the United States dealers generally have overcome this obstacle by cleaning and preparing the fish themselves. A housewife receives her fish order cleaned, boned, and ready for cooking.

Similar attention to the demands of customers will build up an equally important fish trade in Canada, and give the people a chance to enjoy the luxury of first-class fresh fish at prices satisfactory to all. Acting upon a suggestion which appeared some time ago in The Grocer several Canadian firms have already undertaken to clean and prepare fish for the immediate use of their customers, and the results to their trade have proved most gratifying.

TORONTO GROCERS VISIT CHRISTIE, BROWN & CO.

ON April 27 members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association to the number of 75 or upwards, assembled at the invitation of the Christie-Brown Company to be shown through their large biscuit factory. This is the second visit to be paid to leading city industries by the Toronto association, and marks the beginning of a new era in the guild of grocers.

The tour through what is acknowledged to be the largest biscuit factory in Canada was personally conducted by Mr. Christie, the president of the company, and Mr. Edmonds, the secretary-treasurer, to whose neverfailing courtesy and overcareful attention on the part of everyone present the success of the afternoon was largely due.

It was nothing short of a revelation to every member of the association to see 500 men, women, boys and girls at work with as much precision as a body of regular soldiers. The writer was impressed with a sense of the magnitude of the industry by observing that the stairs used by the employes were worn down in the centre. He was told that stairs have to be built once a year.

The factory itself is a neverending source of interest. No less than 480 different kinds of cakes and biscuits are manufactured; one cannot appreciate the full significance of this fact, however, until he sees the almost endless variety of ovens and processes of manufacture in actual operation. One new oven which is the curiosity and delight of all who saw it, is in the shape of an immense cylinder with a revolving paddle-wheel fitted with swinging shelves on which are placed pans of biscuit-dough already cut. From the time a pan is placed on the shelf until the wheel makes a complete revolution an dthe pan of dough comes back thoroughly baked is about eight minutes. This particular oven is said to be the largest in Canada, and has a capacity for 20 barrels a day more than an ordinary oven. Equally wonderful are the other ovens and machinery in operation in the factory. The rolled dough is started in at one end of a machine; then it is spread with fruit, cut, stamped and sent by carriers right into the oven whence it comes some ten minutes later in the form of fruit biscuits. By a most ingenious process of carrying machinery the cakes and biscuits from the ovens are carried and distributed to the various sorting and packing departments. Another interesting process is the manufacture of marshmallows. A single machine which is self-regulating drops paste and fruit in exactly the required proportion on the cake. A similar machine spreads icing on the cakes, as they pass along on carriers and are topped by girls standing on either side.

One might ramble on and on before he would have finished discribing all the interesting things the grocers saw, suffice it to say that they were afforded a delightful surprise as well as a means of acquiring valuable information, and will never regret having availed themselves of the special privilege of being shown through a large up-to-date biscuit industry.

Incidental.

President Johnson, tipping the scales at 275—"Why, I only weigh 240."

"But look at the biscuits you have eaten," said one of his fellow tradesmen.

Christie, Brown & Co.'s Factory.

Mr. Edmonds—"Well, Will, shall we go down and inspect the place where they fire up?"

Will—"No thanks; that'll come soon enough."

BUSINESS IN CAPE BRETON.

IN the Port Hood, C.B., Siftings of recent date the business outlook in that section of Canada was sized up thus:

After a comparatively severe Winter, an early Spring would be a welcome visitor. As this is a matter which rests with Providence people must submit and take these dispensations as they come.

No one that we are aware of suffered for the necessities of life; we are cognizant of the fact, however, that the steady Winter weather has caused a scarcity of cattle feed in many sections of the country. Owing to the heavy snowstorms lumbermen were prevented from prosecuting their industry as vigorously as during the preceding three years. Railway transportation facilities were also hampered, causing a general stagnation in the coal trade so far as the County of Inverness is concerned. A dulness in trade of every description has been the inevitable consequence.

Almost every person one meets asks "What kind of Summer are we going to have?" Without taking a gloomy aspect of the future, we are inclined to put a conservative estimate on the success of the different undertakings for the remainder of the year. There will of course be considerable activity at the mining centres; but there is nothing in sight to warrant the belief that there will be a boom. If the prosperity which has been enjoyed for some years can be maintained at its normal condition, people will have reason to be thankful. The indications, however, point rather to a shrinkage than an overplus. Whether due to the war in the East or "a corner in wheat" breadstuff has advanced about 25 per cent. which will increase the cost of living without any corresponding increase in wages or better prices for commodities which farmers may wish to dispose of for cash or in exchange for manufactured goods.

As "after a storm there is always a calm," so it is that after a boom there is always a reaction. While there is nothing discouraging in sight we think it is better to realize that there is more or less stringency in every industry, and the only way of successfully combatink these conditions is by exercising the strictest economy. "Earn more and spend less" should be the motto.

A VISITOR FROM OTTAWA.

Mr. A. McNeill, senior inspector of the Fruit Division, Ottawa, called at the Toronto offices of The Grocer this week. Mr. McNeill was on his way to Orillia and vicinity, where he expects to hold a series of fruit meetings.

A CORRECTION.

ON page 29 of the last issue of The Canadian Grocer, it was stated that the paper supply houses of Toronto were completely wiped out in the fire of April 19. This statement was hardly correct One firm, at least, Douglas & Ratcliff, Limited, were uninjured and both their warehouses, at 30 West Market street and 7 Scott street, can be utilized to supply the needs of those requiring all kinds of paper

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Groceries.

Toronto, April 28, 1904.

TRADE in groceries has only been fair for the week under review, with collections dull in the country and slow if anything in town. The dulness is to be attributed largely to the bad condition of the country roads, but it is confidently expected that as soon as there is an improvement in this respect, business will brighten accordingly. The sugar market is much stronger than it was last week, and prices have advanced 5c all round. Canned goods continue to be in brisk demand at firm prices, an advance being recorded in sockeye salmon. Trade in syrup and molasses has been unsatisfactory, with prospects for firmer prices. The tea market is showing increased signs of activity. Prices rule firm and there has been an increased demand for low-priced Indians and Ceylons. Advices from Yokohama state that the Japan market has opened 10 per cent. lower than last year. Coffees continue firm with a fair market and very little doing in Rios. Rice and tapioca and spices are without special feature. Sultana raisins are firmer in price, also currants. Only a fair trade is doing in foreign dried fruits as usual at this season.

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goods are very active this week at firm prices, the demand for corn and peas being particularly active. Stocks in these lines are already beginning to run low, and it is not improbable that they will be exhausted before the season is over. On account of the lateness of the new season all stocks are likely to become depleted. Sock-eye salmon is scarce and advancing in price. Horseshoe salmon is out of the market. Our quotations are :

SUGAR

The weakness reported in last advice has at last spent itself and we are now able to report a return to healthier conditions with large sales of raws at prices establishing 1-16 to 1-8 advance. It is reported that on Friday, 22nd inst., the American Sugar Refining Company purchased quietly 40,000 bags of Cubans for May shipment at 2 5-16c c. and f. for basis 96. It was understood that they were willing buyers of further quantities on the same prices, but that sellers were disposed to hold on although on Monday, 25th inst., refiners secured a further lot of 15,000 bags at 2 5-16. Later in the day they advanced their bid to 2 3-8 and secured 180,000 bags for April-May shipment. This is equivalent to $3.73 duty paid, or fully 1-16 above former highest quotations, and establishes an entirely new level of values. Indications are favorable to the maintenance of present basis and it may be that in order to secure further supplies in view of prospective heavy meltings, refiners will advance ideas further. The prime reason for the change in buyers' ideas is evidently the unfavorable weather reports emanating from Cuba, indications being that much of the cane still standing in the fields will not be cut for this campaign, and that it may be necessary to reduce estimates of the final outrun from 100,000 to 200,000 tons.

We hear of the sale of 14,000 bags San Domingo sugar about due to arrive at 2c, c. and f., which is equivalent to $3.68 duty paid, and establishes an advance of 3-32 on nearby sugars. The Cuban campaign is rapidly drawing to a close, and at latest advices there were only 59 central factories grinding, as compared with a maximum of 171 during the height of the season. At the same time last year there were 162 factories working.

Stocks at Cuban shipping ports are 94,000 tons less than at the same time last year, and it appears that planters have already sold 700,000 tons of the season's crop, from which it may be inferred that from now on they will be in a position to take full advantage of the situation, as with moderate supplies coming forward they will be able to retain holdings for better prices.

Combined stocks in United States and Cuba are 416,678 tons, a decrease of 146,342 tons from last year. Receipts at United States Atlantic ports for the week ending April 20, were 49,030 tons of which the bulk was to refiners, meltings remaining unchanged at 39,000 tons.

Total stocks in all hands are 160,678 tons. It is interesting to note that total stocks and receipts from January 1 to April 20 were only 29,600 tons more than for the corresponding period of 1903, while refiners' meltings for the same period show an increase of 90,000 tons.

Europe has fluctuated within a narrow margin during the week and we have to record a further advance in 88 per cent. of 3-4d per cwt, the price now being 8s 8 1-4d basis, f.o.b. Hamburg, for April-May shipment, which is equivalent to New York parity of $3.84 for 96 test centrifugals.

Although there are no changes to record in American refined sugar quotations, the tone of the market has greatly improved in sympathy with raws and we are advised that Arbuckle has at last discontinued all shadings and now quotes same net price as other refiners.

The bill of the Provincial Premier to aid the beet sugar industry in Ontario has received its third reading in the Ontario House. The bill provides for an extension of the bounty to a period of five years from the inception of the industry, the grant being $75,000 per year or an additional payment from the treasury of $150,000 to aid the industry.

We have to record an advance of 5c in domestic quotations, which went into effect on the morning of 27th inst. The outlook is much more hopeful than for some time past and the immediate indications point to steadiness. We revise quotations below as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup and molasses trade may be characterized as unsatisfactory, with prices still holding firm and prospects pointing to a further rise. New Orleans molasses is still advancing, although the price reached is not yet prohibitive. The quantity of New Orleans stocks on the market is comparatively small. Stocks of Barbadoes arriving are fine quality and will undoubtedly find a ready and permanent market in this country. Porto Rico and West Indian are also meeting with fair sales. TEAS.

The tea market is active this week with prices ruling firm and steady. The demand for low-priced Ceylons and Indians has been particularly good. Japans are becoming more scarce and as yet nothing has been heard of the new Japan market. The quality of Ceylon tea on the London, Eng., market is very much improved, which fact has stimulated buying on this side of the water. Heretofore considerable difficulty had been experienced in obtaining good flavory teas.

The slight decline noticeable in Indian teas previous to the holidays in the London market has recovered. There is a smaller selection of high-grade tea, and where the quality both in appearance and cup was not fully maintained, quotations eased accordingly. The statistical position has developed considerable strength with stocks of all tea standing on March 31 at 2¼ and 10¾ million lbs. less than at a similar date the two previous years, respectively. It is noted that in spite of the large increase in imports the stock is only some 1¼ millions over that of last year, and the excess has already been practically absorbed.

In Ceylons competition has been active and the general tendency in favor of sellers, the more attractive quality of many of the recent arrivals often accounting for an appreciable advance in quotations for higher grades. Medium Pekoes were in special request for both home and export, while common kinds were steady and very little Pekoe Souchong was obtained under 6¼d. per lb. The demand for Java was strong at hardening values. Cables from Yokohama state that the Japan market has opened about ten per cent. lower than last year. We quote the following prices :

COFFEES.

The condition of the coffee market continues unchanged. Prices remain firm and very little trade is doing in Rios. Latest European cables state that the coffee markets are flat. This, together with the fact that the Brazil crop movement has been running fairly full, has tended to make the market sag. Locally the movement on milder coffees is free at firm prices. Foreign Dried Fruits.

There is a fair movement of dried fruit this week at quotation prices. The demand for prunes continues fair. It is believed the increased demand this season is due to the comparatively high prices ruling in apricots. Currants are firmer and Sultana raisins higher in price. It is the general opinion that the crop of Sultana raisins will be smaller than it was last year and some growers in Smyrna go so far as to say the vines will not yield more than half of last year's crop. EGGS.

Supplies of eggs are not coming as brisk as last week, and in some quarters the market is bullish, the fear having been expressed that there is likely to be a scarcity of eggs. One dealer gives quotations at 13 to 13½c. Another says 14c is the lowest price at the present time. The demand for eggs is brisk. We quote the following prices :

pineapples and bananas the feature of the market. Bananas are firm in price for this season of the year and pines are 50c easier than last week. The range of prices in lemons, 300's, is wider than last week's, best qualities selling at prices firmer by 25c. Valencia oranges are slightly firmer in price. California navels are firm and steady. Grape fruit is practically out of the market, although a few fancies are selling at high prices. Apples are a little firmer. Greenhouse tomatoes are off the market. Limes have advanced 20c. Mississippi and North Carolina strawberries have practically taken the place of Florida and Louisiana fruit, and are in good demand at quotation prices. Only a few bitter oranges remain on the market. Florida tomatoes are 25 to 50c easier and selling freely. We quote the following prices :

Vegetables.

There is a brisk demand for vegetables of all kinds and a corresponding scarcity, particularly of potatoes and home-grown green stuff, the former of which has advanced in price. Potatoes are likely to advance further within the next few days. Valencia onions are nearly out of the market and have been largely replaced by stocks of Egyptians which are preferable at this time of year on account of their superior keeping qualities and comparative freedom from waste. Bermuda onions are quoted for the first time this season. New cabbage and green beans are seen on the market this week. Canadian celery is practically out of the market and final shipments of California celery have already arrived. Green onions are easier in price, outdoor stuff having begun to arrive. Green cucumbers are easier in price. Our quotations are as follows :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Groceries.

Montreal, April 28, 1904.

THE dulness of the local market was given a slight stir on Tuesday morning by sugar taking a jump up of five cents ruling in Ontario and Quebec and ten cents for the Maritime Provinces. Generally trade is quiet and collections from the country are reported poor. Spices are ruling strong and with good demand. The five per cent. advance which came into force on the 25th inst. for canned fruits has been noticed in the trade, but no marked demand has been observed. The provision market is strong. In dried fruits considerable interest is taken in Sultana raisins and certainly they are firmly held. Advices, direct from the country of production, show that the crop will be smaller even than was anticipated. Tea is just about the same, but there is quite a cleaning out of old stocks. The new pack is anxiously watched for, especially in the Japanese trade. Coffee has not even fluctuated but some indications point to an advance. Green fruits are active and vegetables are firm. Celery, for instance, rose another dollar and was selling at $7.50. All kinds of Canadian apples are firm with good demand. In evaporated apples there is a stringency and they are quoted f.o.b. at 6 1-4 to 6 1-2 cents. Business men are optimistic and a good feeling is current.

SUGAR.

The stiffening of raw sugars and the brisk demand has sent granulateds up five cents in Ontario and Quebec and a rise of ten cents has been reported for the Maritime Provinces. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The decline in molasses has been maintained although reports from the Indies point to a slight advance of a quarter of a cent. This cannot be maintained long for all things point to a falling off in price even more than it has. The report that Barbadoes molasses have been offered here at 22 to 22 1-2c seems to have ben a premature one, as latest indications from the islands would show that nothing could be laid down here under 24 1-2 to 25c and these figures are really what seem to be the offerings of brokers and import agents. We quote:

TEA.

The tea market is quiet. Movements from first hands seem small. Ceylons and Indias are in good demand. English buyers of Indian teas show very little keenness. The ordinary and medium grades have shown slight improvements at times on ruling prices. Common fannings have been neglected. Medium teas are steady and a general improvement in the market is likely. Japans are firm. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

The five per cent. advance in canned fruits has had its effect already and has made the demand limited. The market is steady and salmon is holding its strong position with every likelihood of lasting. A well-known cannery man insisted upon the correctness of the report from Niagara and Erie, re the prospects of a poor fruit crop. He said that those who thought it was a business dodge would be sorry if they did not take precautionary measures. Fruit of all kinds, he claims, will be a short crop. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre in their report state: Currants—Conditions in Patras have for some time been favorable to an advance, and in Greek currency prices have been actually higher, notwithstanding lack of demand from consuming countries. So far, however, fluctuations in exchange have offset these gains, until now buying has set in, with a result of an advance in sterling quotations. Raisins—There appears to be sufficient stock in the country, both of Muscatels and Valencias, to prohibit any interest for import, although jobbers report fair buying consumption is evident. In Sultana raisins considerably better business is doing and this fruit is very firmly held. The stimulus has come from unfavorable weather reports from Smyrna, where it is the general opinion that even if everything goes well henceforward, that the crop will be smaller than that of last year. From this non-committal view of the position there is a range of opinion up to that held by some growers, who say that the vines will not yield more than half of last year's quantity. Figs—The market is entirely in favor of buyers, notwithstanding that spot stocks, with the exception possibly of layer figs, are considerably less than those of last year at this time. What demand does obtain is from manufacturers. Walnuts—Little interest is being shown in nuts in shell and not much more in "Cerneaux." Efforts made earlier in the season to corner the market have only been maintained spasmodically and may now be looked upon as abandoned. The serious drop in the market, of recent weeks, is attributable to this. A favorable point as to prices and weather conditions has now been reached for acquiring cold storage stock to cover October and November requirements. Valcenia Almonds—Stocks in Malaga are practically lacking, but up-country dealers still have supplies which they are holding back, in expectation of higher prices, based on the calculation that the crop of 1904 will be 20 to 25 per cent. less than last year, owing to a great deal of unusual cold and wet weather experienced throughout the vicinity of Malaga in March. Filberts—Messrs. Ferd. Baller & Co. advise: Reports from the growing districts of Sicily state that on April 1, severe hailstorms occurred in those sections of our island, and as the young fruit is just now forming, fears are expressed that the new crop, already expected to turn out small, has been seriously damaged. Under this impression, sellers both of old crop, prompt, and new crop, October, have completely withdrawn from the market, but buyers are not pressing forward, and prefer to await further developments.

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The market remains strong in tone and interesting. The arrivals have not been quite so large this week; 846 cases arrived in the city on Saturday. On Monday 753 cases came in. There is a splendid demand but prices still hold at 14 1-2 to 15 cents per dozen.

BEANS.

The market is dull. In a jobbing way sales of choice primes were made at $1.45 to $1.50, and primes at $1.40 per bushel, while car lots of choice primes were quoted at $1.40 and $1.35 a bushel.

HONEY.

Quetness rules over the honey market and the demand is very limited. White clover is still scarce at 13 1-2 and 14c. Extracted white clover was quoted at 8 1-2 to 9c in 10-lb tins, and 7 to 7 1-2c in 300-lb kegs. Buckwheat still remains 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

Potatoes are very strong just now and with a brisk demand are selling at firm prices of 80 to 85c per bag ex-track.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., April 21.

EXTREME activity in salmon canning operations is likely to mark the present season. The canners have already offered the fishermen of the Fraser River 20 cents per fish during the coming sockeye season, which begins on or about July 1st, or whenever the sockeyes begin to run in the gulf. This price is considered liberal under present conditions. It is the highest paid for some years, and is the rate which the canners offered the fishermen in 1900 in the season when the fishermen struck and later accepted 19 cents per fish.

As the likelihood is that there will be a state of war in the Far East for many months yet, and as the Japanese Government is altogether likely to buy up all the canned salmon they can get hold of, the canners here are laying plants to put up all sorts of salmon this year. The humpback or dog salmon is not generally bothered with in ordinary trade, but a few canners have been putting up a small pack. They have disposed of all of it, and all do-overs and other heldover stock has been sold for the Japanese commissariat, so that the market here is bare of canned salmon. The possibilities are very great of a large demand from Japan and the intention of the trade here is to take hold of the openings.

It is to be noted that the Chinese cannery operatives who usually take under contract the work of handling the fish through all the processes from cutting up to packing into the tins and soldering, are this year advancing the rates they demand. Formerly they were paid 48 cents per case for this work. Now they ask 50 cents. In addition, the Chinese contractors who have been losing money in the last few seasons by reason of the light pack, demand that they shall be guaranteed the pay for at least 75 per cent. of the fish they contract to put up, whether the fish are forthcoming or not. The reason for this is that they have been under big expense getting their crews of men together and have paid them various sums, in many cases more than they realized from the work of the individuals receiving the advances. The matter has not yet reached a settlement. The Chinese are naturally independent, for by reason of the high head tax amounting to practical exclusion, the number of the Orientals available is limited, and they have formed a close union, embracing the control of practically all the Chinese cannery operatives, who are all skilled men.

The Japanese market is to be exploited by a new firm which is being organized by Mr. R. W. Clark, a Victoria commission merchant, and Mr. A. R. Tufts, a well known tea man, who has spent the past year in the Orient. Mr. Tufts says that a company will be organized to handle general mercantile lines, especially of Canadian manufactured goods and other Canadian products for sale in Japan and China. As the trade becomes established it is likely subsidiary companies will have to be formed to take over individual lines, as fast as they become important enough to demand it.

Some material reductions in freight rates are offered by the White Pass Co. this year. These reductions are available from July 1 to August 15th and are made especially to stimulate the movement of goods in the early season so that there will be no congestion. The rates quoted as special commodity rates for that time are: Oats and feed, $2.37 instead of $2.56 per cwt.; hay, $2.62 1-2; coal oil, $2.37 1-2; candles, $2.75; nails, bolts, etc., $2.37 1-2; sugar, $2.60; canned cream and milk, $2.60. These prices are per cwt. in car lots, except hay, which is in seven car lots.

Groceries—Staples are firm and stocks have not changed much, as receipts and shipments have been at the very lowest owing to the blockade. Edwardsburg starch is up a 1-4c in some grades, notably No. 1 white or blue, and Canada laundry, also in culinary. Canada pure corn starch is up 1-4c, according to latest quotations received by the trade. Importations of rice by the steamer Empress of China which arrived on Tuesday were heavier than expected, there being over 14,000 packages, about half of it being mats of China rice, the remainder being sacks of Japanese rice. Tea was very lightly represented, there being barely 2,200 packages, much of which was China tea. The heavy shipments of new season's Indian tea have not come forward yet. One hundred cases of refined camphor and 20 cases sublimed camphor were items of the cargo of the Empress, indicating that the fear of prohibition by the Japanese Government of exports from Formosa have not any foundation.

Produce—Non-arrival of shipments of butter from the east and continued small receipts of local, keep the market bare. The lot of 300 boxes of Australian received by the Aorangi was soon absorbed. Small consignments from Washington are received by some dealers. It is expected local supply will come forward more freely soon. The egg market is still bare and prices fancy.

Fruit—Australian grapes, a variety much like the Malaga, a green grape, and packed in familiar cork sawdust to heighten the illusion, appeared on the market this week as a new importation from the Antipodes. They come in oblong boxes about the size of 20-lb crates for tomatoes. The fruit was in good shape and is very fine quality. The price is high, $4.50 per crate. Oranges are still plentiful and cheap, apples scarcer and nearly done. Prices are about 25c higher for choice apples. Bananas are coming in freely, in car lots, but the price is not any lower.

Vegetables—Potatoes are stiffening in price. Victoria quotes retail at $1.50 per sack, and wholesale at over $25 per ton, while Vancouver quotation is still at $24 per ton for Ashcrofts but firm at that figure. Other varieties are still lower, but may advance at any time. California new potatoes are too high to buy yet. Australian onions which arrived so freely by the Aorangi are a little easier, possibly 1-2c lower per lb at 3 1-2 to 4c. In fresh vegetables cucumbers are scarce and dear. Asparagus is also scarce and quoted a little higher. Rhubarb is beginning to come in from local sources, and also radishes and green onions, as well as spinach and other

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, April 25th, 1904.

TRADE is still somewhat backward in the Maritime Provinces, a circumstance largely due to the late season. The eastern harbors are filled with ice at the present writing, but probably a few days now will witness a change in this respect. Fishing has improved and the outlook is bright for those portions of the province which depend upon this important industry. Travelling is now quite bad and commercial men have difficulty in reaching country stores. Collections appear to have improved somewhat in the last few days.

The molasses war has assumed a new phase. The chief Halifax importing interest has cut the price of new crop Porto Rico four and a half cents a gallon since last report. Early is the season a firm of St. John importers cut the price from 42 to 37 cents and contracted for a large quantity of the present season's crop. The Halifax interest has now retaliated by a further drop to 33 cents. What the end will be it is difficult to say, but this unbusiness like procedure has greatly unsettled the market and has brought considerable loss and annoyance to all branches of the trade. The decline is not at all warranted by the cost of molasses at the islands of production and is due entirely to ill-feeling between the two chief importing interests.

Flour is easier but quotations have not dropped more than ten cents from the top notch of last month. Oats are weaker by about two cents a bushel. Holders of Prince Edward Island oats, who two weeks ago were indifferent sellers at 48 cents, are now running after buyers and offering for considerably less money. Middlings and bran are easier and so is domestic pork and lard. Potatoes are easier owing to a slump in the Boston market, to which large quantities are being forwarded.

Dairy produce is dull and the outlook unsatisfactory. Cheese factories have started up but are making the mistake of asking too high a price for their product, with the result that dealers are supplying their wants with western goods. Consequently the local factories, unless they drop their prices, will have a lot of early cheese on hand to influence the market later on. The first shipment of dairy tub butter from Ontario was received by dealers here today. Eggs are still holding firm at 18 cents.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, April 29, 1904.

FOR the past week business has been a little quiet, owing to the fact that the farmers throughout Manitoba and the Northwest Territories have been practically stalled up, owing to the numerous bodies of water that cover the prairies for miles, making it quite impossible for them to reach the nearby towns.

Sugars—The market remains firm with no change in price recorded since the 14th of March. Montreal granulated is quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows at $4.25.

Canned Vegetables—The market is firm with the exception of corn, which is high and is quoted at $2.50 to $2.65 a case, and is likely to advance to $2.75.

Eggs—The market is a little easier and the demand is strong. Fresh gathered are jobbing at 14c.

Butter—There is a heavy demand for choice butter and the market quotes fresh pound prints at 22c and rolls and tub butter from 18 to 20c.

Canned Fruits—The market quotes canned fruits, all around, much higher, they having advanced on the 25th inst. 5 to 10 per cent.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are firm with the exception of evaporated apples, which the market quotes at 7 1-2c a pound, and currants, which are much higher and have advanced 6 to 9 shillings per hundredweight. Oregon prunes are cheap in the large sizes, 70 to 80 at 5 1-4c; 60 to 70 at 6c; 50 to 60 at 6 1-4c; 40 to 50 at 6 3-4c.

Corn Meal—The market quotes corn meal as having advanced 90c per half sack, and $1.75 per sack.

Flour—The market remains strong and practically unchanged. No. 1 patent is still quoted at $2.75.

Cured Meats—The market is firm. Hams are quoted at 13 3-4c; picnic hams at 13 1-4c; shoulders, 8 3-4c; breakfast backs, 11 1-2c; long spice rolls, 11 1-4c; short rolls, 10 3-4c; long dry clear, 9c; and dry salt backs, 10c.

Lard—The market remains firm with pure lard in 50-lb tubs quoted at $5.20; 20-lb pails, $2.15; 10-lb pails in cases, $6.50; 5-lb pails, $6.60, and 3-lb pails, $6.65; compound lard in 20-lb pails, $1.75.

A HUSTLING CONCERN.

MUCH favorable comment has been caused by the enterprise and pluck shown by many of the Toronto firms, whose places of business were destroyed in the terrible conflagration of April 19th. In no single instance was this more marked than in the case of E. W. Gillett Company, manufacturers of Royal yeast, Gillett's lye, Magic baking powder, etc., whose large factory and fine offices, together with contents, office furniture, machinery and stock, were totally consumed. In less than an hour after the walls had fallen in, Mr. Dobie, general manager of the company, had telegraphed for the necessary materials to permit manufacturing operations to be started with as little delay as possible. By noon of the following day, offices had been secured at 15 Wellington street east and completely furnished, and next morning at nine o'clock, the office staff were all at work. Factory premises had also been secured and a small army of men were busy at work installing the duplicate set of machinery, which the company had in reserve in another part of the city. This was complete with the exception of one machine, which was brought from Chicago by express, and is undoubtedly the heaviest express parcel that ever arrived in Toronto, as it weighed over four tons. A full carload of supplies and material arrived in the same way.

By the untiring energy and enterprise displayed by the management and large staff of employes, the company have been enabled to commence filling orders within six days after their old premises were destroyed. This is a record that any company might well be proud of, and will be a source of great satisfaction to stockholders of the company and a relief to the thousands of grocers in all parts of the Dominion handling the various articles manufactured by the Gillett Company, many of whom evinced their interest by letter and telegraph enquiries as to when they might expect further supplies. Factories will be run day and night and every effort made to fill all orders as promptly as possible. The company will at once proceed to erect an extensive, up-to-date factory, which will enable them to keep pace with the ever increasing demand for their goods.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. D. L. Lockerby, of Lockerby Bros., Montreal, who has been laid up for some weeks with a severe attack of lagrippe, is able to be about and at business again.

Mr. J. Craven, who represents Chase & Sanborn in the Maritime Provinces, has been spending a few days in Montreal. He leaves for his territory again at the end of the week.

Mr. G. Hately, Brantford, secretary of the Western Dairymen's Association, has resigned. He will be succeeded by Mr. G. H. Barr, director of the Western Dairy School at Strathroy.

Mr. F. W. Thompson, managing director of the Ogilvie Flour Milling Co., has just returned from a three months' trip to Europe where he was not only pleasure seeking but quietly observing trade conditions which interest exporters at all times.

Mr. Richard Nash has joined the staff of Messrs. Lockerby Bros., Montreal, and will represent them in that city. Mr. Nash who is an experienced London tea man will make a specialty of teas and coffees, lines which Lockerby Bros. have always made interesting leaders.

GROCERS!

With your kind assistance we will be able to keep the consumer supplied with

ROYAL YEAST,
GILLETT'S LYE,
MAGIC BAKING POWDER.

This can be done by handling stocks of these goods with utmost care and making them go as far as possible.

OLD BUILDING WAS NOT SUITABLE.

Our former factory at 32 and 34 Front Street West was not suitable or large enough for the enormous business that was being done. Intention was to begin building operations in the Spring of 1905. Now this will be done much sooner, and later this Company will have one of the finest modern factories on the continent.

ROYAL YEAST

is now being shipped from one of our factories (we have two). To do this it was necessary to bring in a carload of Yeast Cakes from the U. S. by express and pay the duty (6c. per pound). We will lose an enormous sum of money, but that does not amount to anything under the circumstances, as the people need the goods. The carload by express will be followed by 10 Carloads of Yeast Cakes by freight. This will keep us going until goods which are being made in our two temporary factories are ready to ship.

DUPLICATE SET OF MACHINERY.

The fact of our having a duplicate set of machinery for just such an emergency is the reason that goods made in Toronto can be ready so soon.

A YEAR TO BUILD.

Had we not taken the precaution of having a duplicate set of machinery, goods could not have been turned out in less than a year from the time our factory was destroyed by fire. As it is, we are making shipments in one week.

SPECIAL MACHINERY.

All machinery used in the manufacture of Gillett's Goods is of a special character and has to be made to order, entirely from our own patterns.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER AND GILLETT'S PERFUMED LYE.

In a few days shipments of these goods will be made promptly as heretofore.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON US.

Gillett's goods will be made and sold in larger quantities than ever before.

E. W. GILLETT COMPANY LIMITED

TORONTO, ONT.

We take this means of thanking our friends who have wired and written their condolences, and to others in similar lines of business to ours who have kindly offered us the use of space in their factories and offices in which to carry on our work. Owing to the congested state of office work, it is impossible to thank each individually.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N.B., April 26.

ST. JOHN merchants extend sincere sympathy to the business men of Toronto, who suffered so severely in last week's fire. They know what the loss means, having passed through a trial, which for them, was quite as serious in its consequences as the Toronto fire.

The Grocer notes the retirement of Mr. G. Wetmore Merritt from the wholesale grocery business. Mr. Merritt has for many years been a prominent figure in the trade as one of the firm of Messrs. Turnbull & Co., and later of Messrs. Merritt Bros. & Co. Mr. Merritt has also served as president of the Board of Trade. He has now received the appointment of general agent for New Brunswick of the New York Life Insurance Co. The company are to be congratulated on the appointment. It is understood Mr. J. F. Merritt will continue the business.

In general lines of trade there is a fair movement but the season is backward.

The merchants of St. John are taking considerable interest in an advance made in fire insurance rates here. If they took more interest in the municipal elections those conditions which led to the advance might not have arisen. If they will neither be aldermen themselves nor see that right men are nominated nor even go to the polls themselves they cannot but expect misgovernment. The wonder is St. John has been so well governed, few cities having as good a record.

In markets, rice is still offered low. Ginger and nutmegs are cheap. Cream of tartar is firm at rather higher prices.

Oil.

Burning oil is a quiet line at this season but the dealers are busy attending to shipments of lubricating and paint oils. There is very keen competition in lubricating oils. Prices are firmly held. In linseeds the low prices are still quoted. Turpentine is high.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt there is a full stock here. Arrivals will be more regular this Summer than before, as the Manchester Line intend to run regular trips here during the Summer. Quite a shipment of Liverpool factory filled was received this week so that the market is now well supplied. In Canadian fine salt receipts are larger than for some time. This salt is used largely by our cheese and butter factories and this is the season of demand.

Canned Goods.

There is a firm feeling in all lines. While vegetables are a fair stock here. prices are firmly held at the advance, as the supply cannot be renewed. Fruits are quite scarce. Some futures are being offered such as peas and strawberries. These are outside the association. It is said more buyers will be in the guild than last season, but some large dealers are still outside. Oysters are rather higher and firm. Salmon is tending higher. Domestic fish are firm with light stocks held.

Green Fruits.

Bananas, which are the big Summer fruit, are keeping quite high this year. Apples are beginning to be out of season. Oranges are a large stock with prices low. There is now quite a variety. Californias are still low. Lemons are plentiful and cheap. Little is being done in small fruits. Strawberries, rhubarb and tomatoes are only seen in a retail way. Pineapples show light sales.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are having a fair sale. Apricots and peaches are in light demand.

SELL BROCK'S.

NICHOLSON & BROCK, - TORONTO

Currants are higher. In raisins the market is well supplied. Seeded have chief demand. Dates are low this year. In evaporated apples there is a fair business with prices higher. Onions are being freely received, Valencias, Egyptian and Bermudas are offered. Cocoanuts are scarce.

Sugar.

There continue to be quite large receipts of foreign sugars. Dealers have bought freely, expecting higher prices. Values are quite firm, but no changes have been reported.

Molasses.

The situation here cannot be called satisfactory. Quite a large stock is held but in few hands. At least this is true of Porto Rico molasses. In Barbadoes prices are low this season, and this grade is selling freely.

Fish.

This is still a line in which fuil prices rule. Fresh fish are scarce. A fair quantity of Gaspereaux are being caught. This is a very large business here. In dry cod and pollock high prices rule. The demand is not large. Pickled herring and smoked herring are in light supply. There is, however, no large sale at this season.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

Flour is easier. Manitoba grades are off twenty-five cents since last report. There is a good demand for feed. In oats and oatmeal firm prices are asked. At this season, there is a large sale for seed oats. Many use regular Ontario recleaned stock rather than special brands. Corn meal is selling freely. Beans are easy and dull. In seeds, prices this season are low, so there is no excuse to use poor seed. The season is backward and sales so far have been light.

GATES RICE COMBINE SEEMS ASSURED.

THE proposition of John W. Gates for the consolidation of the rice mills and canal companies of the Texas and Louisiana rice belt seems to have culminated in success at the third session of the rice men having in view the acceptance of Mr. Gates' offer to subscribe one-half of the stock of a rice company to be capitalized at $1,500,000, provided the rice men subscribe the remaining amount.

The authorized capital of the company, to be known as the National Rice Distributing Company, is placed at $1,500,000, and the required amount has been subscribed with which to commence business. All that now remains to complete the organization is the preparation of the charter and other legal formalities.

The rice interests of New Orleans are vigorously opposing the proposed combine of the country millers, rice growers and brokers, and they are devising ways and means whereby New Orleans may hold the control of the crop which is likely to be wrested away from her.

Biscuits And Confectionery

Chocolate Maker's Industrial Village.

CADBURY, the chocolate manufacturer, was the prime mover in establishing the model village of Bournville, which is about five miles from Birmingham, England.

The following is from a description of this ideal village by F. H. Stead in the April Review of Reviews:

"Through a rustic wicket, along a winding path, amid overhanging tree and shrub and flower, the visitor makes his way to the chief offices—a range of beautiful rooms, two storeys high, built in the chalet style and in the Summer time running over with flowers inside and out. The wonder grows as the entrance is found to be a fair sample of the interior. The dining halls are spacious, well-lighted, and decorated with pictures and flowering plants. Across the massive mahogany counter only the best food is served at cost price. The work-rooms keep up the glamour. They seem designed to make a pleasure of toil and to idealize it.

TEMPERATURE EVEN.

"The thermometer of the workrooms is carefully consulted, and even in July coolness is maintained. The organization of the work, like the structure, has for its end human well-being not less than industrial efficiency. The eight-hour day has long been established. There are 2,300 women employed at Bournville, and the Cadburys have arranged that this great army of women shall be officered entirely by women.

"For the men there are play-grounds, open-air bathing places, baths, gymnasium and refreshment bar in a highly ornate pavilion. The old mansion to which the park belonged has been turned into a residence for some fifty work girls, who are orphans or too far away from home to reside there. The old vinery attached is carefully cultivated, and the grapes grown there are taken to the sick among the workers. For visiting invalid employes two trained nurses are regularly engaged. The grounds of the hall form the women's playground, with special facilities for gymnastic development. They have a rustic pavilion of their own and a picturesque cycle house.

"Mr. Cadbury believes strongly in organized labor. He has again and again intervened in industrial disputes with substantial help for the workers.

A VILLAGE PARADISE.

"Bournville is a village paradise. It covers 850 acres, and the beautiful cottages that line the winding road house nearly 2,000 souls. Scarcely two houses are outwardly the same. Each workingman's cottage has been designed and developed with as much care as a rich man usually lavishes on his own mansion.

"The land, with houses and shops valued at $900,000, has been made over by Mr. Cadbury to a trust at present composed of Cadburys, but to be filled up as they drop out by nominees of the Society of Friends, the Birmingham corporation, and certain district councils. The trust is both ground landlord and house landlord to the village. It gathers in rents (generally about $1.50 a week) now equal to $26,330 a year. After paying expenses the balance is devoted to building new cottages and beautifying the estates.

"This work has been going on for several years, and the founder did not intend to call public attention to it for several years more, but the large housing schemes of the London County Council and other municipalities compelled him to give the world the benefit of his experiment."

Changed Hands.

W. D. Brown's candy factory and store, Galt, Ont., which has been established for 22 years, will in future be known as the Candy Kitchen. The new proprietors, E. Little and J. Campbell, are taking immediate possession.

Confectionery Notes.

The annual convention of the Canadian Association of Master Bakers will be held in Hamilton in August, 1904. One of the important matters to be discussed by the convention will be the adoption of a standard price which will apply to all bread manufactured for shipment.

Biscuit Prices Advanced.

American manufacturers have advanced the price of biscuits and crackers to the wholesale trade 10 per cent. They say that the advance is forced by the higher cost of labor and the increased expense of materials entering into the manufacture of such goods. The jobbers say the advance does not benefit them, and retailers, too, are complaining.

New Bakery.

The Nasmith Baking Company, Toronto, will erect a large brick factory at the corner of Sherborne street and Moss Park place. The building will be three storeys at present, but the foundations will be laid to permit of three additional storeys being added. The cost is estimated at $90,000, but the extra storeys will increase the cost to about $160,000.

STATISTICS OF BUSINESS FAILURES.

"Bradstreet's" has compiled a table of the business failures of the first quarter of 1904, which shows that in respect of the aggregate liabilities involved they have been more important than in the corresponding period of any year since 1897. In the past quarter the total liabilities of failures was $47,300,000, against $28,000,000 a year ago and $34,000,000 two years ago. This amount has been exceeded but three times in the past 23 years, namely, $52,000,000 in 1897, $62,500,000 in 1896 and $49,000,000 in 1894. The average for the past ten years has been $40,800,000.

"Bradstreet's" attributes the expansion of embarrassments to the increased tension shown in the suspensions of banks and other financial institutions, the failures of the insurance companies caused by the Baltimore conflagration, and the troubles of a number of manufacturing enterprises, notably in machinery, brick and paper. Of eighty failures in which liabilities aggregated $100,000 or over, fully one-fourth were of banks and trust companies, which contributed one-fifth of the liability.

NEW PICKLE FACTORY.

T. A. Lytle, of T. A. Lytle & Company, manufacturers of pickles and vinegar, Toronto, has purchased a large tract of land on Dundas street, on which the firm will erect a factory to cost about $20,000.

Advice to Apple Shippers.

THE following letter has been received by The Grocer from the Association of Liverpool Fruit Brokers, Liverpool, England:

Editor Canadian Grocer—

Attention having been called, at a meeting of this association, to an article in your esteemed issue of March 4th, 1904, headed "Advice to Apple Shippers," I have been asked to write you in reference thereto and as it may be of interest to your readers to request you to give my letter the same publicity as was given to the article in question.

The "advice" ostensibly seems to bear the stamp of official authority, but whether it is entitled to do so is not so clear, as it is not usual for any such advice to bear such an impress unless of value to a particular trade as a whole, rather than to any individual shippers who are not entitled to be "piloted" at government expense.

The opinion of those best qualified to speak is that the "advice" is bad and that it is a distinct advantage to the trade to have it centralised as it is largely at present in Liverpool, where the competition of buyers coming from all parts of the kingdom and even from the continent is consequently focussed, necessarily giving more regular and satisfactory results than could otherwise possibly be hoped for.

It is evident that of whatever advantage it might upon occasion be to individual shippers to get more closely in touch with consumers, such decentralisation as is recommended in the "advice" must lead to the loss here of attendance and orders of buyers who find consignments sent to their door. Under the most favorable circumstances the prices in the different towns over which the consignments were "spread" would be largely governed by the immediate requirements of the more limited area, or fixed by the much more easily controlled local competition, whereas those of the Liverpool auction sales represent the actual state of trade in the country, and at the same time from the publicity of all operations, and the high standing of the firms engaged, afford shippers the assurance that results are returned to them, to the last penny, in their account sales.

R. MACFEE, Secretary.

1 Temple Court, Liverpool, April 15, 1904.

Wants Canadian Apples.

An English wholesale fruit dealer, writes the fruit division, Ottawa, that he is desirous of importing Canadian apples next Fall, and asks to be put in communication with reliable shippers who would make consignments against prearranged advances. He would prefer to do business only with those who export their selected fruit in layer boxes. His address and further information may be had on application to W. A. MacKinnon, chief of fruit division.

Pineapple Culture in Florida.

FROM 28 degrees north latitude southward, the pineapple belt of Florida stretches, chiefly where spruce pine lands formerly existed. For years this grey sandy waste was tabooed by fruit growers and farmers, but when a knowledge was gained of the action of fertilizers upon free soil, attention was turned to improving this huge sand bed. Now several train loads of splendid pines are sent away daily during the shipping season, and huge fortunes have been made in the business.

The selection of the land is the most important problem connected with successful pineapple growing, for the pineapple cannot endure wet feet. Here along the pine barrens the land has proved to be ideal. The soil looks like pure sand and as a matter of fact some of it contains nearly 99 1-2 per cent. of substances which are quite insoluble even in strong acids. Fancy raising a crop of fruit from soil only one two-hundredth part of which is soluble in water! Yet it is done, and last year Florida produced about 4,000,000 pines for market from these once barren lands. The mystery is easily explained. They have an ideal base for the cultivation, viz., free drainage, and the art of fertilizers is thoroughly understood.

A complete fertilizer would be about as follows: To a hundred pounds of dried blood, two hundred and fifty pounds of low grade sulphate of potash, and one hundred and fifty pounds of bone meal. This is about the right quantity for the first application to an acre of twelve thousand plants. The fertilizer is sprinkled between the rows and then worked in with a scuffle hoe. The first application may be made eight or ten weeks after the field has been planted, and the next about January or February. After the field begins to bear, applications of the above mixture should be made immediately after the crop is marketed and again about January or February.

Planting Out the Suckers.

About twelve thousand plants of the Red Spanish variety are set out to the acre, and in the course of eighteen months 50 to 75 per cent. of plants will produce fruit. Under very favorable circumstances, by selecting the finest suckers, and planting out at the earliest opportunity, a larger percentage of the plants will fruit. The plants which have fruited usually produce from one to four new plants. All but two of these to each plant are removed for setting out. The suckers which are left on the parent plant produce the second crop a year later, so that for a second crop it is not unusual to harvest fifteen thousand or more fruits from the acre which has been set out to twelve thousand plants.

In the pine woods and the spruce-pine land, the favorite method of planting pineapples at the present time is to lay the ground off in beds of about six rows, the rows being planted about twenty inches apart, the plants about twenty inches apart in the row. Fields, laid off into these narrow beds are much more cheaply worked and fertilized than when laid off in a solid block.

Shed System of Cultivation.

One of the greatest factors is the success attained in Florida has been the introduction of the shed system of cultivation and now over hundreds of acres stretch low shedding, equalizing the temperature greatly the whole year round. The best pines are raised under these sheds—which cost something like $700 per acre to build. The pineapple "shed" is a modified form of greenhouse, the roof of which has as much space open as covered, it is about seven feet high and built of hardwood and pinelaths. The object of the shed is to reduce the temperature in Summer, and increase it during the Winter. The advantage of shedding are these: (1) An increased amount of nitrogen is developed in the soil; (2) the texture of the fruit is improved; (3) the size of the fruit is increased about twenty-five per cent.; (4) temperature is reduced in Summer and increased in Winter.

Methods of the Florida Keys.

The Florida Keys are famous for pineapples. Here the growers set out their plants in a mass of rubble, equalled only by the refuse from the rock-quarry. Sometimes there is no leaf mould left after cleaning and it becomes necessary to brace the newly set plant on all four sides with rocks to keep it from falling over. No cultivation is given as it is impossible to use a plow or even a hoe. Young plants are usually set out within a few weeks after the crop on the old field has ripened, and are allowed to have their own way for several months, when laborers are employed, who use large knives to cut out the weeds that may have sprung up or whatever shrubbery may not have been killed by burning over in clearing. It may be necessary to go over the field again before the first crop comes in, but ordinarily one weeding is sufficient. In this section it is impossible to plant in rows, as the plants have to be set out wherever possible at convenient distances from each other. By the time the second crop is ripening, the foliage will be so dense that the ground is completely shaded. Fertilizing is not practised in this section.

A pineapple plantation on the Keys produces crops for from five to ten years, when the field is said to be "run out." Then Nature is allowed to claim her own, and the sturdy "Conch," moves on to a new field. Unfortunately, the ambitious from other sections of the country have entered the field, and the end of this comfortable system is practically in sight.—Agricultural Journal.

Compliment to Fruit Division.

The London Market Growers' Gazette of April 4 has the following appreciative reference to the work of the Government Fruit Division, Ottawa. It says: "An object lesson is afforded England in the constant attention given to the fruit growing industry in Canada by the Dominion Government." The English publication also expresses the hope that they may have a similar agency some day in England for aiding English fruit growers.

TRADE SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

CANADA'S aggregate foreign trade for the nine months ended March 31st amounted to the enormous total of $345,307,651, or $14,832,238 more than for the same period of the year previous. This is on the basis of imports for consumption and exports, and includes coin and bullion. The figures for March show a decided improvement in the exports, evidently caused by the improvement in the train service, due to the raising of the snow blockade. The details of imports and exports for the nine months are as follows:

	1903.	1904.
Imports for consumption—
Dutiable goods	$ 96,988,705	$108,169,879

CONCERNING AUSTRALIAN TRADE

THE market of Australia in proportion to its population is a large one, the imports amounting to nearl eighty dollars per head or double that of Canada, but the trade is made up of a large variety of articles rather than a large trade in one article. This fact conduces to a misunderstanding in Canada of the conditions prevailing there. The population is scattered over a great extent of country and the cost of travel is considerable. It is necessary, therefore, that a traveller should carry a larger line of goods in Australia than is deemed necessary in Canada. As far as expenses are concerned this applies only to wholesale houses.

With much enterprise Canadian firms have sent out travellers selling only single lines. Canadian manufacturers would find it difficult to sell enough of any one line to maintain representatives although there is no reason why one man could not combine single lines and make it pay, especially when the combination can be sold to the same houses. There are only a few instances of effective combination on the part of Canadian exporters, and Canadian trade with Australia suffers in consequence of the lack.

The bulk of United States goods exported to Australia is sold by six United States agencies ,who represent very large industries in one instance or a combination of several industries in the others. In many cases the trade has been opened by a specialist who devotes himself to the one line until he has secured a market and then the business is transferred to less expensive machinery. The firms doing the general trade are branches of New York firms who can look closely after each branch of the export trade, buying, shipping, finance and selling. There are as yet no such aids to Canadian trade, but with the development now going on and the increase of capital there is no reason why Canada should not have them.

HIGHER TAXES ON TEA AND INCOME.

In his presentation of the Budget before the English House of Commons on April 19, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, estimated the expenditure for 1904-05 at $714,400,000 and the revenue on the basis of existing taxation at $695,300,000, a deficit of $19,100,000 to be made up.

He proposed, therefore, to increase the income tax by 2 cents, to put an additional tax of 4 cents per pound on tea, and to readjust the tobacco duties, imposing a duty of 81 cents on tobacco stripped before imported; also an additional duty of 12 cents on cigars, and an additional 25 cents on foreign cigarettes.

SORGHUM INDUSTRY FOR STRATHROY.

IT is reported that D. R. McKinnon, who has a sorghum industry at Komoka, Ont., is anxious to move to Strathroy and enlarge his business if sufficient acreage can be obtained. Prior to the year 1896 he was located in Iowa, where for years he followed cane growing and syrup manufacture.

He believes sorghum to be the most profitable crop in the agricultural line, the result of his first tests in Ontario, in 1900, being most gratifying. Nine acres were cultivated next season with even better success, the yield being average and the syrup of excellent quality; 1,125 gallons of syrup from nine acres was realised. In addition to the syrup 180 bushels of cane seed were threshed, which by analysis, are worth one-sixth more than oats for stock food. Eight tons of silage per acre were also obtained from the yield, and by test the silage is found to be better than corn. It is claimed that any land suitable for corn or potatoes will grow sorghum, sandy and clay lands yielding the finest quality. Land producing 40 bushels of corn per acre will yield 140 gallons of syrup, and the crop is not hard on the soil, as sugar comes from the air and sun. From 110 to 120 days will mature a crop of cane, and cultivation is easy.

MEATS KEPT FRESH BY STEAM.

"THIS is the method now in vogue on many of the big steamers which carry meats from America and Australia to Europe," says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Meat placed in refrigerators where the atmosphere is kept continually at an average temperature of from 36 to 40 degrees will remain fresh, but not entirely untainted for an indefinite period.

The Australians are given credit for having solved the problem first. They tried experiment after experiment, but all without avail, until some one thought of using steam to volatize the gases which cause meat to disintegrate and to draw them off. A steam pipe was placed in a wooden duct at the bottom of a refrigerator chamber stored with meat; the gases of this kind are low lying, and the duct led directly to the brine tanks. This experiment occurred at Sydney, and for 89 days the refrigerator compartment was kept closed, at the end of which time it was opened, the meat drawn forth, and every piece thoroughly tested. It was as fresh and pure, without the slightest suggestion of bone odor or mold, as on the day it was packed. The gases had been volatilized by the steam, carried off by the wooden duct, and the entire noxious condition purified by the brine tanks. With this aid to the refrigerator process, provided care be taken that the temperature does not fall below freezing point, meat may now be kept for years, and be perfectly fresh when taken forth for consumption.

BEEF TRUST INVESTIGATION.

Prompted by complaints of ranchmen in the Northwestern States that it was their belief that a beef trust existed among the western packers to the restraint of trade and to the detriment of producers and consumers, the Government of the United States has begun an investigation. Representatives of the Departments of Commerce and Labor and Agriculture are in Chicago at the present time examining the stock yards and cattle markets, and similar operations are being carried on throughout the western markets.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Our Canadian Wheat Fields.

A WRITER in the Review of Reviews this month asks this question: "Who can estimate, with any approach to accuracy, the wheat growing acreage of the Canadian provinces and territories?"

The question is rather difficult to answer, especially at the present time. Just now the total number of acres suitable for cultivation is 171,000,000, but beyond the boundaries of Manitoba and the Territories, where these acres lie, are the vast northern territories of Athabasca and Mackenzie, comprising as many million acres more. True at the present time, but a small proportion of this land is in cultivation. And yet if the number of acres under cultivation were not compared with those that are suitable for cultivation, the quantity would seem large, for it has already reached the dimension of over four million acres. From the present small comparative acreage 27,336,000 bushels of wheat and flour were shipped to Great Britain in 1903. When the time comes that one-quarter of the land suitable for cultivation in Manitoba and the three provisional Territories is seeded the total crop will be sufficient to supply the home demand and more than meet the present requirements of Great Britain.

More Elevators Needed.

A STUDY of the table of grain shipments from Canada to Liverpool shows an average at the present time of from 3,000,000 to 6,000,000 bushels weekly.

In order for the best results from the export grain trade of Canada to be obtained for Canadian shippers, it ought to be practicable to hold back cargoes of grain to the point of origin when desirable, qualified, however, by the imperative necessity of keeping a sufficient volume near enough to the seaports for feeding out as it is required. The inadequacy of elevator capacity in the West is the principal reason why it has been out of the question to try to hold back the volume of wheat at the place of production until required for shipment. The Western farmer is thus placed in the predicament of not having adequate storing facilities for holding his grain, and of having to sustain an inevitable loss if he puts his crop on the market wholly as soon as threshed.

It is not difficult to see why the grain producers of Western Canada are vigorously advocating both an enormous increase of elevator facilities at every little station west of Winnipeg, and equally increased transportation facilities which will permit their grain products to go through to the consumer with more speed when it is offered.

Looking for Record Crop.

While the long and severe Winter has brought its evils the Prince Albert district, N.W.T., has already reason to believe that it will be instrumental towards a record wheat crop this year. A report from Prince Albert says the conditions prevailing are exactly similar to those of the year in which a record grain crop was produced, and that farmers are looking forward to a phenomenal yield.

Ontario Grain Prospects Unfavorable.

ACCORDING to S. Rennie, a well-known Ontario agriculturist, the situation throughout the province in respect to the Fall wheat crop is discouraging. All the southern counties have suffered severely. In the County of Wellington the damage promises to be slight, but this is an exceptional case. Essex, Kent, Norfolk, Oxford, Lambton, Waterloo and all the counties bordering on Lake Erie are a unit relative to the great losses likely to accrue through the failure of the wheat to withstand successfully the rigors of the Winter. In the east the conditions are little, if any, better. The conditions in East York are probably as bad or worse than in any of the above-named counties. While almost every other section of the country was, in the early portion of the Winter season, visited with a generous snowfall, through York County there was little, if any, the consequence being that wheat suffered serious injury in the very outset. Up in Grey and Bruce the outlook is more promising, but even there conditions are not such as to excite lively hope. Floods in the southern portion of the province have undoubtedly caused immense loss while the great covering of ice which for so long a time remained over the fields has contributed in some sections to the damage. In summary Mr. Rennie states that from 60 to 65 per cent. is a fair estimate of the wheat which so far has passed through the Winter safely.

The War Influence.

The Russian Government has taken occasion during the month to officially deny a report which has gained currency in Europe and America to the effect that Russia was forbidding the exportation of grain from the empire.

It is thought in some quarters that the war in the East has proceeded far enough to exercise its full force on the grain markets of the world as far as distributing trade and creating unusual demand is concerned. Unless Russia decides to keep her grain at home, there is no legitimate reason why it should constitute a serious factor in making prices henceforth. However, if Russia should change her mind in this respect, a substantial advance would undoubtedly be recorded in American markets.

Bread Back to Five Cents in Ottawa.

There has been little or no decrease in ing sold for five cents per small loaf, and 10 cents for a large one.

There has ben little or no decrease in the price of flour. The reversion back to the old prices is the result of competition. A few bakers started cutting rates and selling for 10 cents instead of 12, and now all are doing so. The difference in price means about $1,000 a day to the general public.

I BELIEVE breakfast is important but not solemn. It is the stepping-stone to what happiness or success the day holds for you.

¶ A day of sunniness and the power to do things is as directly related to a dish of "FORCE" as is a horse-power of steam to a ton of coal.

¶ It is wonderful how quickly the body swings in line just as soon as it begins to get the food it ought to have. Almost at once you feel its effects. Tangles untangle. Difficulties dissolve before you get to them.

¶ I don't see how you can hope to finish a day right if you begin it wrong—and the most important part of the beginning is breakfast—which really begins the night before, when you come to think about it. I'll tell you why. In the meantime,

Be Sunny.

None so Blind As Those Who Won't See.

THE CANADIAN GROCER can prove of valuable assistance to the selling end of any business which seeks trade among the grocers and general storekeepers of Canada.

We advance many plain, indisputable arguments to this effect.

And still there are some folks who can't see it.

Some who can't see how it's going to pay them.

And won't even invest a few dollars to find out.

Very few folks like this, but we would like to convince even them.

If we only could, we'd get a good deal of satisfaction out of it—and we know they would, too.

Don't you think they're blind to their own interests?

Here's a paper that finds a welcome in every worth-while grocery store from Halifax to Vancouver once every week—so can't you see that an announcement of any interest must surely command some attention?

The advertising columns of THE CANADIAN GROCER provide about the best way we know of keeping in close touch with all the grocers of Canada all the time.

Tobacco Culture in Turkestan and the Transcaucasus.

THE following is taken from a report of the British Consul at Batoum:

The cultivation of the tobacco plant in Kahetia is principally concentrated at two points, viz., near the town of Signah and in the flat country lying about Lagodeh and the fields of the villages adjacent thereto. Of recent years the production of tobacco in the Signah region has developed and thrived to so great an extent that the crops have yielded better returns than the plantations in and around Lagodeh. It would appear that plantations on an extensive scale in Kahetia are few and far between, and the largest single areas under the cultivation of tobacco do not exceed 27 acres, the bulk of the tobacco being grown on plantations not exceeding from one to five acres. The quality of the tobacco grown in the district, having any commercial value, appears to be exclusively that known under the name of Trebizond tobacco; other qualities, as, for instance, Samsoon and Dubeck, are cultivated in exceedingly insignificant quantities, and therefore are of no commercial value; the latter-mentioned tobacco is sold at the same rates as the Trebizond quality. Trebizond tobacco is subdivided into two qualities, locally known under the names of Lagodeh-Trebizond and Trebizond-Platana. The first-mentioned quality has been grown for a great number of years; on the other hand, owing to the distribution of the seed among planters by the Department of Agriculture, the Platana quality was only introduced into the district at a comparatively recent date.

The difference in the two qualities spoken of above consists in the following: The Lagodeh-Trebizond is considerably superior to the Platana. The plant contains a considerable number of leaves, the size of which are larger than those of the Platana plant. They are of a round shape, whereas the leaf of the Platana is oblong. The so-called Lagodeh-Trebizond, being superior in quality and color, as a rule yields a heavier crop; planters therefore give this quality of tobacco the preference. There are but few plantations on which Platana tobacco is cultivated but this tobacco is frequently to be seen intermingled with the Lagodeh-Trebizond plant. The Platana quality, however, is gradually acquiring the favor of tobacco planters, and the demand for the seed is annually increasing. Tobacco grown in the district of Signah is considered to be of greater quality than the Lagodeh tobacco, but the manipulation of the leaf is carried out with greater care in the Lagodeh district, where cultivators of tobacco are in general better acquainted with the industry than their brother planters in the Signah region. The difference of the price of the two tobaccos is not very great.

Prices of tobacco fluctuate very considerably and are entirely dependent on the nature of the crops, the yield, and its quality. In the year 1900 the better qualities of tobacco were sold at 5 rubles 50 kopecks, and medium qualities at 3 rubles per pood (11s to 15s per pood of 36 pounds avoirdupois weight); whereas in the year 1901, 9 rubles to 10 rubles 50 kopecks for the better qualities, and 4 rubles to 5 rubles 50 kopecks for the inferior qualities were paid (18s to £1 1s and 8s to 11s per 36 pounds). The rule, however, is that prices of tobacco fluctuate in the following proportions: For the superior qualities from 5 rubles 50 kopecks to 8 rubles, and seldom as much as 10 rubles per pood are paid, the medium qualities ruling at 4 to 5 rubles per pood.

Sales are principally effected during the Winter months, but the better qualities of tobacco are generally purchased in the month of November before they are sorted. Unsold tobacco is forwarded from the plantations to the principal towns, where it is placed in depots and is there retailed to wholesale dealers.

Certain Tobacco manufacturers take the grocer by the throat, shake him, and tell him they own him body and soul so far as his liberty in tobacco selling is concerned. They don't care a fig whether the retailer makes a cent or not. Their tobaccos pay the dealer no profit.

Tobacco is also largely grown in many localities of the Government of Kutais, the Province of Batoum, in which the Mourgoul River Valley is most celebrated for the high qualities of tobacco which it yields, and again in the district of Soukhoum and throughout the government of Tchenomoria.

The general outlook of the tobacco crop this year has been very promising, and, according to reports, the yield is both good and abundant.

Increase in Sales of Cigarettes.

THE sale of cigarettes in Sydney, Cape Breton, has been increasing within the last year or two at an extremely rapid rate, and what is true of Sydney is no doubt true of other places in Nova Scotia, says an Eastern exchange. Last year the consumption amounted to the enormous quantity of 290,000 packages or 2,900,000 cigarettes. Up to the 31st day of March this year the consumption had amounted to 84,000 packages and taking these figures as a basis, the consumption for 1904 will reach the vicinity of 3,650,000 cigarettes or an increase over last year of about three-quarters of a million. These figures appear astoundingly large, but they are as near accurate as they can possibly be had, being based on estimates furnished by local dealers and wholesale houses.

It is significant that while the sale of cigarettes is increasing at this exceeding great rate that of cigars is decreasing almost proportionately. Scarcely half the quantity of cigars and smoking tobaccos was sold last year as the year previous, and the sale for this year shows a marked falling off. Hundreds of people are giving up the use of the latter almost exclusively for the former. One dealer in Sydney figuring out the consumption for the city estimates that fully 60,000 cigarettes of one brand alone are being sold in the city each week, and taking with these the various other kinds that are being used, some of them very extensively, he estimates that the consumption for this year will reach a grand total of 3,900,000, which would be a round million over last year, when the population was much greater than it is at present. There is no doubt if the neighboring towns of Glace Bay, North Sydney and Sydney Mines were included the consumption at the former estimates would be found soaring in the vicinity of seven millions and at the latter considerably more, perhaps nearly eight millions!

Want More Wages.

On April 21 the cigarmakers of Hamilton made a demand for higher wages, which was sanctioned by the international union. They want $1 a thousand more for making cigars, both by hand and mold, 25c. a thousand more for packing cigars in boxes of fifty, and 15c. a thousand more for packing them in boxes containing one hundred. The manufacturers are given till May 2 to give an answer.

Already the trouble has reached an acute stage. On April 23 the Tuckett Company's cigar factory was closed down temporarily, when the stock that was in process of manufacture was finished up, and the men were paid off. About two hundred hands are affected by the shut down in Hamilton.

Tobacco Growing in Burma.

The experiments made in Burma during the year ending June 30, 1903, in the cultivation of the Havana and Virginia varieties of tobacco, were on the whole unsuccessful, though in most cases the failure was due to climatic causes. Some sixty pounds of seed, imported by the Provincial Agricultural Department were distributed between fifteen districts of Lower and Upper Burma. The only striking success was in the Thongwa district, where Havana seed was not only most successful, but its cultivation has gone beyond the experimental stage. The people have not been slow to appreciate the new introduction, with the result that a large trade in Darubyn cheroots has sprung up, the cheroot being prepared from Havana or Virginia leaf thoroughly cured and well rolled.

U. S. Tobacco Prospects for 1904.

The following reports have been received from correspondents in the various tobacco growing states of the American Union concerning the prospects for the coming tobacco crop:

In Kentucky the crop will be late on account of the backwardness of the season and the prospects are for a small output except in the eastern counties where the yield is likely to be large. In Tennessee conditions are favorable, while in Virginia the weather has interfered to a considerable extent and the crop will be late. In North Carolina the season is backward as well as in South Carolina and the acreage will be considerably less this year than last.

U. S. Tobacco Statistics.

The amount of tobacco, cigars, small cigars, cigarettes and snuff, manufactured in the United States during March, 1904, is estimated at 49,111,319 pounds, as against 41,088,212 pounds during March, 1903, an increase of 8,023,107 pounds.

Cigarette Dealers Hard Hit.

At a recent meeting of the Market, License and Health Committee in Winnipeg, Man., it was moved that a special license fee of $500 for the sale of cigarettes be issued. The motion is calculated to restrict and ultimately to prohibit, if possible, the sale of cigarettes and cigarette tobaccos in the city of Winnipeg.

Tobacco Notes.

T. J. Horrocks, Toronto, reports a large increase in the sale of the Ronto cigar to the grocery trade. Merit will tell.

W. H. Steele & Company, Toronto, are placing a new cigar on the market this week, known as the "Echo" brand. For particulars note their advertisement in this week's issue of Grocer.

UNITED STATES PEANUT CROP.

THE scarcity of peanuts during the present season has directed a good deal of attention to the various countries of growth.

The United States produces about 100,000,000 pounds of peanuts annually, which is one-sixth of the entire crop of the world. Virginia is the banner peanut growing state, although Tennessee and the Carolinas are rapidly assuming considerable importance as peanut producers. In the Smithfield section of Virginia where the culture of peanuts has proved most successful, many large farms, sometimes running up to 100 acres, are devoted exclusively to peanut growing. One of the largest peanut factories in the world is located in this district, its yearly output being 350,000 bags, valued at $1,500,000.

The largest peanut fields in the world are supposed to be in Guiana on the north coast of Africa. There they are grown by hundreds of tons. The quality is inferior, however, and the bulk is shipped to Marseilles, France, where it is made into oil, a considerable proportion of which is used in adulterating the cheaper grades of both French and Italian oilve oil. When refined and purified it is a desirable article of food, but of course not as good as the pure olive oil.

The shortage in Virginia this season has overturned the usual practices of the trade in the States. While many low grade peanuts are shipped from there to Marseilles in ordinary seasons, this year considerable quantities will be imported to make good any possible shortage in those particular grades. The first arrivals are already due and will be distributed among consumers of low grade Spanish shelled nuts. They can be imported from Marseilles for about five cents a pound, which is below the cost of the same class of nut produced in Virginia.

SALT AREAS OF CANADA.

IT may interest the trade to learn that Ontario supplies nearly all the salt used in the Dominion of Canada. The salt deposits in the lands bordering on the esatern shore of Lake Huron and the River and Lake St. Clair were known as far back as 1646, when the records of Jesuit explorers mention the existence of salt springs. It was not until 1855, however, that the Canadian springs were exploited. The discovery —or re-discovery—was made accidentally, near the town of Goderich, in a bore-hole which was being made in search of petroleum. At a depth of 964 feet, the drill struck rock salt. The boring was continued 1,010 feet, and in that distance passed through a solid, thirty-foot bed of rock salt.

It is probable that the greater part of that section of the Western Peninsula comprising the counties of Kent and Essex is underlain by salt-fields. The whole land portion of the salt basin is estimated to measure an extreme length of one hundred and fifty miles, from Kincardine to Lake Erie, with a maximum width of about forty miles at the centre.

The Western Ontario product is said to be considerably purer than that of Cheshire. It is used nearly altogether for domestic uses in the central and western provinces. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, however, the salt consumed by the sea and gulf fisheries is all imported. This enters Canada, when used in the curing of fish, duty free, and the trans-Atlantic freights are considerably lower than those from Ontario's salt fields. In all, Western Ontario produced during the last fiscal year nearly three hundred thousand dollars' worth of the article. Nearly four hundred thousand dollars' worth of duty free salt was used by Canadian fisheries along the Atlantic coast.

SHORTNESS IN BRAZIL CROP.

THE danger of shortness in the Brazil coffee crop has been accentuated by news from Havre, dated March 25, which states that the Santos "O'Cafe" reports as follows on the future crop and the damage done by drouth and excessive heat:

"The rains only commenced in December instead of in October; therefore they harmed the vegetation of the shrubs very much during the period of their development, which extends from October to March. In January the rains were not as abundant as they should have been. During eighteen days we have examined the different districts of the state, and have only had two days of rain. It is well to take note that the rains were in spots and only fell in limited districts.

"In February the western district continued to be the victim of the drouth, as the rains were not general. The level of the rivers and brooks continued to be very low.

"Let us now compare the observations made by Mr. Edouard Lemasson on the plantation de Monte Alegre, property of Mr. Francisco Schmidt: December, 1903, 215m-m; January, 1904, 174.5 m-m; February, 1904 (up to 22d), 203.2 m-m; December, 1902, 310 m-m; January, 1903, 114 m-m; February, 1903, 280 m-m; from July, 1901, to August, 1902, 1,565 m-m of rain fell, against 1,285 m-m from July, 1902, to August, 1903.

"By these figures, which represent observations made daily on the plantation of Mr. Schmidt, one can see clearly that less rain has fallen during the past Summer and that it is noticeable that the drouth in August, September and October has already done great harm to the plantation. The dearth of water continues to make itself felt throughout the whole western district, which is the most productive.

"One finds the plantations throughout the districts of Sorocabana in a much better shape, but this good appearance does not amount to anything, as the 'raingauge' does not give us any better figures.

"The flowering in September and August has been remarkable, perhaps the finest that has ever been seen in the entire province. But what remains of the flowering? To-day in travelling over hundreds of thousands of feet of coffee area it is hardly worth while to pick the scanty and meagre beans which have so far appeared. This flowering is a failure, and rather indicates a poor state of the shrubs, caused by the bad weather.

"At the moment we do not see anyting to justify the prognostications of an abundant crop for 1905-1906, as all the plants are still weakened, and the rains have not been sufficient to meet the necessities of vegetation.

"Formerly the rains lasted fifteen to twenty days, sometimes even one month in succession. They began often in October and continued until March. During these three or four months of rain the plants improved, multiplying in branches and spreading same considerably. This was during the period of great producton. To-day on account of the scarcity of rain the production seems to diminish from year to year.

"In some rocky districts this calamity has burned up a great number of berries which were ripening, and now from the general advices from Santos it seems difficult that the crop of the province will reach seven and a half million.

"On the other hand, the reports from Rio are unanimous in confirming a crop of two and a quarter million."

How long does it take the people to recognise and appreciate a good thing?

This question has caused every manufacturer some very anxious moments when first placing some new product on the market. To such we would say: It all depends on the merit of the goods in question.

Look at the sale of Postal Orders. First year, 1881, only six hundred and forty-seven thousand were sold. Second year, 1882, four and one-half millions were used.

Wasting Your Energies?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of the "Griffin" Brand of Dried Fruits and the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Fish, because people who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly, the intrinsic merit of both these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

"Griffin" Brand Dried Fruits.

Seedless Raisins and Prunes. Dried Apricots, Peaches and Pears in all their original goodness. A revelation to the grocer who has been buying other Brands.

Seleccted with the greatest care and shipped in original boxes right from the Vineyards and Orchards on the Pacific Coast.

Look for the "Griffin" trade mark before you buy.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce. Selected, cured and packed by Captain Austin of The Thistle Canning Co., Little River, N.S.

Absolutely clean, rich, delicate, appetizing. Prepared right at the water side where they are caught. The brand of highest quality and so recog nized the world over.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

SOME NEWFOUNDLAND ADVERTISEMENTS.

A CORRESPONDENT sends me a copy of a St. John's evening paper, and I am reproducing a few of the advertisements of grocers found therein. This newspaper, by the way, is printed on pink stock—something not to be commended—and the "make-up" or general arrangement of matter is about as poor as it could be. The entire first page is made up of general advertising, and is likely to be skipped by the average reader holus bolus. The remaining pages are likewise very poor. Advertisers in this paper get the minimum of help from the publishers. It is the duty of every newspaper publisher to make his newspaper a good medium for advertising, and the man who is careless in this regard should be taken sharply to task. This criticism of an example of poor newspaper-making can certainly be applied to many Canadian sheets, and if any of the readers of this department find the service which their publishers are providing is second-class or worse, they have excellent reason for lodging a protest. Many a really good advertisement gets a poor chance to sell goods because of its being carried in a poorly gotten up newspaper.

It will be seen by reference to the examples reproduced that they do not fulfil the conditions of good advertising. Take, for example, the advertisement beginning "Oats and Feed Selling Cheap." This advertisement, from a quick glance, suggests an announcement of oats and feed. Yet it will be found that it is quite as much a baking powder advertisement. There is absolutely no occasion to introduce baking powder into this advertisement. The effect is weakening to the whole announcement. "One thing at a time, and that done well," is a good rule to remember. The mixing up of utterly unlike and unrelated announcements is bad. This same criticism applies to another advertisement—the one beginning "Hay Seed." Timothy seed, oranges and potatoes are not at all related, and make when mixed up a poor advertisement.

If an advertiser feels that he "must fill up his space with something," it is a pretty sure indication that he has bought too much space. It is a good plan oftentimes to contract for so many inches of space, to be used as desired, at so much per inch, and to use each day or week just enough to tell the story effectively. Waste of space is something to be guarded against.

(LIST.)

In the advertisement, "A Delicious Dish," is exemplified a tendency of many advertisers—to use big figures. I do not like to call it boasting, but it certainly smacks of bragging. The public doesn't care whether the advertiser has 1,000 lbs. or 5,000 lbs. of fish on hand. If there were a famine in turbot then the statement of the amount on hand would have some significance to the customer, but not otherwise. It will perhaps have been observed that in the two other advertisements reviewed the same tendency is at work—"5,000 bushels black oats," "40 sacks hay seed," "10 cases Seville oranges," "100 barrels potatoes." The public is not interested in these quantities and it is useless and worse to talk on uninteresting items.

In the advertisement of "1,000 lbs. fresh turbot,—a splendid dish," there is a note of humor: 1,000 lbs. would certainly make a magnificent dish!

In the advertisement beginning "This advertisement is not for the purpose of reminding you of Swift's Pride Soap and Washing Powder, but to call your attention to White Star Flour," one comes across an old trick that cannot be called a good one. It is an effort to advertise three things while seeming to advertise only one. It is poor advertising, however, and the defect is easily seen directly it is pointed out.

The remaining example—that beginning "At the LeMarchant Store," is of a very common sort,—namely, the mere enumeration of a list of things found in any grocery store. Such an advertisement is not of much use. It will not sell goods, and hence is a failure. Yet it is an example of advertising found everywhere. I sincerely trust that grocers who advertise are endeavoring to make better use of their space than Mr. Maxim is doing.

By way of contrast I reproduce an advertisement sent in by a correspondent who has acquired by diligent practice a facility in writing pretty good advertisements. He assures me that his advertisements sell the goods advertised, and that his firm's business has grown appreciably as a result of advertising. It will be seen that in this jam advertisement there is a style wholly lacking in the other examples. There is more attention paid to display and arrangement; an appeal is made to the prospective buyer which is sure to win a response; there is a definiteness about the whole advertisement that must be appreciated by every reader.

Sometimes I think that it is impossible for some people to write good advertisements; at other times I think that everyone honestly trying to do so must soon or late learn to prepare announcements concerning his business that will leave nothing to be desired. It is mainly a matter of practice. Simplicity, straightforwardness, definiteness and brevity are the watchwords.

AN ENTERPRISING MONTREALER.

THE Acme Can Works, Montreal, have recently installed a new gas plant in their factory. In conversation with a representative of The Grocer the manager, Mr. Campbell, stated that the service supplied by the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company has proved very unsatisfactory, and that often during their busiest season the pressure has been so low that it has been impossible to turn out anything like the required amount of work. The installation of the new gas plant will remove all these difficulties, since it has a capacity of fifty thousand feet per day, whereas the requirement during the busiest season is never more than twenty-five thousand feet per day. It is also claimed that the new plant will effect a saving of not less than 70 per cent.

This gas plant, which is quite unique, is the third of the kind to be installed in Canada on an extensive scale, one being in St. Catharines and the other in Hamilton. The main peculiarity of the Acme gas system is the process of forcing air under pressure through a series of generators containing a crude distillation of petroleum. The oil is stored underground, and admitted to the generators by means of a pump with automatic devices which control the amount in exact proportion to the volume of gas produced. The plant is absolutely automatic in regard to amount of gas produced, and there is therefore no storage of gas on the premises.

TRADE IN THE FAR NORTH.

THE following item from a recent issue of the Dawson Daily News tells rather eloquently of the vicissitudes of trade in the north, especially to those engaged in speculative lines. Late shipments were caught in the freeze-up last Fall, and have remained there ever since:

"Ten or twelve tons of fresh apples, oranges, pears and potatoes at Steamboat Slough, near Kirkman, 100 miles above Dawson are doomed to be ruined by the warm weather, which will be here within two or three weeks. The entire stock is worth perhaps $2,000, or would bring that much if laid down here in the middle of Winter. If not frozen it would have sold for far more. The goods were aboard the steamer Canadian, and were frozen in when that steamer was caught in the ice last Fall."

have for a good while past tried to make money on the reputation of MacLAREN'S IMPERIAL CHEESE by putting an inferior article into similar jars. So far they have left our CANADA CREAM CHEESE alone, but that won't last, and doubtless before long the grocery trade will be canvassed on behalf of some cheap imitation of our well-known CANADA CREAM package.

Be Wise, Mr. Grocer,

when that day comes. It isn't quality that the imitator sells (quality costs too much for him). He won't put CANADA CREAM quality in his bogus package. If he could do that he wouldn't need to be an imitator. He will simply try to trade on another man's good name.

An article that is imitated is good enough to be handled exclusively. It is certainly too good to be set aside for the imitation.

Dairy Inspectors Meet.

THE annual meeting of dairy inspectors was held in the Board of Trade Building, Montreal, last week, the object of the meeting being to formulate instructions for the inspectors during the coming season. In addition to a full attendance of inspectors there were several members of the Department of Agriculture present, and a contingent of about fifty inspectors who are under the control of the Dairymen's Association.

J. D. Leclair, general butter inspector, presided and delivered an address. E. Bourbeau, cheese instructor at the Ste. Hyacinthe School, also gave an instructive and clever talk and answered several interesting technical questions which were provoked by his remarks.

At the afternoon session C. H. Parmelee, M. P., presided and a number of local representatives of the butter and cheese trade spoke on questions of interest to the trade. R. M. Ballantyne and J. H. Scott, representing the Montreal Produce Association, also gave some new ideas as to the requirements of the export trade.

Dairy Butter.

The Grocer has received the following valuable letter on the subject of dairy butter from one of its subscribers :

Mr. Editor :

During the past twenty-five years Canadian dairymen and farmers have made great strides in cheese, and creamery and dairy butter production, largely owing to the efforts of various governments and dairy schools.

Dairy butter, however, has not kept to the front as well as it should. A number of consumers prefer dairy butter to creamery when it is good quality. And why ? Because no encouragement is given the farmer to improve the quality of dairy butter. The country dealer appears to be too anxious to trade off his sugar and tea for any old thing so long as it can be called butter. It would make a "cow cry" to see what poor results are obtained from her efforts to produce good cream.

Why cannot some concerted action be taken by those in the trade for the mutual benefit of all concerned ? Farmers' wives are ready to listen to any proposition that will enhance the value of their goods in the consuming markets.

Would it not be a good idea to have all uniform rolls of 1 and 2 lb. sizes packed in proper sized boxes after the manner of a 30 doz. egg box ? I don't think a box of this construction would be far out of line; the partition in the centre stiffens the box and does not allow too many rolls together. Railway men can pick up a box of this weight and set it down, while a large box is tumbled about and the large rolls contained therein become more or less broken up and present a bad appearance on arrival at the receiving end. Besides, uniform rolls of 1 and 2 lbs. each could be made of a size to fill up each compartment of the box, allowing no shifting of the rolls in transit. This style of packing would land roll butter in fine order and realize a higher figure for both producer and dealer. Perhaps some large dealers in Toronto or Montreal can inaugurate some such system, appointing their agents throughout the country, thus insuring regular shipments. In addition a large and profitable connection might be built up. The butter boxes could go back and forth the same as egg boxes do now.

Could not the Dairy Division of the Department of Agriculture print a good dairy butter recipe and mail one to every farmer's wife in the country ? Even if she were a good butter maker she would value it more or less and put it away with her choice cake recipes to be used when the occasion demanded. When she wants a nice cake for a lady visitor she will also want some choice butter. How many women visit the travelling dairy when it is in their section of the country ?

Yours very truly,
NOW AND THEN.

Dairy Situation in Ontario.

ATTENTION has been called to the significant change that has been going on in regard to the dairy industry of Onatrio during the last few years. In the western district of the province dairy farming is on the decrease, while in the eastern districts it is increasing. In 1897 there were 820 cheese factories east of Toronto, producing 85,943,000 pounds of cheese, while in 1902 there were 885 factories, producing 107,100,000 pounds, an increase of 65 factories and of 21,000,000 pounds in the output. West of Toronto there were in 1897 343 factories, with an output of 51,420,000 pounds, while in 1902 there were only 242 factories, with an output of 39,700,000 pounds, a decrease of 191 in the number of factories and a falling off of 11,700,000 pounds in the output.

In the five counties, Oxford, Middlesex, Perth, Elgin and Norfolk, the cheese centre of the west, there has been a falling off of seventeen in the number of factories and of 1,537,000 pounds in the output, while in the eighteen other counties there are eighty-four fewer factories and the production is less by 10,200,000 pounds.

Western farmers have been driven to the raising of beef cattle, says Mr. James, deputy minister of agriculture, almost entirely, owing to the scarcity of labor, and had it not been for this difficulty there would have been a much greater increase in the cheese production of the east. Mr. James does not regard the movement as an injurious one, however, because the farmers are making just as much money by raising stock, and the decrease in the cheese output in the west is more than made up by the increase in the east.

Canned Vegetables.

CANNED goods are frequently viewed with a certain amount of suspicion, although it is not sufficiently strong to prevent their copious consumption. As far as canned vegetables are concerned, however, the public appears to be perfectly safe, at least with the Canadian brands. The Government analyst recently secured a hundred samples of all kinds of canned vegetables and subjected them to a rigorous analysis. Not one specimen was found to contain any adulterant, coloring matter, or even chemical preservative. Only two cases were found to be other than first-class, and these were packages of green corn which had obviously decayed, and would not have been used for food.

It is well known that copper is occasionally used to intensify the green tint of canned peas, pickles, etc., but only two cans of Canadian peas showed the slightest trace of this poison, while the test was so severe that the presence of less than ten parts in a million could easily be detected. On the other hand, samples of imported French peas exhibited over sixty parts of copper to the million. Foodstuffs in Canada are too plentiful and cheap to make it worth while to practice adulteration.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—Trade in provisions is steady with prospects brightening, owing to the opening of navigation. Provision men report a number of orders already from lake ports. The demand for smoked meats continues good. The season for hogs is practically over and prices continue firm. Lard is unchanged, with steady trade reported. Trade in fresh meats continues brisk. Our quotations are as follows:

Butter—Supplies of butter are already beginning to accumulate, and as a result prices have eased considerably. Dairy prints 1c easier, and dairy in tubs, under qualities, is 1c easier. Creamery butter is also lower; prints have eased 3c and solids 2c. The trade will not pay a fancy price for creamery butter when good dairy is so cheap. Most of the creameries are now in operation. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 17
Dairy rolls, large	0 13	0 14
" prints	0 13	0 14

Cheese—The cheese market is quiet this week, only small quantities of new cheese offering, and the export trade dull. New fodder is quoted 1-2c lower than last week with range of prices 1-4c less, although one dealer makes the range 3-4 less than last week's quotations. Twins are also 1-4c easier, with range of prices less by 1 1-4c. Quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 09½	0 10½
" new fodder	0 08½	0 09

Montreal and Quebec.

Provisions — The situation in provisions remains unchanged but strong. The tone of the market is firm for live hogs, at the advance quoted last week. The supply was good and sales were made freely at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c per lb. weighed off cars. Trade continued fairly strong in fresh killed abattoir stock at $7.50 to $7.75 per hundred. A steadily increasing demand was noted for hams and bacon, and prices generally were steady. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00

Butter—Butter is dull, and while fine choice butter could hardly be sold under 16c, there is a brand that can be had for much less money. For instance, at St. Hyacinthe last Saturday 300 packages sold at 15c. As this little town is some distance from Montreal, it would be equal to 15 1-4c laid down here. However, there is another point of view. Navigation is open, and at the wharf yesterday morning there were plenty of sales at 15c. To be fair to all notions of trade, the prices would reach from 15 1-2 to 16c, with a decided weakening in tone of the market. From abroad, the old country market would indicate no great hope for an outlet for Canadian butter. Then, too, there is another interesting point reported, in that the Russian Government do not intend to cease shipping Siberian butter, notwithstanding the war, hence it behooves Canadian shippers to remember that creamery from Canada may meet competition this Summer. We quote:

Cheese—Low prices prevail in cheese, and there seems to be little hope of an immediate advance for cheese. One hundred and fifty Quebec cheese have been purchased at the wharf at 7c. This indicates the low ebb that exists here—Ontario make advanced 1-4 to 1-2c for possible arrivals, yet it was very difficult to find any actual business taking place in the West. From abroad the demand is reported very unsatisfactory, as the offerings are very much in excess of the requirements and there is a lull in prices of cheese everywhere. Strictly finest quality have been offered at 47s and occasionally an extra shilling more, while their quality is obtainable at even a shilling less.

St. John, N. B.

Provisions—In barreled pork and beef there is very light business. Particularly in pork prices are easy. Hams and rolls are having a steady sale at even figures. In lard there is a large stock and not a large movement. There is no change in price. In fresh meats there is a fair market. Veal is plentiful and low. Mutton is quite firm. Lamb is more freely offered, but still high. Beef and pork remain unchanged.

Expert Dairy Inspection.

It is the intention of the Ontario Agricultural Department this year to pay unusual attention to dairy instruction. To this end an extra $5,000 has been appropriated so as to provide a more efficient service. As many expert inspectors as are needed will be sent to the various cheese and butter factories throughout the province for the purpose of instructing the men working there in the most modern methods of cheese and butter making. They will also be required to make a careful inspection of all the sanitary arrangements in the factories they visit.

One result of the inspection will be that the quality of cheese and butter exported to foreign markets will be exactly as represented.

Provision Notes.

The White Valley Creamery Association, Victoria, B. C., has been incorporated.

B. F. Hare, chief of the Poultry Division of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has resigned.

Kinnettles creamery, Fergus, has been thoroughly overhauled, and a complete cutfit of new machinery installed.

The Crescent Oyster Company, Vancouver, B. C., has been incorporated as a limited company, with a capital of twenty thousand dollars.

The Toronto Cream and Butter Co. have established a mail and 'phone order business in connection with the manufacture of butter. Heretofore they have manufactured for export and for the wholesale trade.

Editor Canadian Grocer:

The recent discussion in the Senate on the desirability of taking steps to exclude the circulation of United States currency in Canada is a step in the right direction, and at the same time opens the door to a much wider question, which we, as Canadians, wishing to build up Canada and the Empire, would do well to consider.

You will remember the howl of outraged patriotism that was heard from Halifax to Vancouver over the Alaska boundary award. England was afraid to decide against the U. S. for fear of giving offence, and sacrificed Canada to retain their friendship. Now, sir, I will prove to you that Canadians, individually and collectively, are yielding day after day to the Americans an hundred times more value than that paltry bit of rock on the Pacific Coast.

We begin by buying about three times as much goods from the United States as we sell to them, while we sell to Great Britain about three times as much as we buy—a left handed patriotism this, is it not?

The currency question was so ably debated in the Senate that I need not elaborate on it, beyond pointing out that the goods we buy for sterling gold, we allow our customers to pay us for, either in U. S. 50 per cent. silver coinage, or in rag money inscribed as often as not, "good for one silver dollar."

But the humility of the patriotic Canadian goes further and gaudily decorates his place of business with a brilliant sign, "American Hotel," Boston this, New York that. Why, even the candy vendors at the street corners flout their Coney Island candy at us, as if St. Helen Island sweets were not good enough for honest Montreal stomachs.

Our country is over-run with American commercial travellers, our newspapers are crowded with American advertisements, while our "Maple Leaf for Ever" patriots send their millions across the line for things they could obtain of Canadian or British manufacture as cheap, and mostly of better quality.

I admit that this state of affairs is largely due to habit, yet I venture to think that there is a latent desire in us to build up Canada and the Empire, which only requires awakening in us as individuals to bear fruitful results in the near future.

I shall be glad to see others agitate this question, so that it may be borne in on us that our country's prosperity lies in our hands as individuals, and that if each one of us will make it a personal matter to encourage our own industries and circulate our own currency, then we shall see our country develop more rapidly than has occurred in the past. Yours truly,

A MONTREAL MERCHANT.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Herring Fishing in Belgium.

THE U. S. consul to Belgium reports that in view of the enormous quantity of herring consumed in Belgium, a number of Belgians, associated with Dutch capitalists, are now organizing a company for the purpose of exploiting the herring fisheries with a steam fleet.

In 1901 Belgium imported from Holland 14,520,000 pounds of salted and smoked herring. About the same amount was imported from France and England. In Holland the importance of herring fishing is annually increasing. In 1900 the Dutch fleet numbered 619 boats; in 1901, 643; in 1902, 686; and in 1903, 786. Some of the principal companies in Holland engaged in this trade pay a dividend as high as 13 per cent. Other companies during the past ten years have paid annual dividends averaging 9 per cent.

When it is considered that the Dutch fishers must seek foreign markets for about 90 per cent. of their product, among which Belgium is one of the most important, it is surprising that Belgian capitalists have not sooner created a national fishing fleet. Formerly, Germany was dependent upon foreign countries for its supply of herring, but understanding the advantages and necessities of a national fleet, she now owns a number of boats, providing very nearly the entire amount of fish required for home consumption.

The promoters of the enterprise in Belgium are members of Parliament, owners of fisheries, and fish brokers. In their efforts to interest their compatriots in this new venture they are encouraged by the king, who, in a recent address at Bruges, pointed out the great advantages to be derived by the country in directing its energy toward working the valuable resources of the sea.

Facts About Salmon in April, 1904.

From Astoria it is learned that the Alaska companies have on hand about 42,000 cases of red Alaska salmon. The Alaska Packers' Association is said to have about 300,000 cases. As the Sound packers sold all their pack last Fall, it is believed that these figures represent all the salmon that is in first hands.

A prominent fish dealer has the opinion from advices received that the Spring season in salmon will be late on the Pacific coast, as the water is very muddy from the floods. Last year the season commenced on March 1, which was remarkably early. It is already started this year, but not much is being done.

May Fish in Winter.

The difficulty over the French shore treaty has been satisfactorily adjusted. France agrees that the clause terminating the fishing on October 20th of each year applies only to her own fishermen. Newfoundland, Canadian, and American fishermen are not restricted in carrying on the Winter herring fishery.

U. S. Canners Vexed.

SALMON canners in Puget Sound are greatly displeased over the recent action of the Canadian authorities in prohibiting the foreign sale or exportation of fresh sockeye salmon. They claim that unless something is done to offset the new Canadian fishing regulations, United States packers will be open to attack without the possibility of reprisals being made. Canadian packers at present can come over into the American fishing grounds and bid up the price of raw fish on the American canners, and the latter are helpless, because of the prohibition of sale of Canadian fish to foreign interests.

The Secretary of State at Washington has accordingly directed the Consul-General of the United States at Ottawa to ascertain the precise form of the law or regulation prescribed by the Canadian Government prohibiting the export of fresh salmon from British Columbia to Puget Sound during the canning season. This action was taken at the request of U.S. fishing interests, who wish to introduce legislation prohibiting the export of fresh salmon from the Sound to British Columbia following the same lines as the Canadian law. By so doing they hope to accomplish a thorough means of retaliation against the Canadians.

Association News.

GROCERY COLLECTION DEPARTMENT.

THE collection department of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association is booming, and Secretary Beaudry expresses himself as quite satisfied with the recognition it has received. By the time the federation of the different associations is accomplished it will be possible to bring a strong force into play; for instance, if a butcher is owed by a certain person he can let the grocer know about it and vice versa. At the same time a federation will increase the effectiveness of the work of the association and lessen the expenses connected therewith. The idea of the collection department is to carry the names of delinquent debtors, and general information regarding credits in the trade. It is expected that three-quarters of the grocers of Montreal will join the collection agency or bureau.

The seventh annual convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States, called for May 2-5, is in session at San Francisco as Grocer goes to press.

VANCOUVER ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Vancouver, B. C., are opposing the imposition of an annual license of $15 on sellers of tobacco, on the ground that the license is much too high. Some forty or fifty retail grocers have signed a petition which has been endorsed by the Wholesale Grocers' Association, and presented to the civic authorities. As a result the city council has been recommended to reconsider the matter with a view to lowering the fee.

FEDERATION OF ASSOCIATIONS.

A practical step towards the federation of several of the Montreal trade associations has at last been taken. Last week delegates from the four associations which propose to amalgamate met and discussed plans for a constitution, as a result of which a constitution was drawn up. All that remains to be done before the federation may be accomplished is to place this constitution before the different associations individually, and have the legal ratification of approval. The four associations comprise the butchers, grocers, dry goods and boots and shoes men.

The only association at all unlikely to be unanimous on the matter is that of the boot and shoe men. They do not give credit and feel that in many ways the business of the boot and shoe merchant is distinct in interest from the others. The grocers are very enthusiastic. They believe the early closing movement will interest all associations regardless of other elements. A complete federation seems likely in the near future.

CATALOGUES, BOOKLETS, ETC.

A. J. Stewart, Limited, Toronto, have just issued a very handsome little price list and catalogue covering the many lines they are placing on the market. It is printed on fine coated paper and may be had by the trade on application.

The Grocer is in receipt of an attractive folder issued by T. H. Estabrooks, tea importer and blender, St. John, N. B. It contains specimens of successful advertisements which have recently appeared in Canadian trade papers, two of them in The Grocer. There is also a very fine picture of the "Red Rose" tea warehouse in St. John, which is acknowledged to be one of the largest and best equipped establishments of the kind in Canada.

A Great Fire Makes Many Changes

THE PURE GOLD MANUFACTURING CO., Limited, being in possession of one of the finest warehouses left in the city of Toronto, has been naturally besieged with offers from many buyers, and have finally closed a sale at a good big round figure to the E. W. Gillett Manufacturing Co.

However, as The Pure Gold Company retains possession until December 1st, no difficulty is anticipated in securing building quarters, when new premises will be erected which will be even more roomy than the present ones.

This public announcement is made to the customers of The Pure Gold Co. who may be anxious to know the exact state of affairs occasioned by this change. It is hardly necessary to say that all orders will receive the same careful attention as heretofore, and that there will be no interruption in the course of business operations.

CO-OPERATING FOR THE EXPORT TRADE.

IT is some years since an agitation was first started in the columns of this paper for the appointment of a commercial agent in London, and it is nearly two years since the Dominion Government allotted $25,000 and the Ontario Government $5,000 for the expense of establishing such an office. The appointment of an agent has not yet, however, been made, and to all appearances it is as far away as ever from realization.

Why the Government has not made the appointment is something which the business men of this country cannot understand. There is need of such an agent, and the Government, by allotting the money for the maintenance of such an agent, evidently recognizes this. One can come to no other conclusion than that political exigencies are at the bottom of the delay in making the actual appointment. In the meantime the business interests of the country, as far as the British markets are concerned, are necessarily suffering.

While we still maintain that the Government should make the appointment of a commercial agent in London, it seems to us that groups of business men in Canada might themselves take some action in appointing a suitable representative or representatives in London for the purpose of looking after their interests. We have reference to business men who are desirous of developing the export trade with Great Britain, but who up to the present have been unable to individually bear the expense of a permanent representative there. The canners have recently set an example of what can be done by the manufacturers of any one particular line taking preconcerted action, they having recently sent a representative to England to see what can be done towards developing the export trade in canned goods. What one class of business men has done can be done by others, or by the co-operation of two or more in different lines of business.

It is an important matter and one which the boards of trade in the leading centres or the Canadian Manufacturers' Association might take into their serious consideration.

TO STAMP OUT CONSUMPTION.

IT is interesting to note that many of the most thoughtful and public-spirited men of the Dominion are numbered among the officers and members of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Consumption and other Forms of Tuberculosis, which held its fourth annual meeting in Ottawa on April 20 and 21. Every thinking citizen must now be impressed with the necessity for united action to check the ravages of a disease which causes one death in every eight in this country, and gives rise to a vast amount of suffering and permanent ill-health. It is calculated that in Canada at the present moment between 30,000 and 40,000 persons are suffering from it, yet it is undoubtedly a disease which can be prevented and which is curable in its earlier stages.

The report of the executive council points out that the operations of the association have combined with other influences to concentrate public attention on the disease with the result that a desire has been awakened for information regarding the measures which should be taken to stay its ravages.

There are in the Dominion at the present time five institutions devoted to the treatment of consumption, one of which has just been erected at Kentville by the Nova Scotia Government. The total accommodation in all of these, together with that in hospitals to which consumptives are admitted, probably does not exceed 200 beds, whereas there ought to be a home for consumptives in nearly every county.

When the federal authorities take up the matter, when perennially poor municipal councils show their liberality and philanthropy by equipping cots in consumption sanitaria, and, last but not least, when retail grocers' associations vote appropriations towards the same end, as was the case the other day when the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association voted a sum of one hundred dollars to the free department of the National Sanitarium Association at Gravenhurst, Ont., surely the outlook is not discouraging.

That the business men of Canada have always taken the deepest interest in humanitarian efforts, no matter under what auspices they were carried on, is shown by their munificence in building and equipping hospitals and charitable institutions all over the Dominion. It goes without saying that they will be equally interested in seeing sanitaria established and endowed for treating tuberculosis, and it is a matter for congratulation that among the first to rise to the occasion is a retail grocers' guild.

WRITING OFF STOCK.

FOLLOWING the announcement of increased fire insurance rates made public last week comes the news that the British America and Western Assurance Companies are about to write off a sufficient amount of their stock to cover the impairment in capital recently entailed and to issue new stock to recover the amount thus written off.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY.

SO many persons are indifferent to public questions, no matter how directly they may affect one's business or one's liberty, that it is proof of the importance and the timeliness of a subject when two references to it arouse such widespread discussion as has been caused by the two editorials dealing with the salaries of the Canadian Supreme Court judges in the last two issues of this paper. Business men have in various ways manifested their approval of the stand taken in The Grocer that the salaries of the judges on the Supreme Court bench are altogether inadequate in comparison with the dignity and influence of the office, that some of the best, the most desirable, men could not accept an appointment even to the Supreme Court for the simple reason that they could not afford to at the present salaries attaching.

D. McNicoll, acting president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, when the matter was brought to his attention last week, expressed his convictions with great force. "I have long thought," said he, "that the meagre salaries paid to our Canadian Superior Court judges are a disgrace to the country. It is a well-known fact that the members of the bar in our great centres of population (these being the men who should be available for high judicial positions) are in receipt of incomes from three to four times as great as those paid our judges. How, therefore, can it be expected that the best material from the bar can be obtained for judicial positions?

"I do not wish to be understood as casting any reflection upon the ability of those who accept positions as judges. We all know it is impossible to secure men to take the management of banks and other large financial or industrial institutions at anything like the salaries paid even to the highest chief justice in the land. Does this not show that the present system is wrong? I think so."

The Globe, Toronto, endorses the views expressed by The Grocer almost verbatim. In the issue of Thursday, April 28, it says: "It is a cause of satisfaction to note occasional expressions of opinion favorable to the more adequate remuneration of judges of the Superior Courts of both the Dominion and the provinces. As to the desirability of having on the bench men of ability, learning and experience there is no room for doubt. The duties they have to discharge cannot be performed by those who have not such qualifications. Sometimes it is heard, as an objection to proposed increases of salaries, that there are plenty of applicants willing to take judicial positions at the present rates of remuneration; but the first consideration should always be fitness, and whatever salaries are necessary to secure the right sort of men should be cheerfully paid. The policy of entrusting inferior men with high judicial functions would soon hopelessly imperil the reputation of the country for civilization.

"Two comparisons may be cited as helping to a clear understanding of the importance of this question. (The comparisons quoted are those given in The Grocer of April 23rd. It is not necessary in considering the salaries of the Supreme Court judges to take into view those of the provincial Superior Court judges, but to do so would only strengthen the case for the payment of reasonable remuneration where qualifications so high are exacted."

In its comment on the subject the Ottawa Citizen, April 19, misses a vital point in the discussion. It says: "The Grocer has deflected its attention from trade subjects to the question of Canada's underpaid judiciary and quotes some interesting figures in support of the statement that the Supreme Court judges of the Dominion are the worst paid in the Empire." (The figures quoted are the same as were reproduced in the Globe.) The Citizen is wrong in saying that this paper has "deflected from trade subjects" in introducing this discussion. The matter is one of vital importance to readers of The Grocer. The judgments of the Supreme Court affect the business man much more vitally than they do the lawyers, for the former has to foot the bills and it is he who will gain or lose by the decisions. When this thought is fully grasped by the business men in Parliament and by the business men in Canada generally there will be an end to the dilatory treatment of this matter.

The first article on the subject was placed before Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues in the Dominion Cabinet. While declining to express any opinion on a matter on which the council as a whole has not passed, general recognition of the gravity of the question is evidenced.

Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, says: "The matter is doubtless one which deserves the very serious consideration of the Government and also of Parliament."

Hon. Wm. Mulock, Postmaster- General, says: "The question is one of very considerable importance and has for many years engaged the consideration of the various Governments. Up to the present it has not been satisfactorily solved."

This last sentence is worthy of attention. It is to be hoped a "satisfactory solution" will be reached during the present session.

Senator W. C. Edwards, one of the business men in the Upper House, expresses himself in a manner which manifests the progressiveness which has characterized his business career. He says: "If this matter should be up in Parliament for discussion, I will not hesitate for a moment to express my opinion on it, but outside of Parliament I would not like to go further than to say that all salaries to which you refer were arranged at a time when Canada was far from being in the position in which it is to-day. In due time, no doubt, a revision will take place, not only in the salaries of chief justices, but those of all the courts and Ministers of the Crown and perhaps others as well."

Robert Munro, managing director of the Canada Paint Company, and a former president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, when asked by a representative of The Grocer for a statement of his opinion on the subject said: "I am in full sympathy with all you have said respecting the salaries of the judges in the Supreme Court. My observation leads me to believe that our brightest lawyers, speaking as a rule, find it less laborious and much more profitable to practise at the bar and that elevation to the bench would be to them quite a sacrifice. I feel sure that the business community will heartily support the Government in raising the emoluments of our judges to such figures as would attract the best men in the profession."

THE DOG FISH PROBLEM.

EVERYONE interested in Canadian fisheries, and especially in those upon the Atlantic coast, will sympathize with the agitation at present being made by the fishermen to induce the Government to take steps to stop the depredations of dog fish. These dog fish are aptly called wolves of the sea. They are at present dangerously numerous and they not only drive other fish away but they get into the seines of the fishermen and destroy them.

There are three or four kinds of dog fish. The most copious breeders are the picked dog or Spring dog fish. Outside of fishery interests not much seems to be known of these peculiar creatures. They are, however, shaped much like the shark tribes of fish and are usually about five feet in length and weigh from five to eight pounds. They travel about in large numbers and are exceedingly voracious.

In the annual report of the Department of Marine and Fisheries dog fish are discussed by Prof. Edward E. Prince, commissioner and general inspector of fisheries. He does not think that there is need to have grave fears about the dog fish but in no way does he depreciate their harmful habits and their undesirable character. He thinks their appearance is more like a pestilence and that it will die out of its own accord. The same plague has cropped up again and again and has gone. His observation of the dog fish shows that they do not usually stay long in any one place and, while there are hordes at work now, their visit is only temporary. Last year, however, they remained in the Canadian fishing grounds four or five months, though they usually move away after five or six weeks.

The ravages of dog fish first became serious in Canadian fisheries in 1898 and during the past three years they have been a great annoyance to fishermen. The direct harm that dog fish may accomplish is shown by Prof. Prince's paper. In 1882 the pack of cured herring in the Shetland Isles was 134,000 barrels, whereas in 1888, owing to the presence of the plague, the total quantity fell to 99,000 barrels, and in 1889 even lower; that is, 44,000 barrels or only about one-third of the pack two years before, and representing, therefore, an enormous total loss. It is estimated that west of Halifax, N.S., the fishery catch is $400,000 to $6,000 below the average.

In connection with the effort being made towards the extermination of the dog fish it is well to remember that although this fish is not used as food, it has some commercial value. Oil is extracted from the liver, while the head and skeleton make good glue. Fertilizers are also produced from the entrails and offal. Another important fact is that the nomadic habits of the dog fish will interfere materially with any regular commercial use being made of them.

Bounties have already been suggested as an effective remedy, and suggestions have been made along the line of establishing a factory for the extraction of dog fish oil. Produced on a large scale, dog fish oil could be made profitable, and be used for lighting and lubricating purposes. Those well acquainted with the subject are of the opinion that the offering of a bounty will be the quickest and most effectual way of inducing fishermen to take up seriously the problem of exterminating the dog fish.

TRADING STAMPS AND THE LAW.

ON Friday, April 29, the law stepped in and gave the Province of Quebec power to erase trading stamps, the decisive case being argued in Quebec city. The same trading stamp company which is so prominent in Montreal undertook to challenge the legality of the city's right to stop them from carrying on business. After considerable argument the judge maintained that according to the constitution every city had a right to enforce and control its own by-laws. His decision was that a law in Quebec City and Province existed against trading stamps and that a fine of $20 should be inflicted for every offence against the same.

As a result the Traders' Advertising Company, owned by H. A. Wilder & Company, Montreal, and operating in different cities in the province at once placed glaring announcements in all the big dailies to the effect that they had instructed their lawyer to appeal the case and that they would not cease using trading stamps until the highest court in the realm decided against them.

Meanwhile the Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal have not been idle in their endeavor to do away with trading stamps. It appears that by some slight error the civic authorities changed the enforcement of the by-law so as to make the penalty read $40 instead of $20; this will have to be changed in order to remove the possibility of the trading stamp people escaping upon a technicality of law. A number of the most prominent members of the Montreal association are aldermen, which means that they will bring strong influence to bear in the right direction. The City Council have already promised that the law above mentioned will be changed by May 15. A wait of two weeks now remains to see whether the notice of motion made on April 15 is carried, as will in all probability be the case. In this event the association are of the opinion that the day is done for trading stamps, at least in Montreal.

Mr. Wilder, of the Traders' Advertising Company, ridicules the whole thing, and the fact that his trading stamp store is continually crowded with eager bargain hunters is an evidence of his purpose to carry out his intention.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, May 5, 1904.

Groceries.

TRADE in groceries has shown a decided improvement during the week under review. The country is getting opened up after the recent severe Winter, and is so far as country merchants are beginning to experience increased activity in their business, the wholesalers are sharing the benefit. With the opening of navigation another influence conducive to health is being brought to bear on the market. Canned goods are in active demand at firm prices with corn and peas noticeably scarce and fruit showing an improved demand. Sugar is firm and has advanced 5c since last quotations. Syrups and molasses are in active demand at prices showing a tendency to become firmer; the New Orleans market continues uncertain. An active market in teas is reported, the principal demand being for medium-priced Ceylons and Indians. The recent increase in the duty on tea entering England has had the effect of increasing the demand for low grade tea.

Rio coffee has begun to move locally, several sales being reported for the week at firm prices. Prunes continue to move freely; reports from Smyrna say the coming crop of Sultana raisins is going to be short and currants show an upward tendency.

CANNED GOODS.

The market in canned goods is strong this week, corn and peas being particularly firm. Tomatoes are steady and fruit is in better demand. The market for canned fruits will continue to improve from now on. Nothing new has been heard about the condition of stocks. It is believed, however, that they are practically out of first hands. There are no changes in last week's prices to record. Our quotations are as follows :

SUGAR

The strength reported in our last advice has been fully maintained, and it transpires that American refiners have secured fully 300,000 bags of raws, the bulk being at 2 7/8c c. and f., chiefly sugar for May shipment from Cuba. Since then we hear of purchases on the island at a further 1-32 advance, but the New York quotation remains unchanged. There have been sales of spot sugars on basis equivalent to $3.70 duty paid, which registers an advance hf fully 16c per cwt. from lowest recent point.

The unprecedented heavy rains in Cuba setting in so early, long before the regular rainy season, have completely upset all calculations and interfered greatly with grinding at a time when continual grinding was of the utmost importance to planters in order to enable them to complete the crop.

As an indication of the tone and temper of holders, Cubans are now being held for 2 7-16c c. and f., New York, and the tendency of the market favors sellers. We hear of the sale of a cargo of jobbers' sugars to Canada at 2 1-16c for basis 96 ex-warehouse in bond, New York, which is about 1-16 above the parity of recent spot sales to New York refiners.

Europe has made some advances during the week, the price going to 8s 10½d for 88 per cent beet, and as we go to press the nominal quotation is 8s 9¾d, or a net advance of 1½d per cwt. for the week.

The tone of the raw market has been reflected in the refined sugar situation, the American and National Refineries having advanced their prices 5c per cwt., while Arbuckle has advanced 10c per cwt. for the week. Just as we went to press last week a further advance of 5c per cwt. in Canadian quotations was recorded and we revise quotations accordingly.

Just as we go to press all Canadian sugars have advanced 5c per 100 lbs. Effective 12 noon to-day. This is following a similar advance made by all New York refiners this morning.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for the week ending April 27 were 59,949 tons, with meltings 37,000 tons, or 2,000 tons less than the previous week. Total stocks in all hands on April 27 were estimated at 183,627 tons, being 33,720 tons less than for the same time last year, while combined stocks of U. S. and Cuba show a decline of 147,983 tons from last year. Total stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,324,627 tons, as against 3,341,425 tons for the previous year, showing a decline of 116,798 tons.

The outlook appears favorable to steady prices, though at the moment the market is quiet with buyers and sellers apart, sellers asking 1-16 advance while buyers are not willing to pay over last prices, but would take further lots on the same basis. As we go to press we hear of the sale of a car of Cuban centrifugals for May shipment at 2 7/8c c. and f. We quote the following prices :

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been a good demand for syrups and molasses during the week under review at firm prices, with the tendency upwards. Several shipments of New Orleans molasses are reported to be on the way to Canadian dealers. New Orleans manufacturers, however, are not willing to quote prices f. o. b. What small quantities of West Indian syrups have arrived in the local market are meeting with good demand. We quote the following prices :

TEAS

The tea market continues active and steady with firm prices ruling. Medium priced Ceylons and Indians have been in special demand. Several sales of low-grade Congous to the Northwest Territories are reported.

The increase of 2d per lb. in the duty on tea in England has had the effect of bringing about a distinct advance in cost of tea for price, as well as an increased demand for low-grade teas. The new Japan crop is reported to be of average quality and of medium quantity.

The secret of the additional duty was so well kept that it was only during the last few days that any uneasiness became apparent in England. Consequently the amount withdrawn in anticipation from warehouses was unimportant.

Latest London reports say the demand for Indians is brisk with common kinds tending dearer. After the declaration of the Budget the feature of the market was the active inquiry for lower-priced descriptions at a further advance. Medium to fine, on the other hand, passed irregularly with a downward tendency. Considerable business has been done privately on the basis of the advance with the market closing at the best.

In Ceylons the demand has been brisk for leaf kinds under 7½d per lb., which often resulted in a rise of ¼d per lb. being established. Orange Pekoes and Pekoes with desirable flavor are again being taken for export at full firm to rather dearer rates.

Colombo telegrams give shipments to the United Kingdom for the first half of April as four and one-half million lbs., and estimate shipments for April at nine million lbs. If the current report that of this quantity 1½ million lbs. are for transhipment to Russia and America proves correct, the supply for England will be reduced appreciably below that of April last year, when 8¼ million lbs. were sent. COFFEES.

The coffee situation as far as milder coffees are concerned remains unchanged. A number of local sales of Rios are reported on the street this week. Prices tend to become firmer, though it is difficult to say how much of this is due to the manipulations of speculators in the New York market, and how much to more or less unreliable reports from primary markets.

Latest New York reports say there has been a slight decline in prices. The market is flat for actual coffee and prices have weakened following the decline in the market for contracts. The Brazil markets have continued to hold steady, only an occasional small quantity of high-grade coffee being obtained from the Rio and Santos markets on the parity of values ruling in New York. Summing up the existing conditions in coffee the market may be classed strictly as a waiting one, and it would seem that the immediate course of values will be determined largely by the movement of Brazil and mild coffee crops during the coming month. Foreign Dried Fruits.

The market in foreign dried fruits has been quiet for the week at quotations unchanged from last week. At the Pacific Coast trade is reported to have been particularly dull. Prunes are still in fair demand and are holding the price firm. An upward tendency is noted in currants. There has been an advance abroad, although not much interest is being shown in this market.

Advices from C. Whittall, Smyrna, Turkey, state that it is now beyond doubt that the recent cold spell has interfered materially with the coming Sultana raisin crop. Estimates of next Summer's production have been reduced to about 30,000 tons, and the prospect of such a moderate yield has tended to impart additional firmness to the market. Prices have been slowly advancing on continued buying for export. Fig trees have not been affected by the cold weather, and although last year's production is not anticipated, present prospects point to a substantial yield. Our quotations are as follows :

EGGS.

The egg market is firm this week, with demand big and supplies not so easy to obtain as heretofore. Prices have advanced 1-2c. Dealers' agents in the country report that a whole month's egg supply has been cut off owing to the severity of the Winter and the lateness of the season. It is not improbable that a shortage will follow. We quote the following prices:

Green Fruits.

A lively trade is reported in green fruits during the week under review, particularly in pine apples, bananas, tomatoes and strawberries. Oranges still continue in good demand, several large shipments from California having arrived within the week. Valencia oranges are slightly firmer in price. Lemons are easier; the regular spring shipment of lemons to Montreal from Mediterranean ports is now due, and it is thought the market will be affected according as stocks are purchased, principally in the east, or whether they meet with equal distribution over the Dominion. Grape fruit is difficult to obtain at firm prices. Pines are easier, and free arrivals are reported. North Carolina strawberries are from 6 to 9c easier, and arrivals are increasing daily. Vegetables.

The scarcity of home grown vegetables continues, while the demand for such is brisk as usual at this season. Green stuff and potatoes are very difficult to obtain; potatoes in bags have advanced 15 to 25c, and in carrots 10 to 15c. They will likely go higher as supplies are low in the country and being rapidly bought up. Old cabbage is nearly out of the market, its place having been taken by green stock, for which the demand is continually improving. Sweet potatoes are out of the market. Egyptian and Bermuda onions are 25c easier in price, respectively. Valencias are out of the market. Carrots and parsnips are firmer in price. California celery is off the market. Green onions and cucumbers are decidedly lower in price. Bermuda new potatoes are off the market; they have been replaced by Florida new potatoes, which are quoted below. Green beans, cabbage, peas, and asparagus are cheaper than last week. We quote the following prices:

The range in alsike is 45c greater, timothy is 25 to 35c firmer, and the range of prices 10c less than those quoted last week. Timothy, flail-threshed, is 75c higher than last week. Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market has exhibited some new features during the week under review. Ontario wheat is scarce and strong; red wheat is 1c firmer, and white wheat 2c firmer respectively. Manitoba wheat is weak and has dropped since last quotations; Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard and northern No. 1 are each 4c easier; northern No. 2 has dropped 4 to 7c. The drop is attributed almost entirely to the manipulations of grain speculators. Barley is from 2 to 4c easier. Oats are 1-2c firmer. Peas are 1c easier. Our quotations are as follows:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, May 5th, 1904.

Groceries.

ACTIVITY marks the local market this week. The first ocean steamer, the Dominion, has arrived. This portends a general development of trade. From the country comes the news that collections are good and the demand for all kinds of groceries is strong. The sugar advance of ten cents last week has had a vital impression upon the trade and the demand has been limited for some days. Canned goods remain in fair demand with few offerings for new stock and the report regarding the falling off of the fruit crop in the west has been entirely dissipated. Other reports from the west indicate that the fruit crop will be very good indeed and the canned fruit men are looking anxiously after this information. Dried fruits remain firm with a good demand for Valencia raisins. Prunes also are in good demand and reported ½c easier for California. Regarding currants the market is moderately active. Deeper than the local market there is an influence of somewhat restricted supplies. This is caused by the absence of the usual shipment from Greece. The growth from this quarter is hindered from advancing in price to any extent by the abundance of better fruit at a very slightly higher range of values. From private sources there is supposed to be legislation on foot in respect to this article which is of a rather drastic character and it may raise prices unduly. As reported last week, Sultanas may be expected to rise in price. Reports generally agree to the effect that considerable damage has been done to the growing crop and holders are disposed to sell their stock at an advance on the prices now ruling.

The double advance of sugar last week, making ten cents all round, and making extra granulated quoted at $4.25, with the general effect upon all lines, phoenix, bright coffee and bright yellow, etc., is notable. There is a tendency towards a further advance on sugar. Tea is interesting. From Japan it is learned that the market opened 10 per cent. lower than last year, but this is only on first steamer and small parcels, and does not indicate any definite position. Quality is average and quantity is good. The importance of other brands of teas, India and Ceylon, is based upon the recent tax on British teas of 4c. This would indicate an increased demand for common teas in this country. The local tea dealers would like to see a tax on high-priced teas, but the tax in the Old Country has very little to do with this country, except that where the producers suffer the distributor also shares in the loss.

SUGAR.

In addition to the advance noted of five cents last week, another five cents per hundred pounds was placed on refined sugar at the end of week. This was done as a result of the further advances in New York. This makes a total of ten cents in the local market. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been a good demand for syrups and molasses this week. Barbadoes molasses have been offered here at a laid down price of 24¼c cargo lots, and these are the figures which seem to be embodied in the offerings of brokers and import agents. No change in last week's prices has taken place. From the islands a report comes of an advance of half a cent. We quote:

COFFEE.

Coffee is still solid and a steady demand would indicate little fear as regards the Rio crop. Considerable speculation is heard regarding the productiveness of the eastern field, yet the dealers generally have been holding off from buying, largely because there was no general selection. Prices have been well maintained, the finer qualities being in some instances dearer. The bad weather which was experienced at the time of harvesting has had its effect and the flavor has been spoilt in certain lines. The berry is reported to be very small and in consequence no high prices have been attained. From abroad, Salvador and Nicaragua are reported to have shown a decided improvement in quality. TEA.

The tea market has awakened. From Japan comes the news that a 10 per cent. decline was noted in the new crop market with considerable activity and the quality was quoted as average, and the quantity quite up to previous years. This applies only to opening prices and no definite report can be made as to future prices. In Indian and Ceylon teas the market was considered very interesting owing to the British Budget putting a tax upon tea. This, however, will not materially affect the Canadian market, only that common teas will come into great demand, while the distributors have an opportunity to push the sale of the better class teas, and by doing this greater satisfaction will be given to the consumer and a more remunerative result will be given to the retailer. The market continues firm for all descriptions of Congou tea and the quantity available of this tea is extremely small. There seems to be every prospect of an advance in this kind of tea. We quote:

The following cablegram has been received by R. W. Forester from Bernard & Co., of Yokohama: "Settlement 3250 piculs, prices 5 per cent. lower than last year; market active at the advance; tea arriving slowly on account of bad weather."

CANNED GOODS.

Canned goods are firm and a great interest is being taken in the advance of 5 per cent. which the Canners' Association put upon fruit last week. This has not alarmed the local trade, inasmuch as the demand is active and the supply seems to be limited. Dealers' stocks are gradually running down and, if it were not for the fact that a fair supply of 1902 pack had been held, prices would perhaps have been very much higher than they are at the present time. Take salmon for instance as a canned article of great interest. The largest packers have not made public their fixed price for new season's Alaska, nor do they appear to be in any hurry to do so, as the pack of 1904 is expected to be rather light and canners are not optimistic regarding a new pack until 1905. This, of course, remains to be seen. The firmness of the market is more apparent than ever. There is a strong inquiry for sardines and the reduced stocks of Summer pack fish cause prices for the better qualities to be firm. On the other hand, the Winter packed fish suitable for export are much easier in price, so the reports come from abroad. California fruits continue to excite a good demand at firm prices. We quote:

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., April 29, 1904.

ALMOST interesting piece of news in labor circles here this week was the announcement that a Chinese labor employer, a big "tyee," Sam Kee by name, is turning his attention to sugar beet culture in Alberta. The statement is made that this Chinaman, who is very wealthy, conducting mercantile business as well as being a labor contractor, is to take 150 Chinese laborers to Raymond, Alberta, where he has several hundred acres of land which he will plant with sugar beets. He has a contract to sell the beets to the sugar factory built in the Mormon settlement at Raymond. Last year Sam Kee contracted for and supplied 100 Chinese to some of the farmers in the Raymond district, to work in the sugar beet fields. Evidently concluding that he could handle the business himself, he has this year leased land and made his arrangements to go into the raising of beet roots on an extensive scale. The beet sugar factory, which was only operated last season for the first time, is to be enlarged next year, it is said.

Canadian flour may be selling well in Japan, and other lines of Canadian produce, such as salmon, both salt and canned, may find ready market with the Japanese now that the war is on, but one big order certainly slipped through the fingers of Canadian dealers. On the C. P. R. steamer Empress of China, which sails on Monday next, there is to be one big consignment of 500 tons of preserved beef from the United States packers. The beef was brought to this port from Seattle by the steamer Umatilla and transferred to the Empress. While this is the first shipment to be sent by way of Vancouver or British Columbia ports, since the outbreak of the Russian-Japanese war, several consignments have gone via ports of the States.

Live stock are beginning to move to the north very quickly. Last Saturday night the hulk Henrietta, in tow of the tug Czar, sailed for Skagway with 250 head of cattle and a large shipment of over 500 head of sheep, which are being sent north by the Pacific Cold Storage Company. To-night the steamer Cottage City sails with a big consignment of sheep and 50 head of cattle. Other shipments of cattle somewhat smaller have gone north on steamers in the past two weeks, so that in all there must be over 500 head of cattle and over 1,000 head of sheep on the road into Dawson. Nearly all the stock will be driven from the lower end of Lake Lebarge down the trail to the Klondike capital. Other shipments north are beginning to increase again in readiness for through transportation. Much of the goods will be held until the first open water, though a large proportion still consists of supplies for the new Alsek diggings. These goods are handled from White Horse. Naturally there is nothing to report of new finds in the Alsek district, at this season. The snow is all going off and the roads and trails are well-nigh impassable at present. The chief interest now centres in the awaiting of the time when work can be done to prove up the values on the creeks which have been prospected. On the results of the first operations rests the chance of a big activity, amounting to a boom in that country.

The large number of people moving to this province from Eastern Canada, and even from the Northwest and Manitoba is having its effect in very great activity in the principal farming and ranching districts of the province. On the mainland, the Fraser valley to Chilliwack, including the delta lands and islands at the mouth of the river, and the great Okanagan valley in the interior, are the two principal districts which have any considerable agricultural development. In the former the land which has been for years going begging for purchasers and for people to live on it and start in growing farm produce, is now being rapidly taken up. In the Okanagan, the chief change is that the big holdings formerly lying almost idle in the hands of a few men, are being sold to syndicates and broken up into small holdings, on which men and their families can produce sufficient for not only a good living but for a good profit. The fruit industry is likely to be the most attractive in the Okanagan district, as it is at present, though other farm products are equally well grown. In the Fraser valley while fruit growing, especially of small fruits, is an important line, the large areas make it more favorable for dairying and stock-raising, and, as there is considerable land very adaptable to this industry, while other land grows hay and feed profitably, it is very likely that dairying will continue to increase in importance, especially as there is such a large and attractive home market, which is not so true of the fruit, which has to seek its outlet in the Northwest Territories and Manitoba.

The salmon canners are much interested in the progress of negotiations at Ottawa to the end of allowing them the use of fish traps to catch salmon. There have been varying rumors current here, but it is evident that if not this season, then at farthest, next year, the traps will be allowed. The members of the Dominion House from Victoria and Vancouver Island are in favor of the traps, while those on the mainland, especially Mr. Aulay Morrison, representing Westminster, the Fraser River district, are opposing the traps. As the traps will, if granted, be on Vancouver Island, west of the city of Victoria, the fish will have that much more of a handicap in reaching the Fraser River. From Steveston, at the mouth of the river, to New Westminster, has always been the principal seat of the salmon canning industry in the southern coast district. New Westmister people very naturally think that the industry, which is an important one to their city, will be injured by allowing traps on the coast of Vancouver Island, 75 miles before the salmon in their annual "run" to their native river reach its mouth. The same objections, of course, have always been entertained towards the fish traps on the United States side of the 49th parallel, which was senselessly drawn to cross Point Roberts when it should have stopped at the seashore. Point Roberts is a long neck of land running south and enclosing Boundary Bay. The boundary was made to continue from the mainland across the bay and also across Point Roberts. It thus lies directly belowthe mouth of the Fraser River, which it dominates in a most absurd fashion. The salmon traps are virtually a fence of piles and fish nets across the main course of the salmon as they come up the Gulf of Georgia from the Straits of Juan de Fuca on their way from the sea to the river. Over these the Canadian Government has had no control, and it is with mixed feelings that the canners view the proposal to put traps down on the Canadian side. Of course those who secured favored sites on the foreshore of Beechy Bay from the Prior Government are quite pleased to have traps.

The run of sockeye salmon on the Fraser is not expected until the middle of July each year. Spring salmon run in varying quantities all through the Winter, and are supposed to be running better now. In the northern waters of the B. C. coast the Spring salmon are running quite freely. Large quantities are being salted and from the Fraser two firms are shipping large quantities of frozen fish. In one or two northern canneries there is being put up this season a pack of canned Spring salmon. This is quite unusual, but it is on account of the demand for all grades of canned salmon from Japan.

The Retail Grocers' Association in the city of Vancouver this week succesfully fought by petition the imposition of a stiff license for the sale of tobacco in retail groceries. It was proposed by the tobacconists that a fee of $50 be fixed, and the city council partly consented to this. The fee for retail grocers was to be $15. The grocers appealed against this and succeeded in getting the fee fixed at $5 per year, to which they did not object.

Local market conditions are somewhat brighter as the season advances. The retail trade has every promise of a good month in May.

Prices and stocks are about as last quotations. In produce there has been some eastern butter forward since last week. It was slightly delayed in transit, but reached here on Saturday last. The price is quoted firm at 26c. Stocks of butter are light. A little fresh grass butter from Washington is brought in every day or two, but it is held at practically the same price as the eastern stock. Local supplies of butter are small yet.

The cheese market is a surprise to every one. A car of new eastern cheese has been sold to arrive here The price quoted was 8 1-2c Ontario, which would mean something like 10 1-2c here. This is very much less than any former experience. The car was sold at the quoted price without any trouble.

Local eggs are beginning to be more plentiful, but the price cannot be bettered at 30c wholesale, and few are offering at that. There are no other stocks coming in to speak of, and retail strictly fresh eggs bring 35 to 40c per doz.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, May 3, 1904.

BUSINESS for the past week shows much improvement over the week before. Throughout Manitoba and the Northwest seeding is well under way, though there are still a great many farmers who have not sown a seed owing to the watery condition of the ground.

Sugar—The market is firm. Montreal granulated is quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellow at $4.25.

Canned Fruits—The market is now firm, since the advance in prices on all lines on the 25th inst. from 5 to 10 per cent. Pineapples have made their appearance this week and the market quotes 2 lb. whole pineapples at $3.75 a case of 2 doz., 1¾ lb. sliced at $3.75 a case of 2 doz., 1½ lb. sliced $7.20 a case of 4 doz., and 1¾ lb. grated $7.60 a case of 4 doz.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are very firm. The market quotes evaporated apples as being sold here at 7½c a lb. Oregon prunes in large sizes are still very cheap—70 to 80 at 5¼c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6¼c, and 40 to 50 at 6¾c.

Green Fruits—The market is firm. Tomatoes are quoted at $4 a case, cucumbers at $2 a doz., and rhubarb at 6c a lb. Bananas are scarce and are being sold from $3 to $3.50 a bunch. Apples are a little cheaper and the market quotes 2X high at $4, and 3X high at $5 a barrel.

Rolled Oats—The market is a little easier. 60 lb. sacks are quoted at $2.25, 40 lb. sacks at $2.30, 20 lb. sacks at $2.35, 8 lb. sacks at $2.65, and 5 lb. sacks at $2.85.

Flour—The flour situation remains unchanged. No. 1 patent is still quoted at $2.75.

Peanuts—The market expects to advance the price on peanuts, as the stocks throughout the United States are very light and the new crop will not be in before about the 1st of November.

Cured Meats—The market remains firm. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, shoulders 8¾c, picnic hams 9c, breakfast bellies 13¼c, breakfast backs 11¼c, long spice rolls 10¾c, and long dry clear 9c.

Lard—The market remains firm with pure lard in 50 lb. pails $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 3 lb. tins $6.65, 5 lb. tins $6.60, compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

OTTAWA TRADE GOSSIP.

May 3, 1904.

MERCHANTS here report business good with prospects very bright. The latter part of April was somewhat dull, but May has opened up with a much brighter tone. The weather is ideal, with enough warmth to increase the sale of fruits greatly.

Prices in most lines remain the same as for some time, although some lines show some change or likelihood of it.

In canned goods, tomatoes and corn are very firm. The supply of tomatoes is fairly good, but the increased demand from the west is likely to use up a great deal.

Salmon is expected to be high, although prices for new goods are not quoted. Present quotations are about $6.00 a case. Bulk pickles are in good demand just now and prices have advanced to $3.25 a keg. The rice market is weak with lower prices.

At the fruit exchange here the Summer trade commenced this week with a boom. The proprietor, Mr. G. W. Hunt, reports that they sold this week 5 cars of oranges, 3 cars of bananas, 2 cars of lemons, and one car of Florida tomatoes, the first full car ever offered in Ottawa at one sale. Prices were more than satisfactory for everything. Fancy navel oranges sold from $2.75 to $3.00; choice, $2.60 to $2.75; standards, $2.25 to $2.60; Messina lemons, 300s, $1.75 to $2.25; Messina lemons, 360s, $1.50 to $1.75. The demand for 360 lemons was poor, although with hot weather approaching the consumption of lemons will increase greatly. No. 1 bananas brought $1.60 to $2.25, 8 hands $1.35 to $1.50; No. 2s 75c to $1.00. Pineapples, 24s sold for 12 1-2 to 15c; 30s, 9 1-2 to 10c; 36s, 8c. Florida tomatoes, fancy stock, $2.25 to $2.65. Egyptian onions, $2.75 to $3.00 a sack.

In speaking of the Winnipeg branch of the Ottawa Fruit Exchange, Mr. Hunt said that since its establishment its growth has been phenomenal, and promises soon to be equal to Ottawa in size. The Winnipeg exchange is in charge of Mr. Wm. Borthwick, one of Ottawa's oldest fruit merchants.

The first full car of strawberries will be offered this week on the exchange. Commencing next week daily sales will be held. On the local market butter and cheese are selling at lower prices than for some time. Potatoes are very scarce with a prospect of advancing. Prices are now $1.10 a bag, by the load. Lard is low, 8c being the price of pure. Eggs are firm at 14c. Dealers are packing full blast, which looks as if prices are as low as they will be this season. Flour is quoted: Hungarian, $5.10 per barrel; bakers', $4.70 to $4.80 per barrel, with the usual charge of 20c for small pack-

NOTES.

The Ottawa merchants are preparing to entertain the New York grocers, who are members of the "Clique Tourists" of that city.

The New Yorkers are invited to come to Ottawa Sept. 1, and from now until then plans will be arranged whereby they will see Ottawa in good style.

The first carload of Salada tea consigned to Messrs. Provost and Allard, arrived here last Friday. It was sold by Mr. Owen, Salada's well-known representative, on the Monday previous, and was certainly delivered promptly. It took five trucks to handle the shipment, and in doing so the local firm took advantage and displayed their ad. on each truck, which proved a good hit for Messrs. Provost and Allard as well as Salada Tea.

The F. J. Castle Co. are meeting with great success in the sale of "Wee McGreegor Breakfast Food."

H. N. Bate & Sons are making extensive alterations in the interior of their warehouse. They are building a new salesroom, which is to be fitted up to date. Their old room has proved far too small for their increased business.

PLEASANT EVENT.

LAST Saturday, April 30th, the employes of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, wholesale grocers, Montreal, held a very pleasant assembly in the large offices of the firm. All the employes, including travellers, warehousemen, and office and sample room staff, to the number of nearly one hundred, participated in the event. The occasion for the assembly was to present an address of congratulation and good wishes to Mr. Emile Chaput, son of Mr. Chas. Chaput, senior member of the firm, on the occasion of his approaching marriage to Miss Rosalie Loranger.

In the evening at the Club La Fontaine, of which Mr. Emile Chaput is a member, a soiree was held—tendered Mr. Chaput by his friends who had foregathered in the club to the number of about sixty or more. Mr. Chaput was presented with a superb cut-glass service. Mr. and Mrs. Chaput were married on Thursday, May 5th, and left for a trip to New York, Atlantic City, Philadelphia and Washington.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

IN the present state of quietude the slightest move in the butter and cheese market is of interest. A few days ago there was a slight change in the dullness in Montreal and some shipments were reported. In country districts general dissatisfaction exists at the prices and the feeling is that makers in the country will sell their milk direct rather than manufacture it into cheese and butter. Buyers and sellers continue to offer these lines to suit their personal needs. At Brockville, where one of the best cheese boards in the district is located, no opening took place until yesterday.

The holders of fodder cheese seem to be holding off and the market which opened last week at 7½c may be stiffened a little this week. A little over 2,000 boxes are supposed to have been sent forward. Imagine the contrast with last year, when buyers were seeking fodder cheese at 13c and farmers could not supply the demand. This year the dairymen are holding back in the hope that there will be an advance. On the other hand, there is a certain anticipation of butter taking an advance and some attention is being directed towards this commodity. Notwithstanding all these facts, the outlook is not any too promising from the country point of view, owing to the cold, backward Spring and inadequate pasturage. Factory patrons, for instance, are not very hopeful as to their usual contribution to the cheese production.

The total shipments of Canadian cheese for the week ending April 29 are as follows :

Portland, 2,286; St. John, 1,596; New York, 11,595.

Same week last year : Portland, 10,187; St. John, 2, 398; New York, 9,444.

The total shipments of Canadian cheese from the opening of navigation, May 1st, 1903, to April 29, 1904, including rail shipments to New York and Boston, showing comparison with last year, are as follows :

Grand total	2,924,334	2,518,305
Increase	406,029

Interest in butter remains quiet yet the total shipments for the year from May 1, 1903, to the last day of April, are as follows :

	1904	1903
Total	361,763	594,595
Decrease	232,832

A PLEASANT OCCURRENCE.

A VERY pleasant event occurred on Saturday, April 30, in the sample rooms of Balfour & Company, Hamilton, when Mr. St. Clair Balfour, on behalf of the employes, presented Mr. James A. Henderson with a very handsome cabinet of silver. Mr. Henderson has severed his connection with Balfour & Company to become a partner in the brokerage firm of J. W. Bickle & Greening, Hamilton. He has been a valued employe of Balfour & Company ever since he was a boy, and latterly travelled on their Northwest and British Columbia route. Mr. Henderson will be succeeded by St. Clair Balfour Jr.

Another presentation was made to Mr. Arthur Bell, the firm's shipper for the past ten years, who has severed his connection with Balfour & Company to start in business on his own account in Hamilton. Mr. Bell was presented with two antique chairs to show the good will and appreciation of the firm and employes.

DEATH OF JAMES MASSIE.

ON May 1 occurred the death of Mr. James Massie, Toronto, registrar of deeds for East and West York, and at one time a large wholesale grocer in Guelph, Ont.

Mr. Massie was born in Lumphanan, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in 1833, and came to Canada when 19 years of age, settling in Guelph, where he established a wholesale grocery business. For two years he was mayor of Guelph, and in 1876 was elected by acclamation to the Ontario Legislature as Liberal member for South Wellington. At the end of his term he was appointed registrar for the county of Wellington. In 1880 he accepted the position of warden of the Central Prison, which position he held until 1896. In that year he became registrar of deeds for East and West York.

Mr. Massie was very prominent in connection with local charities, where his work will be greatly missed.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. A. H. Lawson, for thirteen years associated with John Sloan & Company, wholesale grocers, Toronto, has accepted an offer to go on the road for T. Kinnear & Company, of the same city. That Mr. Lawson, by dint of long and varied experience in the wholesale grocery trade and sterling business ability, has become indispensable, is proved by his advancement to his new position of responsibility. Mr. Lawson began his rounds Monday, May 2, his particular territory being Eastern Ontario.

Mr. Thos. Upton, president of Thos. Upton & Co., Hamilton, sailed for England May 2nd, per S. S. Tunisian, from Halifax. He will be away about two months and is combining business with pleasure.

Mr. Geo. Ballantyne has withdrawn from the managership of the Stratford Wholesale Grocery Company, Stratford.

Mr. John Hopkins, for almost forty years one of the most active and enterprising men in the business community of St. John, N. B., is dead. Mr. Hopkins began business in 1867, and the establishment he founded is to-day being carried on by his sons.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

THERE was even more than the usual amount of moving on the first of the month. This year there have been changes among the wholesale grocers. Four of our larger houses are changing their quarters, in two cases going to much larger premises. This is a good sign.

In former years the Winter was not a time when many made deposits in the savings banks, but this is changed since the Winter port business opened. A very large amount is now paid out largely for labor in this connection, and more than one would perhaps expect finds it way to the savings banks.

The molasses war is still a matter of interest. It is now at what might almost be called an acute stage. In the early part of the year our local importers received a cargo of Porto Rico molasses and advertised it as new. Those who oppose them said the statement was not true. Now when these are offering new goods our local importers, who have since received three direct cargoes, are found saying through the local press that this molasses which is offered by their opponents is not straight Porto Rico, but has been doctored. This molasses did not come to St. John direct. It is a fight between one St. John house and an American concern with whom the other members of the trade seem to stand in.

It is with the deepest regret that The Grocer reports the death of Mr. C. H. Dearborn, of the firm of Dearborn & Co. For some years Mr. Dearborn has not been actively engaged in the business, his son Mr. Fred. Dearborn having full management.

Oil.

In burning oil the price remains unchanged and business is but fairly active. Lubricating oils continue to have much attention and paint oils show large business. Linseeds are still very low. Turpentine is high. Fish oil is in light supply.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse sale prices are unchanged, except that owing to less frequent receipts more orders have to be filled ex store rather than ex steamer, which always adds to the cost. Liverpool factory filled is rather light stock. Canadian fine is being quite freely received, this being the season of demand owing to the opening of the dairies.

Canned Goods.

The outcome of the coming season will be watched with interest for, while the Consolidated have put forth every effort to get more of our dealers in line and with, it is said, considerable success, some large buyers are still outside. It looks as if there would be more goods packed outside the Consolidated this year than last, which will likely mean competition. Present prices show little change. Corn is the firm line. Fruits are not a large stock. Salmon is firmly held. Oysters are very firm and tending higher. In local lines, clams and scollops are being packed.

Green Fruits.

Business is active. For apples, season is late. Bananas are not a large supply. Oranges, while firmer, show little change but sales are large. Lemons are still low. More strawberries are being received, but sales are still light. In rhubarb, the California is not popular, eastern stock being preferred. Pineapples are not large sellers here. Tomatoes are more freely offered.

Dried Fruits.

Business is somewhat quiet. In raisins the market is easy and lower values are likely to rule. Prunes have a fair sale, and prices are still low. In Oregon prunes large sizes are offered. Small prunes are still low though reported scarce. Currants and evaporated apples are firmer. In onions prices are steady. There is quite a large stock of Bermudas offered. Peanuts hold at full prices.

Sugar.

There have been two small advances this week in standard granulated. The first advance did not affect the second grade in bags. There is quite considerable foreign sugar here and to arrive. The market is very firm.

Molasses.

The situation is unsatisfactory. One large importing house has a large stock of new Porto Rico here. It is the only lot arriving direct this season. This house is holding its price firm while the molasses received by the other jobbers through the American company represented here is offered freely under their figures. Some nice Barbadoes is held and price is low.

Fish.

There are now quite large receipts of gaspereaux and good prices are obtained, there being a large demand for bait. Other fresh fish are in but fair supply. Lobsters are high. In dry cod and pollock the supply is light and full prices rule. Smoked and pickled herring are scarce and high.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

In flour prices are unchanged. There is a fair demand for feed, which is rather more freely offered. Cornmeal is not as firm, while oats are quite low. Oatmeal is high. There is much more difference in the relative price of oats and oatmeal than formerly. Package oats are largely sold. Beans are dull. Barley and peas are a light stock. Seeds are moving quite freely, but the season is late.

EXPORTS OF JAPAN TEAS.

The following statistics of exportations of tea from Japan to America for the season of 1903-4 up to March 31, 1904, have been supplied by C. M. Bernard, tea importer, of Chicago:

	Lbs.
To New York	15,183,552
" Chicago	18,321,469
" San Francisco	5,759,213
" Canada	5,696,410
Total	44,960,644

The total increase over the exportations of 1902-3 was 5,610,186 lbs., that to Canada being 1,426,118 lbs. in excess of last year.

CONFECTIONERY

A New Confection.

A. J. Stewart, Limited, manufacturers of confectionery, Toronto, are making a line of Swiss milk chocolate creams. The makers claim for this line that it has all the virtues of the finest imported Swiss milk chocolate, possessing in addition a delicious flavored cream centre. These goods are meeting with a ready sale, and for grocers looking for strictly high-grade confectionery will prove eminently satisfactory. This firm are also putting out fruit and floral tablets and assorted butter cups in ½ lb. glass jars—a package admirably adapted for Summer trade. Grocers in particular should appreciate this package, which can be shipped with groceries to Summer cottages and camps, ensuring the customer fresh goods delivered in perfect condition.

SPICES THREATENED.

It is generally believed in the grocery trade that spices will be seriously affected by the Russo-Japanese war owing to the fact that the regular commercial steamers will be pressed into service as transports for war purposes instead of carrying merchandise for consumers.

BOUGHT NEW FACTORY.

WIPED out in the recent conflagration, in which they lost their entire stock and machinery, E. W. Gillett Company, Toronto, have lost no time in securing more suitable premises in which to carry on their business. The company on Friday last closed a deal for the purchase of the fine substantial factory of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., built about two years ago, which stands on a lot at the corner of King and Duncan streets, with a frontage of 110 feet on King street and a depth of 186 feet on Duncan street. The building could not have been better adapted for the use of the Gillett Company had it been built under their own supervision. According to the terms of the agreement it is understood they will not take possession for a few months, thus giving the present tenants time to locate in a new factory, which it is understood they propose building in another part of Toronto. In the meantime, the Gillett Company have two temporary factories in full running order and are working day and night to fill orders which are pouring in on them. They are, however, able to keep the trade fairly well supplied with Royal Yeast and the other articles they manufacture, and thus tide over what looked to be a very serious crisis in their history.

SALADA TEA COMPANY'S EXHIBIT AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. P. C. Larkin, president of the Salada Ceylon Tea Company, is in St. Louis, completing arrangements for the installation of a tea exhibit in the Ceylon and Agricultural Buildings at the World's Fair. In an interview with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Mr. Larkin states that his company will have one of the largest tea exhibits at the fair, costing over $200,000. Mr. Larkin will remain in St. Louis for several days.

PROMPT PAYMENT.

The Liverpool & London & Globe Insurance Company have already settled and paid several of their losses and they are pursuing the same practice as they have been accustomed to in similar large conflagrations, notably at Chicago and Baltimore, viz., paying all claims without discount immediately the loss is adjusted and the papers filed. Messrs. Jos. B. Reed & Sons are the Toronto general agents of this company.

AN ENTERPRISING COMPANY.

One of the representative concerns in the city of Montreal is the Gould Cold Storage Company. Their annual meeting, held last week, showed a very prosperous outlook. Their former success has been maintained and a substantial increase has taken place all around. The capable directorate were all re-elected, including J. B. Clearihue, president; John B. Dillon, vice-president; directors, W. Clark, R. Hersey, and O. M. Gould.

GREEN FRUITS

The Navel Orange.

FEW know the origin of the navel orange. Some think it is made by inserting an instrument in the orange and removing the seed, which causes the protuberance on the blossom end from which the fruit takes it name, but this is erroneous.

In the Summer of 1872 the agricultural department at Washington received a report from the consul at Bahia, Brazil, that a curious seedless orange had been found growing in the interior of that country. It was stated that it was of exceptional quality and a very prolific bearer. The consul was directed to procure cuttings and young trees, which was done, and these specimens were sent to Washington. They were distributed by the department to all orange growing districts. Some went to Texas, some to Louisiana, and some to Alabama, some to Florida and two cuttings were sent to Dr. Tibbits at Riverside, Cal.

The buds were sent on seedling trees and when they came to bearing the fruit was what is now termed the Washington navel orange. Only in California were growers successful. Trees are not good bearers, nor do they produce good fruit in other sections. For that reason they have not been grown extensively outside California. The Riverside trees produced such excellent oranges, tht they were soon being propagated extensively, and now practically all of Southern California is relying upon them for its oranges. Why navels do better in California than elsewhere is probably the climate. The soil and other conditions could be reproduced elsewhere, but climate is a consideration which man cannot govern.

The fruit being seedless, the trees are propagated by budding, which consists in grafting the buds of the navel upon seedling branches. When this bud grows the rest of the old tree is cut away and the branch from the bud forms a young tree.

The original two trees are still standing at Riverside and bearing small quantities of fruit. They have never been allowed to bear very liberally, because all of the wood grown has been wanted for buds to graft on seedling trees elsewhere. Many large orchards in Southern California have been reproduced from these two trees. The Washington navel is a regular bearer, never having any off years. Under proper conditions of soil, water, fertilization and cultivation the trees bear a liberal crop each year.

The name is derived from the fact that the trees were taken from Washington to California, and the term navel is used because of the navel like protuberance on the blossom end. They should have been called seedless oranges.—New England Grocer.

Apples in Tasmania.

"TASMANIA is bounding ahead of Canada at a great pace in her apple trade," says the Montreal Herald. "There is, of course, no rivalry between the Canadian and Tasmanian producer, for Tasmanian apples exported to England reach their destination at a time when no Canadian fruit is on the market. Canadians may, therefore, wish Tasmanians all success in the strenuous efforts they are making to enlarge their British market.

"By securing lower freight shipments Tasmanian apple growers hope to supply British markets with choice Tasmanian apples from April right away to October. The freight at one time was no less than 5s. per case, but it is now as low as 3s; and Tasmania looks forward to the time when, instead of sending a few hundred thousand cases annually to British markets, her export will be increased to a million or more.

"As regards the Canadian apple trade, it is interesting to note that Manchester is bestirring herself to get some share of what is now so profitable a business at Liverpool. Manchester is, of course, the centre of an immense population and the canal now carries trans-Atlantic steamers right into the midst of something like 5,000,000 of people who should be large apple consumers. At the present moment 19,000 barrels of Canadian apples are on their way to Manchester and will come up the ship canal. Of course, like all enterprises, the Canadian fruit trade will require time and some degree of patience for its development. The Manchester Guardian, generally a sound authority, declares, however, that it is bound to be successful with so large a market close to the Manchester docks."

B. C. Fruit in the Northwest.

ONE way by which British Columbia will benefit directly through the great process of settlement going on in the Northwest and Manitoba is in supplying the summer fruit demand in the Territories. As it is now, a great deal of Oregon and California fruit finds its way into the Northwest.

The prairies are not suitable for the growing of fruit; the tillers of the soil there content themselves largely with grain-raising, but they demand fruit in its season. The logical point from which fruit should be shipped into the Northwest is British Columbia, and there is every reason to believe that before very long the great market east of the mountains will be fully taken advantage of by British Columbia, which nature has so generously endowed with conditions essential to the proper and profitable carrying out of horticultural effort.

Tomato Vine as Tall as a Tree.

The skyscraper stage has been reached in the development of the tomato in Southern California, says the Los Angeles Times. One of the latest prodigies in that succulent vegetable is a group of three thirty-foot vines that have borne fruit at all seasons and under all sorts of climatic conditions.

It is necessary to use an eighteen-foot ladder to harvest the tomatoes, for the vines have covered a trellis twenty feet in height, where they have tangled themselves into a thick, compact mass of greenery. The seeds of these wonderful plants were sown last May and have been growing and bearing fruit ever since; in fact, the vines are always filled with bloom and both green and ripe fruit.

Fallawater Apples for Export.

THE inspector of the Department of Agriculture, at Glasgow, Scotland, writes W. A. MacKinnon, chief of the Fruit Division, Ottawa, with reference to Fallawater apples for export as follows:

"This variety is not esteemed generally by the trade here and is usually bought only by certain customers for a special purpose, viz., for baking. It is used by the better class of bakers where its appearance and size are in favor, although as an eating apple it is better thought of. It is also a good carrier. Limited quantities of XXX Fallawaters always do well, but it would be a mistake to ship too many of this variety. It is always retailed here by the pound."

To Repair the Ravages of Mice.

WITH reference to the serious damage done Canadian fruit trees by mice during the past Winter, the Fruit Division, Ottawa, offer the following suggestions:

If the tree girdled by mice is only one or two years old, it will be better to replant. If older "bridging" the wound by means of scions of last year's growth may be resorted to. These should be about three inches longer than the width of the girdled section and the ends should be cut to a wedge shape. Then with a sharp, narrow chisel or other similar tool, slanting incisions should be made into the new wood above and below the wound, beginning near the edge of the bark, extending about an inch in length and penetrating but little into the wood. The scions should fit nicely into these incisions and be held in place by their own elasticity. Each end should then be covered with a small piece of grafting wax. Three or four scions will be sufficient for a tree less than six inches in diameter.

If the rough outer bark has been removed all around the tree, but some of the new wood or cambium layer still remains fresh, the tree may often be saved by keeping the new wood moist till growth begins. This can be done by covering the wound with grafting wax or a mixture of clay and cow manure, equal parts. If the wound is low, a heap of earth will often be sufficient.

U. S. Peach Trees Damaged.

Reports from along the Hudson and Connecticut say the peach trees have suffered severely from the hard Winter. In a considerable percentage of orchards the trees are killed outright, and in many others the prospect of recovery of the injured trees is slight. Pears suffered also, and some orchards have been killed entirely.

Ireland Wants Apples.

In a recent report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, P. B. Ball, agent of that department at Birmingham, Eng., mentions an inquiry from a firm in Ireland which is prepared to engage with shippers of apples for the coming season. Further information may be had on application to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, mentioning the report of the agent at Birmingham, Inquiry No. 35.

J. A. McGUANE, U.S., MG'R OF SALADA TEA CO.

The Grocer takes particular pleasure in publishing in this week's issue a portrait of J. A. McGuane, the American manager for the Salada Tea Company. Mr. McGuane is a young man, in the early thirties, whose commercial career has been almost wholly linked with that of the president of the Salada Tea Company, P. C. Larkin, and whose present position is a testimony of the high value placed upon keen business acumen and practical experience by a modern business enterprise.

J. A. McGuane, U.S. Manager of Salada Tea Co.

ARSENIC IN CREAM OF TARTAR.

A RECENT report regarding arsenic having been found in cream of tartar, which caused considerable flurry in the Montreal grocery market and serious agitation abroad, has taken on a new phase. The following article from the last issue of the London Grocer speaks for itself :

"Recent prosecutions under the Sale of Foods and Drugs Act in respect of the sale of cream of tartar containing lead or arsenic have had the effect of reducing the trade practically to the vanishing point, as manufacturers and their importing agents decline to give the wholesale houses a guarantee of purity, and the dealers, in turn, pending a settlement of the matter, are not in a position to do more than advise retailers to withdraw the article from sale for the present. Several conferences between the importing brokers (as representing the manufacturers in France and Spain) and the wholesale dealers have recently been held, but the former have expressed themselves as unable to explain the presence of arsenic in the article. Cream of tartar contains several constituents, and as London wholesalers are unable to elicit in which of these arsenic may be present, or, indeed, to secure any explanation of the cause of the presence of so obviously dangerous a substance, and being unable to obtain cream of tartar of sufficient purity, they decline for the present to execute orders.

"Every effort is being made by the dealers to induce the manufacturers to accept the responsibility which properly should rest upon their shoulders, but little success has so far been attained. Brokers express the opinion that they will be doing sufficient if they give analysts' certificates of the purity of the article; but in so far as supplies already distributed are concerned this proposition is wholly inadequate, since analysts' certificates six months old would probably describe cream of tartar as pure, although it contained a small proportion of arsenic, the analyses for arsenic having only recently been made. It would appear that the dealers are 'twixt devil and deep sea; since it is reported that almost every sample that has been examined for arsenic of late, from all parts of the country, has been found to contain the poison, though in more of less infinitesimal quantities. It will therefore be seen that the position is serious from the wholesalers' point of view, since if they give warranties to retailers they are running the risk of prosecution and heavy penalties, without any prospect of recompense from the real culprit.

"In the circumstances, the wholesalers' only possible course appears to be to follow the advice they have offered to the retailers, and withdraw the article from the market pending a satisfactory settlement. It is well to bear in mind that the dealers' agitation against the presence of lead in cream of tartar led to a great improvement in this direction, and if the agitation be continued on the present lines, it is certain that sooner or later manufacturers will take precautions either to free the article from the presence of arsenic entirely, or to reduce it below the limit of the 100th part of a grain per pound, which was the maximum recommended for articles of this class by the Royal Commission on Arsenic in Food."

ST. JOHN GROCER DEAD.

C. H. Dearborn, of the firm of Dearborn & Co., wholesale grocers, St. John, N. B., is dead. Mr. Dearborn began business in St. John away back in 1868, when Flint, Dearborn & Co.'s spice mills were established, a business which has been successfully developed until at the present time it extends far beyond the Province of New Brunswick. Mr. Dearborn leaves one son, F. R. Dearborn, who is a partner in the firm.

Grading of Grain.

THE grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade has temporarily postponed the sending of a deputation to Ottawa to discuss with Sir Richard Cartwright the proposed amendments to the Grain Inspection Act.

The Toronto men held a meeting in the Board of Trade May 2, at which C. B. Watts presented the report of the committee which had in charge the matter. Mr. Watts said that the committee had made such amendments to the existing description of grain as would bring it up-to-date and make it conform, as far as Ontario conditions would admit, to the grading of the New York Produce Exchange. The committee had not touched Manitoba wheat, because the millers and exporters seemed satisfied with existing grades.

The grading for wheat which the Toronto men will recommend will include the description plump in all the No. 1 and No. 2 grades. No. 3 goose wheat, which under the present description must weigh only 55 pounds, was increased to 57 pounds. No. 1 mixed wheat, which formerly was of 60-pound weight to the bushel, was reduced to 59 pounds.

In oats the committee agreed that weights be recommended as follows: White—No. 1, 34 pounds; No. 2, 33 pounds; No. 3, 31 pounds; No. 4 oats, 28 pounds. Mixed oats—No. 1, 34 pounds; No. 2, 33 pounds; No. 3, 31 pounds; No. 4, 28 pounds. Rye weights were recommended as follows: No. 1, 57 pounds; No. 2, 56 pounds; No. 3, 54 pounds. In barley, weights were inserted and the proviso made in No. 1 that it must be well cleaned. The weights are as follows: No. 1, 49 pounds; No. 2, 48 pounds; No. 3, extra, 47 pounds; No. 3, 45 pounds; No. 4, less than 45 pounds. In peas, the proviso was made that peas graded white may contain a slight admixture of grey and green peas. They were largely an export commodity.

A general clause was adopted recommending that the inspectors issue a certificate upon all condemned or rejected wheat, with notation, describing the condition of the grain accurately.

Milling Industry in the West.

"CANADIAN mills in the Northwest and the Rainy River country, wherever there is power, are increasing their capacity faster than American mills are increasing their own output," says a prominent western railway official. The prospects point to the development of a tremendous milling industry north of the boundary line, which must sooner or later give Canadian railways a flour tonnage in Canadian flour that will compare very favorably with the tonnage of American roads out of Minneapolis.

An exchange in prognosticating on the probable location of a great western milling centre says that when the C. P. R., the C. N. R., and the G. T. P. are fully engaged in delivering wheat at Thunder Bay for transfer to steamers, a great number of elevators will be required, all of which must be operated by electric energy. There is no reason why, with cheap power available at the Kaministiqua River, the flourishing towns of Fort William and Port Arthur should not become a great milling centre, not even second to Minneapolis, Minn.

A Man of Force.

A. N. Reay, Canadian manager of the Force Food Company, has taken offices at 27½ Front street east, Toronto, from where all the sales business of the Force Food Company in Canada will be done. The Force for the Canadian trade is all manufactured at the Hamilton mills, and Mr. Reay told a representative of The Grocer who called on him last week that business so far this season had been far beyond anticipations, and that the prospects were very bright. "April," he said, "had been their biggest month so far in Canada."

G. T. R. Elevator at Montreal.

The new grain elevator now in process of construction for the G. T. R. at Montreal, when completed will have a capacity of 1,060,000 bushels. The power capacity of the elevator will also be very large as compared with anything in that section of the country. There will be ten legs, each with a capacity of 10,000 bushels, and one marine leg; thus canal craft, steamships and cars can be unloaded or loaded at one and the same time.

The Decline in Flour.

A LARGE flour manufacturer in Montreal when asked about the decline in the price of flour stated that the best markets could not sell flour at cut-throat prices. His firm, which had an enormous trade, knew of the workings of certain flour men to shade the price of flour both in straight rollers and patents. Buyers seemed to think that flour in patents for instance should be at least ten cents lower in certain grades such as the $4.60. He argued further that to sell flour at any such prices as certain western millers were offering was ridiculous and below cost. Flour though on the decline today would go up and buyers might find it very profitable to secure large quantities now.

Winter Wheat for Alberta.

THE success that has attended the growing of Winter wheat out from the foothills, but still within the area of moderate rainfall, is resulting in considerable activity in settlement and colonization in the vicinity of Lethbridge. Experiments with Fall wheat by E. E. Thompson, the turkey red being the variety that proved most suitable and prolific, has led to a sale of almost all the lands in that section to Illinois colonists. The same kind of soil, and identical character as to moisture, are leading to the buying and actual cultivation of the lands further north. It is an easy guess that the land south of Calgary to the boundary will attract much denser settlement than the Edmonton country has in the past three years. The land is equally as good, is free from scrub, the season is quicker, and the climate a rather strong contrast to the climate of the north country. The soil is a black loam with clay subsoil, and carries a very heavy top of grass. The settlement of this country will be depriving the rancher of the best feeding ground in the country, but will greatly increase the wealth and production of the district.

Canada's Grain Exhibit at St. Louis.

CANADA'S wonderful grain exhibit at the World's Fair is a revelation, says a St. Louis correspondent, to anyone who may have had an idea that the great north country is one of cold and ice always.

Canada has a space of 10,000 square feet in the exposition's mammoth Palace of Agriculture—a structure that covers an area of twenty-three acres and contains all that is edible from all lands. A replica of a historic structure forms the centrepiece of this notable exhibit. One of the handsomest of the public buildings in the Dominion is the Library of Parliament at Ottawa. The dome of this building reproduced on a smaller scale, is one of the most commanding objects in the big building. It is an octagon, thirty-four feet across, and its top extends sixty feet upwards and brushes the rafters of the Agricultural Palace. Its frame is of pine, and the surface that shows is covered with glowing red burlap. Artistically fastened to this background are the grains and grasses of Canada, more than 3,000 specimens being shown in charming array. Great buttresses are built up of millet, a forage plant; brome grass, a fodder crop grown extensively in Western Canada and which appears shortly after the snow leaves the ground; wheat, oats, clover, blue grass and hundreds of other choice specimens. Corn, used so much in the embellishment of the exhibits of the states, finds no place in this display. The eight arches in the octagon afford a conspicuous place for oil paintings, typifying the live stock industry of the great country to the north. The pictures are works of art, and their great size makes the scenes very lifelike. The windows under the pointed arches are filled with bottles of thrashed grain.

Large Export Shipment.

The Robert Greig Company, Toronto, are making a large shipment of breakfast foods from their White Swan Mills to the West Coast of Africa, and another shipment to London, England.

Cereal Notes.

The Frontenac Cereal Company, Kingston, are sampling Toronto with their "Orange Meat." They are also giving pure food demonstrations at 197 Sparks street, Ottawa.

Latest reports concerning Ontario's wheat and clover crop vary somewhat, although on the whole they are more favorable than those of last week. In most districts Fall grain seems to have survived the rigorous Winter very well, and with good weather from now out a good average crop is expected.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Cigarmakers at Odds.

IT turns out that the demand of the Hamilton cigarmakers for an increase of wages has not been sanctioned by the International Cigarmakers' Union. The matter was referred to the international organization, and without waiting for a reply the local union made known their demands to the manufacturers. On April 28 it was reported that the Executive Committee of the International Cigarmakers' Union had declined to sanction the demand.

The Hamilton Times comments as follows on the situation :

"At the head offices of the Tuckett Company in this city it is believed that the trouble will not be of long duration. The Tucketts have long been considered the best friends the International Union has had among the large cigar manufacturing firms. Other big Canadian firms have fought the union, but the Tucketts helped the union in its troubles in London and Montreal, besides having always been considered one of the strongest union shops in Hamilton. The company, therefore, believes that the International will not sanction a fight, particularly when it can be shown that the increase asked for simply cannot be paid.

"The company, however, is well prepared for a long fight. It has on hand five and a half million Marguerite cigars and, as its sales amount to a million a month, it has stock ahead for all Summer, and up to about the beginning of November.

"Vice-President H. B. Witton stated this morning that the company would not attempt to run a non-union shop — it prefers to maintain its reputation as a fair shop."

Overproduction of Tobacco.

A COMPLAINT has reached the tobacco trade from American growers in the Eastern and Southern States, that they are getting small results from last year's crop, although it was a large one. Two explanations have been given by men in the trade. A leaf tobacco dealer says :

"The trouble lies in over-production. The crop in 1903 amounted to 815,972,425 pounds. The exports amounted to 316,325,911 pounds. Domestic tobacco manufacturers absorbed 263,376,555 pounds. There is a surplus of more than one-fourth of the entire crop. The planters are crying out against the tobacco combine as the cause of their trouble, but if they produced less tobacco they would get higher prices."

Another view of the situation is taken by a prominent cigar manufacturer :

"Because of the cold weather last Summer the tobacco grown then was of poor quality. That is the real reason the planters cannot get as much money for the product as usual. One house bought sufficient good tobacco the year before so that they can get along without the 1903 crop, but some concerns have had to use it. Tobacco is usually kept two years before being manufactured into cigars. Those factories that use the 1903 crop next year will turn out inferior cigars."

Tax on Cigarette Selling.

An Owen Sound tobacconist has opened an interesting argument. Are cigarettes a necessity or a luxury? He is protesting at Osgoode Hall against the right of the Owen Sound Council to impose a $250 license fee on the sale of cigarettes. His lawyer is urging before Justice McMahon that the by-law is illegal, being in restraint of trade and aiding in constituting a monopoly. Besides, Lord Roberts has testified that cigarette smokers have more endurance than non-smokers, and Queen Victoria approved of them by presenting them to her soldiers. The Government receives a large revenue from their sale, and dealers are respectable men. Now, too, those wishing cigarettes have to enter bar rooms, which are exempt from the tax.

Origin of Tobacco.

"I HAVE been favored with an Indian tradition concerning the origin of tobacco, Indian corn and wheat," said the poet laureate of all the Pascagoulas to a New Orleans man. "At some distant period two Indian youths, pursuing the pleasures of the chase, were led to a remote and unfrequented part of the forest, where, being fatigued and hungry, they sat down to repose themselves and to dress their victuals. While they were thus employed the spirit of the woods, attracted, as it is supposed, by the unusual and savory smell of the venison, approached them in the form of a beautiful female and seated herself beside them. The youths, awed by the presence of so superior a being and struck with gratitude for the condescension which she had shown them in becoming their guest, presented to her in the most respectful manner a share of their repast, which she was pleased to accept and upon which she regaled with seeming satisfaction. The repast being finished, the female spirit thanked them cordially for their attention and informed them that if they would return to the same place after the revolution of twelve moons they would find something which would recompense their kindness, disappeared from their sight. The youths watched the revolving moons, and returning at the appointed time, found a plant of Indian corn, a stalk of wheat and a flourishing plant of tobacco."

U. S. Tobacco Interests in Japan.

The American Tobacco Company have recently invaded Japan with large capital and up-to-date methods, says an Eastern exchange, and are developing a very large trade. There were shipped from Kobe, Japan, last year cigarettes valued at $681,490, against a total export of $838,293, and nearly all the balance was sent from Osaka. Some 70 per cent. of the whole was shipped to China. During 1900 the export of cigarettes to China was more than doubled, and during 1901 that of 1900 was more than tripled.

Exports From the Transvaal.

The official statement of the quantity and value of goods exported from the Transvaal for the twelve months ended December 31st last gives the total number of cigarettes exported at 2,256,650, compared with only 266,900 in the previous twelve months. Altogether 170,932 pounds of tobacco were exported from the Transvaal last year, as against 102,072 pounds in the previous year. These figures strongly encourage the belief that the South African colonies will before long be supplying a good part of the tobacco sold in the English market.

Japanese Monopoly Organizing.

The Japanese Tobacco Monopoly recently created by law, has already established an agent at Havana, for the purpose of buying Cuban tobacco.

Combine for Mexico.

It is reported that three large Mexican cigarette factories, valued at over $1,000,000, including the famous Beuno Yono factory, which in 1893 made a profit of $600,000 on a capital of $4,000,000, is to be bought by a New York syndicate whose representatives are now in Mexico.

Experiments in New South Wales.

A year ago experimental work in tobacco growing in New South Wales was placed in charge of a competent expert on agriculture. The result has proved highly satisfactory. The varieties grown have been submitted to the tobacco manufacturing companies in Sydney, who have expressed high approval of the quality.

Million Cigars on Parade.

The largest recorded consignment of any individual brand of cigars reached Winnipeg this week, when 1,000,000 of Tuckett's famous Marguerite cigars loaded on six of the Manitoba Cartage and Warehousing Company's drays, and consigned to Tees & Persse, manufacturers' agents, Winnipeg, wended its way up Main street.

Canadian Tobacco Abroad.

One of the Canadian agents in Australia writes that Canadian cut tobaccos have made their appearance in Melbourne. He points out that nearly all cut tobacco in Australia is imported in hermetically sealed tins, and that Canadian tobaccos will require to be put up in this way. Canadian tobacco men would do better to look after their own trade at home instead of attempting to capture foreign markets. English tobaccos in sealed tins are growing more and more popular in Canada.

Duty on Cigars.

A petition has been presented to the Minister of Inland Revenue, Ottawa, Ont., on behalf of 125 foreign-leaf cigar factories, asking that the excise rate of $6 a thousand on this class of cigars be cut down to $4, to enable them to compete with the men who use domestic leaf. The foreign-leaf cigar men pay ten cents a pound excise on their tobacco, in addition to the rate on their finished goods. The manufacturers of domestic cigars pay nothing on their leaf, and only $3 on their cigars.

Cigars for Personal Use.

IN answer to applications from several parties for permission to make their own cigars for personal use only, the United States Commissioner advises that while he has ruled that in a number of cases a farmer or any person may make cigars for his own personal smoking, and not for sale, without qualifying as a manufacturer of cigars or incurring liability to tax on cigars so made and consumed, there is no provision under existing law and regulations for the sale of leaf tobacco to such persons, and the only way that they can legally obtain it would be to purchase it from the farmer or grower who is unrestricted in the sale of leaf tobacco to persons other than those prescribed in the regulations.

Tobacco Notes.

Sir William McDonald, the Canadian tobacco manufacturer, has given $100,000 to McGill University in Montreal to found a students' union hall.

The Erie Tobacco Co., Windsor, report a very large increase in the sales of "Queen's Navy" chewing tobacco. It is now being handled pretty generally by the grocery trade.

WALL PAPER

THE SAMPLE BOOK.

IN the majority of stores the salesmen consider that the only way open to them to display wall paper to a customer is by means of the sample book. A small stand is kept in a convenient, well-lighted position and beside it are the sample books ready to hand. A customer states the price he wishes to go, and possibly the room for which the paper is being bought, and the salesman simply selects a sample book, throws it on the stand, and proceeds to show its contents. Seldom does it enter his head that there are better or even other ways. If that is not the use of sample books, what are they for?

As a matter of fact the sample book need, and should, seldom be called into service. It would have been far better for the trade had they never been introduced. At the present time in spite of the prevalence of this method of showing goods, the first class wall paper stores do entirely without them. It may occasionally be found expedient to bring into use the book of samples, but this occurs only when a customer demands it, on account of having a perfectly definite and settled idea what he wants, such as he will have if looking for a sample to match a paper already in use.

In nineteen cases out of twenty the rolls themselves should be shown. For this purpose a permanent rack about six feet in height and of as great a width as is convenient should be built where the light falls squarely on the front of it. The width should be great in order to allow several rolls to be shown together, in order to make a choice between them. A little trough at the back of the top will hold the roll, while four or five feet hang over the front.

After serving a few customers by showing the rolls, the salesman will be thoroughly convinced of the advantages of this method, and if he has the interests of his employer at heart, rather than a sole idea of saving himself a little work, he will never return to the sample book. No sample a foot and a half or two feet long does justice to the pattern or coloring, and the customer has little idea of how the paper will look on the wall. The appearance of a five-foot strip hanging over the rack can be readily grasped, and when another strip of the same pattern is placed beside it and matched, there is no doubt as to its beauties or defects.

By this method of showing the salesman is called upon to display many less samples, and the customer is more quickly and better satisfied. The hasty turning over of the leaves of a sample book confuses and unsettles, and far more difficulty is encountered in making a selection. The two or three previous choices are forgotten because out of sight, while with the rolls, they are placed side by side and a final selection easily made. Sales can be made from rolls that would be lost if the sample book were used, and there is no chance of the customer being disappointed when the paper is put in place.

AN ENGLISH DECORATIVE CLOTH.

A NEW decorative cloth, says an exchange, has been lately introduced in England. The canvases of coarse texture in use hitherto served well on the walls of large halls or staircases, but for spaces of a more confined area a texture of a different kind is desirable. This is met by the new crush and buckram cloths. They all have that manifestation of being a woven fabric which is not to be imitated in paper. At the same time the surface is sufficiently smooth to prevent the accumulation of dust, which is one of the drawbacks of a coarser material. An immense variety of agreeable colors is available, and the artist and decorator can, therefore, obtain any kind of ground which he may seek in order to apply stenciling or other decoration. For ceilings and places where a colored ground is unnecessary there is a white buckram. It should be noted that the colors are not dyed. Pigment colors are employed, and the cloth itself is consequently suitable for covering walls. The hanging is not difficult, and the cloths are supplied in rolls. A thicker paste than is used in papering is sufficient.

THE UNFAIR DUTY.

A CORRESPONDENT directs our attention to a grievance in the wall paper trade. He writes: "I wish to direct your attention to the uncalled for and most unfair duty of 15 cents a pound that has been placed on wall paper sample books, at least on part of them, I should properly say. The duty itself is an excellent one as regards the books sent broadcast through the country by the jobbers on the other side of the line, but I think it is very unfair that a dealer who buys from one of the manufacturers and pays 35 per cent. duty on his goods, should be charged fifteen cents a pound for three or four sample books made up from the exact patterns and designs that he imports. In the smaller towns the average dealer cannot procure the facilities for putting these books together and consequently asks the manufacturer to do it for him so that he can show his goods to better advantage. I think if the wall paper dealers sent a deputation to Ottawa and put the matter before the Government they could procure a new ruling to govern the case. Say for instance that a limited number of sample books coming with a bona fide purchase of say $40 or over and which are shown to be and sworn as being only the same designs as said purchase, that they should come in free or as wall paper with a duty of 35 per cent. This would only be just and fair and I am sure that Canadian manufacturers would not object in the least to such a ruling. I have no doubt but that all dealers will agree with me on this matter as it means a duty of five or six dollars extra on the cost of their paper at the present rating."

How long does it take the people to recognise and appreciate a good thing?

This question has caused every manufacturer some very anxious moments when first placing some new product on the market. To such we would say: It all depends on the merit of the goods in question.

Look at the sale of Postal Orders. First year, 1881, only six hundred and forty-seven thousand were sold. Second year, 1882, four and one-half millions were used.

LEES & LANGLEY'S WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE

was only placed on the market last year and our sales in the last month have been more than the combined sales of the first year.

The people soon recognise and appreciate a good thing.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

It is conceded that the Chinese and Japanese grew tea before it was cultivated in India and Ceylon, but it is not and never can be conceded that the Orientals can grow a better tea than the Britisher with science always at his elbow, and cleanliness as his habit.

Sell CEYLON Teas. If people want black tea, or if they want green tea, Ceylon Teas supply the need. The flavor and quality are better and the profits go to Britishers and the Empire.

Do Canned Vegetables, Fruits and Jams Contain Harmful Ingredients ?

THE following is an outlined report on a chemical analysis of various Ontario canned vegetables, fruits, and jams, made in the laboratories of the Provincial Board of Health, Toronto, under the supervision of Doctor J. Amyot, the chief chemist being G. G. Nasmith :

A detailed examination of the various canned vegetables, fruits and jams put up in Ontario was made for the purpose of finding out whether, as is often supposed and alleged in some quarters, poisonous metals are present, and whether adulteratives or preservatives are used in the process of manufacture. Specimens were selected indiscriminately from grocery stores, as it was thought to be the most likely means of selecting material such as is distributed over the country. A large number of tests were made, but the conclusions arrived at are not intended to be anything more than approximate.

Peas.

The canned peas examined were different brands representing four different manufacturers. Traces of copper were found in only one specimen, while four showed traces of zinc. None of the other poisons were found to be present. The zinc was probably derived from the solder of the can, although no lead was discovered. The discoloration of the can was greatest in the vicinity of the solder. Copper, which formerly was almost invariably present when peas were boiled up in large coppers, was found only once.

No adulteratives were found. Starch was used in two cases to thicken the menstrum, although the reason for the introduction of the same is not apparent since the flavoring was not improved and the peculiar pastiness was anything but pleasing to the eye. Three of the specimens contained cane sugar, five contained dextrose, and one common salt. These seemed rather to improve the flavor than otherwise. No swollen or fermented cans were found. One ingenious canner had evidently first sprouted his peas; they were sweet and tender, and it required only about three-fourths the usual number to fill the can. The result of these analyses would not seem to indicate that canned peas are in any serious way detrimental to health.

Tomatoes.

Four specimens of tomatoes from four different canners were pronounced to be sound and sweet. Traces of copper were found in all four; three showed traces of zinc. Evidently nothing but salt had been added to the contents. The juice was very acid and no tin was found, although it was expected that there would be as the cans were very bright except on the bottom. These traces of copper and zinc would not be considered harmful according to some of the leading authorities. A fresh tomato weighing 115 grams was incinerated, qut in the ash analysed not a trace of zinc or copper was found, so that these metals as found in the canned article evidently came from extraneous sources.

Corn.

Three cans of corn were examined, each representing an individual canner. Poisonous material was entirely absent except in one, which contained traces of zinc. The cans were all quite discolored and one in particular so badly rusted on the bottom that particles of metal adhered to the corn. This part, however, was not examined for metals. Tin would probably have been found in it.

Berries.

Every specimen of canned raspberries examined was of poor appearance, especially the white varieties, which had been improved by purple colored menstrum. All showed traces of zinc. They were about equal in acidity, and were all preserved with cane sugar.

Three samples of canned strawberries had an improved appearance, and looked exceedingly well, without a trace of coloring being added. The flavoring was especially good. Signs of zinc were found in three, and of tin in two. They were of about the same acidity as the raspberries and were also preserved with cane sugar. Two specimens of canned plums exhibited some traces of tin but none of zinc, and were decidedly more acid than the former. Nothing out of the way so far was found in canned fruits.

Jam.

The varieties examined were mostly of the ten-cent jar variety, made up with quantities of apple pulp or filling added. In some a mere fraction of pure fruit was found, the balance being filler, coloring, flavoring and sugar. The samples of plum and peach, however, contained fair quantities of pure fruit, as well as did certain brands of raspberries, currants and strawberries. No preservatives were found here, nor were there traces of gelatin, which is frequently used for thickening purposes. Cane sugar was used exclusively, with probably a percentage of glucose. One manufacturer used the same coloring for raspberries as for currants, varying the quantity as desired. Apparently the colors were of the aniline dye variety.

A test was also made of albumenoid, which it is claimed that one pound will produce 32 gallons of thick cream from 28 gallons of thin cream and four gallons of milk. This was found to consist entirely of cane sugar, lime, and gelatin.

It is not long since The Grocer published an article by Professor Walker, of McGill University, Montreal, on the "Scientific Preparation of Foods." In this article Professor Walker endeavored to point out the commercial value of chemistry in the manufacture of foods of all kinds, principally products of the dairy and orchard. Manufacturers are beginning to see the economic advantages which may accrue to them from knowing the exact chemical constituents of their fruit and vegetable products. An instance of this was seen some time ago in the laboratories of the Board of Health for the Province of Ontario, when a certain canner submitted several specimens of spoiled vegetables with enclosing cans badly rusted. Analysis showed that at a certain point in the process of canning fermentation had been allowed to begin, quite unknowingly, by the processer. As a result that particular brand had met with poor success on the market.

Another way in which chemistry may be of inestimable service to the canner is that by chemical combinations he is able to obtain certain products which otherwise are not available. This item is not to be overlooked since the export trade is beginning to loom up in the eyes of most Canadian manufacturers. In order to create a market for their goods abroad, these will have to be equal in quality if not superior to the foreign article of competition. Individual peculiarities of tastes have always to be catered to in this connection. Besides, the home manufacturer finds it necessary to compete in what is known as the local fancy trade with certain imported novelties. Another reason why chemistry is of assistance to the canner and jam manufacturer is that he is enabled to make a maximum amount of use of the by-products of manufacture.

The Ontario Health Department is to be congratulated upon having begun in a systematic way chemical tests of the various food products manufactured within the province. It is impossible to say what far-reaching results its development may have, but at the present this much is easy to be seen: The Government in undertaking analyses of canned vegetables, fruits, etc., has in view the health interests of all consumers of the same; indirectly it aims at placing within the reach of Canadian canners and manufacturers scientific information, the commercial value of which can hardly be overestimated.

A VISITOR FROM ROSSLAND.

MR. J. G. MOODY, representing the Rossland Fruit and Produce Co., Rossland, B.C., is visiting Toronto and other points in Eastern Canada. Mr. Moody was for some years well-known among the wholesale houses in Toronto, and he received a warm welcome from a number of his friends in the Queen City. He has been in Rossland about seven or eight years, and his visit to the east just now is principally on business.

In conversation with The Canadian Grocer he said that the business outlook in the Kootenay country was much better than it had been for some years. When asked as to why he thought so, he said: "It is principally on account of what has taken place. That is, the experiments which have been made in treating low grade ores, which appear to be turning out satisfactorily. Experiments which have been carried on by the Elmore oil process of treating ores has been so satisfactory that a plant is being put in at Le Roi No. 2 to treat fifty tons of ore per day. Then Mr. Kirby, manager of the "War Eagle" and "Centre Star," at Silica, near Rossland, is erecting a plant near the Trail smelter to treat 25 tons a day. Had not the experiment proved successful, it is scarcely likely that this plant would have been erected. It is expected that as low as $5 grade ores can be treated profitably by this new process, while in the early days of Rossland camp $15 ore was thrown upon the dump. You can easily see what this means to Rossland."

Speaking of other mining districts of that part of the country, Mr. Moody said that in Slocan district conditions were more favorable than they had been on account of the bounty which the Government now gives to the lead-silver industry.

"The people in the West always seem hopeful," remarked The Grocer.

"Yes," said Mr. Moody, with a laugh, "but they have now good reason for it. They know the stuff is there.

Mr. Moody leaves the end of this week for New York, but will again be in Toronto, possibly when returning to Rossland.

ENGLAND HAS AWAKENED.

WHEN the Britisher does act in commerce or anything else he usually does it with marked earnestness. An illustration of this is in the movement recently set on foot to have another Indian and Colonial Exhibition at the Crystal Palace next year. It is good news, too, to see that Lord Strathcona and Sir Gilbert Parker have joined the advisory board. Among other prominent men identified with the work are the Dukes of Argyll and Westminster, Sir George Clark and others. In their committee announcement these able gentlemen of England modestly state that this exposition is to prove to the world that the British Empire "can be entirely self-sustained," and further to "demonstrate that the British Empire produces all the necessaries and luxuries of life in quantities large enough to supply the wants of all its inhabitants, while their quality is at least equal to those produced in any other portion of the globe." Another notable fact is that the "Colonial Products Exhibition," which was held recently in Liverpool, in which Sir Alfred Jones and the Duke of Marlborough took a prominent part, is to have a duplicate in January next. An interesting souvenir of the last one has been received at the Montreal Board of Trade.

F. A. Labelle has been appointed curator to E. E. St. Jean & Co., grocers, Hull; the assets are advertised to be sold.

Great Britain's Meat Imports.

THE British Board of Trade returns give the gross total of fresh, frozen, canned, cured and pickled beef, mutton, pork and rabbits entering the ports of Great Britain during the first quarter of 1904 as 4,206,958 cwts., an increase of 94,169 cwts. over the corresponding period of 1903. The money value of these imports is tabulated at £9,088,961, a decrease of $377,544. The United States are credited with live stock for food to the number of 112,235, as against 65,581 during the first quarter of 1903, the increase being attributed to the open ports of Boston and Portland and the lower prices paid at western markets. Canada sent over from Halifax and St. John 19,324, an increase of 634. Sheep from the United States total 104,277, being more than double the number of last year. Canada sent 14,233, an increase of 2,115. It is expected that at the end of the second quarter the United States increase will not be so manifest. The United States, Argentina and Australasia all show an increase in beef, while other countries show a phenomenal decline from 46,277 cwts. to 8,339 cwts. The most likely cause for this change would be Russia needing all her own beef. Holland still leads in the volume of fresh pork, amounting to 159,460 cwts., an increase of 16,400 cwts. United States follows with 43,633, a decrease of 12,000 cwts. Belgium has dropped from 20,069 to 12,762 cwts. Bacon is furnished upon the British table from the United States to the extent of 870,000 cwts., an increase of 92,500 cwts. Denmark comes next in order with 389,249 cwts., an increase of 30,000 cwts. Canada sent 140,349 cwts., an increase of 9,000 cwts.; other countries provided 16,917 cwts., an increase of 1,075 cwts. Ham is obtained only from the United States and Canada. The former leads with 358,000 cwts., an increase of 13,500 cwts. Canada contributed 17,775 cwts., a decrease of 350 cwts.

New Cattle Firm.

A partnership has just been completed between T. Bater & Co., cattle importers of Liverpool, Eng., and A. J. McLean, cattle exporter, of Winnipeg. The new firm will be known as Bater & McLean. It is expected that a very large export trade in western cattle will be done this season. Heretofore T. Bater & Co. have been represented in the west by H. A. Mullins, but for the future G. T. Bater will have charge of the Winnipeg office and A. J. McLean will look after the buying interests of the firm in the west.

Poland Will Export Bacon.

Poland is about to enter into competition with Canadian and other bacons. A bacon-curing factory will be established in Warsaw, whence the freight to London, Eng., is only three and sixpence per ton, or eighty-four cents.

Care of Refrigerator.

THE Dairy Division, Ottawa, recommends that every Spring before a creamery refrigerator is used, the whole interior should be gone over with some kind of disinfectant to destroy the germs and spores of mould that may be there. A solution of bi-chloride of mercury (corrosive sublimate) in the proportion of one part to 1,000 parts of water, is suggested. This is a very deadly poison, but one of the most effective fungicides known. The solution is safe to use so far as touching the hands is concerned. All of the Government cool curing rooms were disinfected with this solution last year, and it was found very effective. The use of a solution of this kind or a solution of formalin in refrigerators in the Spring will be helpful in keeping them pure and sweet during the Summer.

Shortage in Lima Beans.

THE New York Journal of Commerce comments on the Lima bean situation as follows:

After deducting the quantity required for seeding purposes there remain on the Pacific coast but 120,000 bags. The market is strong for three reasons: First, a year ago to-day there were over 250,000 bags on hand in California and the season was accounted an early one, as the April rains were sufficient to produce a crop. This year the season is late and the rainfall far short of what it was to the same time in 1903.

In the second place nearly 80 per cent. of the remaining stock is in the hands of less than six people, who believe in it, knowing the season to be at least three weeks late and recognizing the fact that October shipment will be impossible on a large part of the crop. It is not believed that there is a sufficient quantity of beans on the coast to supply the demand between now and the new crop. The third reason for the strength of the market is that considering the amount of rainfall to the present time the best authorities agree that if the same acreage is put into limas the crop cannot equal two-thirds of that of last year.

This would create an actual shortage, based on the known consumption of the 1903 crop and the carry-over from 1902, which combined amounted to 400,000 bags.

Cheese Not Ripe.

A report from P. Ball, Canadian agent in Manchester, to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, states that there are complaints about the quality of Canadian cheese. The probability is that it has been rushed on to the market before it has been ripened. There is a good demand for Canadian bacon in England, which will increase if the quality is maintained.

Egg-Yoke Butter Coloring.

An egg-yoke butter coloring is the latest substitute offered to butter-makers for coal tar and analine dye butter colorings. The yolk of eggs, it is claimed, has been used as butter coloring by European buttermakers for some time. It is claimed that the results are entirely satisfactory, the yellow animal fat of the yolk producing a fine color with no injurious effects.

Bound to Bar American Meats.

By a recent ruling of the French customs administration American salted meats can only be admitted into France by payment of the maximum duty, even if they have been repacked and prepared for the French market in England, Germany, or other European country.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision market is somewhat more satisfactory, a fair trade being reported. Navigation has advanced considerably during the past week and more openings are thus provided. Dressed hogs are out of the market, and quotations on them have been discontinued. The demand for fresh meat has been fairly good. There is always a ready sale at this time of the year for hind quarters, and accordingly prices have advanced from 25 to 50c. Butter—Wholesale and commission houses are literally packed with baskets, barrels, boxes and tubs of butter. Supplies have been coming forward in such quantities that a large enough market for butter is difficult to obtain. The result is prices have dropped to a rock bottom level, and no one has satisfaction save the consumer. The prices quoted on creamery are perhaps a trifle high, but with some exceptions are the principal figures quoted. Dairy rolls have eased from 1 to 2c. We quote the following prices:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 17	0 18
" solids, fresh	0 16	0 17
Dairy rolls, large	0 11	0 13
" prints	0 13	0 14
" in tubs	0 11	0 12

Cheese—The market both here and in England is extremely poor. The level of prices has dropped to a marked extent since last week; the difference from last year at this time is fully 4 to 5c. New cheese is showing up in larger quantities and stocks of old are too large to allow a fair market for the new. Cheese is by long odds the worst line in the provision market at present, and immediate prospects of an improvement are not bright. We quote as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large, old	....	0 09½
" new fodder	0 08	0 08½
" twins	0 08½	0 08½

Montreal and Quebec.

Provisions—Increased receipts were noticeable in the provision market yesterday, which included 315 packages of tinned meats, 92 boxes of ham and bacon, and 250 packages of lard. The hog situation is unchanged. Prices were steady in spite of the decline of 10c reported from Toronto. With a good demand sales were made at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c a lb. Prices remain unchanged for dressed hogs. Smoked meats have increased in demand owing to the fine weather, and there has been an improvement in the demand for lard. Pork seems to be moving slowly. From the Old Country Canadian bacon is reported to be somewhat stiffer in price. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00

Butter—Butter is still tame and featureless, and a weakness characterizes the market. At the wharf yesterday as many as 200 packages sold at 15c. Some exporters made the statement that they could buy reasonably large lots at 14c. The prices ruling, however, were 15 to 15 1-2c. We quote:

Fancy creamery	0 15½	0 16
Summer goods	0 16	0 17
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16
Finest Fall made	....	0 19
" fresh prints	0 18	0 19

Cheese—A weaker feeling seems to come over cheese every day. At the wharf yesterday 6 1-4c was paid for 150 boxes, which is exactly three-quarters of a cent decline from the same day a week ago. For Ontario spot prices were quoted at 7 to 7 1-4c, and Quebec 6 1-2c to 6 3-4c. From England gloomy reports keep coming in and heavy losses are expected amongst the cheese men, both here and in the Old Country.

Butter and Cheese Exports—Most of the local dealers in butter and cheese feel that the less said about the situation the better. The situation is weak, with a continual decline from day to day. The following are the shipments of cheese from Portland and St. John for the week ending May 6th, 1904. and for New York for the last week in April:

	Portland. Boxes.	St. John. Boxes.	New York. Boxes.
1904	5,317	17,153	11 595
Same week last year	5,926	50	9,444

There were no shipments at all of Canadian cheese for the past week by rail to Boston and New York.

The total shipments of cheese for the year, from the opening of navigation, 1903, to date, show a decided increase, to the extent of 421,386 boxes, the actual figures for the two years being as follows:

1904.	1903.
2,946.804	2,525,418

The butter shipments, on the contrary, show a falling off of 232,257 packages, the figures being:

1904.	1903.

Requirements of Egg Market.

THERE is a growing preference in the home markets for brown shelled eggs. The shells of the eggs should be wiped clean if necessary, and the eggs graded in size. For shipment to the merchant they should be packed in cases holding twelve or thirty dozen each. Eggs to be palatable should be eaten in a strictly fresh condition; therefore they should reach the consumer without unnecessary delay. This requires (1) that the eggs be collected regularly every day and stored in a cool room (temperature 40 to 50 degrees F.), until a sufficient number are on hand to deliver to a dealer; (2) that the dealer forward the eggs to the merchant at least once a week, and (3) that the merchant protect the eggs from deterioration while in his possession.

Provision Notes.

The Canning Co., at Stratford, Ont., are making extensive alterations and improvements in their plant for the coming season.

SUGAR BY-LAW DEFEATED.

On May 5 the ratepayers of Peterboro defeated the by-law to guarantee the bonds of the Peterboro' Sugar Company for $100,000 conditional upon D. A. Gordon of Wallaceburg investing an equal amount of stock in the company.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

H. P. Eckardt & Company, Toronto, are selling salmon at interesting prices.

The T. A. Lytle Co., Toronto, report a very large demand for their "Sterling" pickles and relishes this season. They are busy shipping to all points in the Dominion. That "Sterling" pickles are all that the name implies is in evidence in the continued call by the trade for these goods.

November cut lemons have made their appearance on the market about a week later than last year, owing to steamers being delayed on account of ice in the St. Lawrence. White & Co., Toronto, received a car of St. Nicholas brand this week.

The Eby, Blain Company, Toronto, are clearing out their stocks of fish at prices that will interest prospective buyers.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, report the arrival of 3 cars of strawberries direct from North Carolina so far this week. They expect 2 additional cars by Friday, which means they will handle on an average a car a day.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of a car of cabbage, a car of tomatoes, a mixed car of "Magnolia" and "California Beauty" brand navel oranges. They expect a car of pines to-day.

White & Co., Toronto, have received a car of Jamaica cocoanuts, being practically the first since the terrible cyclone which swept over Jamaica about a year ago. The quality is up to their former high standard, weighing to the standard sack of 100 about 140 lbs.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, are selling "Crescent Brand" tomato catsup in quart bottles, which is exceptionally good value.

C. E. Colson & Son, Montreal, Canadian agents for Crosse & Blackwell, London, report that although the severe Winter and blockade of the railroads has interfered with business generally, the import orders for C. & B. goods to date show a very good increase over the same period last year.

The Imperial Biscuit Co., Guelph, report a greatly increased demand for "Pepsin" sodas. The biscuit season is almost here, and merchants are stocking in anticipation.

A. J. Stewart Limited, Toronto, are just now placing on the market a couple of new lines in the way of buttercups and pure fruit tablets in half pound bottles. They are particularly well adapted for the summer trade, being thoroughly well protected from the heat. They are reported to be going well.

CANNED MEATS—a timely hint for wide-awake grocers.

There has been a combination of circumstances that has enhanced the prices of meats. This will greatly affect CANNED MEATS. Prices are sure to advance,—in fact, in many lines have already advanced.

A WELL-ARRANGED STORE.

IT is to be regretted that the grocery trade is not given to much display. Dillon Bros., Halifax, is an unique exception. This store is a model in arrangement and system, and contains many attractive features. The ceiling is of pannelled steel, the fixtures being expressly made for the store. The firm's main warehouse is 40x100 feet, embracing four floors. Opposite they have another warehouse of the same size with two floors. A wholesale and retail trade is carried on.

The business was founded in 1850 by Patrick Dillon, whose death occurred some fifteen years ago. Mr. D. C. Wood at present acts as manager for Mrs. Katherine Dillon. He certainly possesses both energy and talents, as is evinced in the attractive way every article in the grocery line is artistically arranged and displayed.

A LITTLE GIRL'S LOVES.

BESSIE (aged five) was accustomed to come to her mother's room before the family was up. One Sunday morning, while making the customary visit, the odors of breakfast in preparation managed to reach the sleeping quarters. Bessie, with her arms round her mother's neck, gave one or two vigorous sniffs, then with an air of anticipation announced, "Mamma, there's two fings I dess love mos' of enyfing in der world."

"What are they, Bessie?" asked her mamma.

"God and baked beans." Bessie replied, smacking her lips. —Lippincott's Magazine for May.

A STRONG NATURAL FRUIT FLAVOUR IS BROUGHT INTO CONSIDERATION

ROSE & LAFLAMME,
MONTREAL.

A MODEL JAM FACTORY.

SURROUNDED by fruit plantations and hundreds of acres of orchards, far from the heat and dust of a manufacturing town, it is not surprising that the jams and jellies issuing from the factory of Chivers & Sons, Histon, Cambridge, Eng., have acquired a unique reputation for their delicacy of flavor. It would be surprising were it otherwise, when it is remembered that the fruit comes straight from the fields in which it is grown into the factory, where in a few hours from the time of gathering it is converted into jam. The perfect flavor and the natural juices of the fruit are thus captured and preserved by the most up-to-date and scientific processes.

Mr. H. Rider Haggard, the famous author, in his standard work on "Rural England," says of Chivers & Sons:

"This firm has always been careful that the quality of its goods should be of the best. The factory itself, with its silver-lined boilers, its cooling rooms, its patent apparatus for filling the jars, its tramways, its printing and silver-plating, packing-case making, labelling, baking powder, mincemeat, and 'Cambridge Lemonade' departments, etc., is a truly wondrous place. Further, it is fitted with every possible convenience, such as electric light throughout, and a siding where the goods are loaded direct on to the railway cars in waiting."

Village Green, Histon.

Chivers' Works.

The firm own thousands of acres of land, a large proportion of which is devoted to fruit growing, and a writer describing his visit to their fruit farm says:

"For miles round land is given up to fruit, practically the whole of which is destined for Chivers' jam factory. The sight of the carts arriving at the factory in the fruit season, laden with fruit fresh from the fields, is one not easily forgotten; but the most interesting of all sights in that neighborhood is that of the strawberry fields, when the fruit is ripe, tenanted as they are by hundreds of women deftly picking the fruit."

In every department of the factory order and cleanliness are the most noticeable characteristics. The boilers, the ladles, and indeed every metal article which comes into contact with the jam, is made of copper, heavily lined and plated with silver to avoid any possibility of the poison of the copper affecting the fruit. This boiling room is no unhealthy shed, but a handsome, lofty building, from which the steam caused by the boilers is dispersed by Blackman fans.

The Village of Histon, with its model cottages, erected by the firm for the employes at the factory, is rapidly becoming a second Bournville, associated with the name of Cadbury. For the workers who do not live in the village special trains are provided to and from the neighboring University Town of Cambridge.

The manufacture of table jellies, for which Chivers & Sons have won renown all over the civilized world, comes naturally in conjunction with the production of jams, as it enables the firm to introduce ripe fruit juices into the flavoring, and the vast popularity enjoyed by Chivers' Gold Medal jellies is largely due to the fact that they are flavored in this refreshing and perfectly natural manner. The Edinburgh Medical Journal, in referring to this feature says: "The jelly tasted exactly as if a squeeze of fresh juice had been added, and not as if an extract had been used —a not uncommon supposition upon partaking of such delicacies."

Chivers & Sons also send out in attractive packages Cambridge lemonade, a beautiful crystal, made direct from lemons, and guaranteed to contain no added acid. This article was welcomed with great unanimity on its introduction, for, backed by the reputation of the firm, it has become known in the trade by the complimentary description "As Good as Chivers' Jellies." Dr. Andrew Wilson, the eminent food specialist, recently wrote:

"The Cambridge lemonade is well known to me, and I can thoroughly recommend it as a most agreeable beverage. It is prepared from selected Sicilian lemons, and contains no added acid. Readily made at home, it should be ranked as amongst the necessities of a household, as a wholesome beverage for general use, and, I would add, one specially adapted for children. The Cambridge lemonade cannot be surpassed."

The opinion of the grocery trade of England is pithily summed up by J. H. Carling, grocer, Ryde, Isle of Wight:

"The Cambridge lemonade, I may say, is far and away the best I have sold yet. It has quite a refreshing flavor, and is without that horrid acid. A customer to whom I introduced it has within the last six weeks used four dozen. She said she had used every other lemonade she could get, and Cambridge beats all."

Chivers' patent custards and patent blancmanges have as their characteristics absolute purity, and the additional advantage that in preparation for the table the simple addition of milk only is required. No sugar is needed. They have won praise from all who have tried them, and a distinguished analyst commends them as being of the highest nutritive value. The baking powder bearing Chivers' name is likewise a preparation of great digestive and dietetic value. Absolutely free from alum and any injurious ingredients, it has won the unqualified approval of analysts and the good opinion of all who have adopted it in cookery.

The products of this great factory are all boxed in a handsome and artistic style, and the storekeeper will find that the packages give tone to his display as the handling gives substantial profits.

FALL WHEAT CROP SHORT.

UP to the present time The Grocer has been inclined to allow considerable margin on pessimistic reports which have come to hand concerning the prospects for the Fall wheat yield in Ontario, having in mind that this is the season when speculators do their best to "kill" the crop. Judging, however, from numerous reports received during the week, there can be no longer reason for doubting that Ontario Fall wheat has been rather hard hit generally. Only from one section, Wellington County, is the news reassuring; there present indications point to a splendid yield from a good average acreage. In most other districts wheat is reported to be in bad shape. The continued cold of the last Winter and immense quantities of snow had an injurious effect; the greatest damage seems to have been done by the thaw and the formation of ice over the crop. Wheat fields have shown a bad color, and in many cases where they did not exhibit ready signs of freshening farmers have ploughed them down and replanted with Spring wheat, oats or barley. In some districts the situation is not so gloomy, and farmers are still confidently expecting to see the hardly-used wheat plant come on even yet. The annual reports on crop prospects to the Department of Agriculture from the various sections of Ontario will not be in until the middle of the month, when it is hoped Fall crops will be found to be in better condition than is generally supposed.

The Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, C. C. James, in reply to a suggestion that provision be made against such a possible contingency in future, by growing Spring wheat, instead of the Fall variety as in Manitoba, stated that, all things considered, the Fall variety was better for the farmers of Ontario than Spring wheat. In the last twenty-one years the average yield of Fall wheat in Ontario has been a shade over twenty bushels to the acre, while Spring wheat has yielded on an average only about fifteen.

Meanwhile the direct effect of the unfavorable crop reports has been to advance the price of Ontario wheat from 1 to 2c, and that of straight roller flour 10c above the level of last week's quotation prices.

In the event of a total failure of the Fall wheat crop, it must be borne in mind that Ontario farmers are by no means at the end of their resources. Mixed farming is now carried on on such a large scale in Ontario that the failure of Fall wheat would only mean a curtailment in the large profits accruing to farmers from the pursuit of agriculture at the present time. In addition there remains to be reckoned with the fact that Spring wheat will largely make up for any possible deficit in Fall wheat.

CHEESE SITUATION.

AN interesting feature of the Canadian provision markets at the present time is the extremely low quotations given on cheese. To one unacquainted with the technique of the provision trade from year to year, and the influences which cause fluctuation in prices, it will seem all the more remarkable that there could be such wide differences in prices at even dates in two successive years as those existing between the second week of May, 1904, and the same week a year ago.

On May 15, 1903, The Canadian Grocer reported the following prices on cheese:

Large, old ....14½@15 c
Large, new ....12 @12½c
Twins, new ....12½@13 c

For the week of May 13 of this year the following quotations rule:

Large, old 9½c
Large, new ....8 @8¼c
Twins, new ....8¼@8½c

Showing a drop of 5 to 5½c in old and 4 to 4½c in new.

The explanation of this is that during the Winter of 1902-1903 the English market took all the cheese Canada could offer, and clamored for more, with the result that at the opening of the new season the stock of old cheese still held was so small as to make its entire elimination a matter of a very few weeks. Accordingly, holders of old stock readily bought up all the new cheese as quickly as it appeared, and held it until the old was entirely disposed of, thus retaining the high level at their pleasure.

The month of May, 1904, sees, however, a decidedly different condition. The English market has been very unsatisfactory during the past season and stocks of old cheese remaining on hand are large, although the new cheese is getting well under way. This has brought down the price of old, and on this account exporters have not the heart to buy up all the new cheese offering. Even if they did it would affect the level of old stock very little on account of the quantities carried. The new is thrown freely on the market and prices are low. At the beginning of this week, at the cheese sales in Belleville and Cornwall, Ont., new cheese was quoted so low as 6½c.

CANADA'S UNDERPAID JUDICIARY.

A STRIKING feature of the discussion regarding the salaries of the justices of the Canadian Supreme Court is the fact that no attempt to debate the question is made. Those who are convinced that a reasonable increase in the salaries should be paid do not hesitate to offer their arguments in favor of the advance, but those who are not ready to make the increase do not endeavor to discuss the matter on its merits. If they utter any views whatever they endeavor to draw a herring across the trail by a reference to the necessity of a re-arrangement of the salaries of all the judiciary or by a comparison of the salaries of the Dominion Ministers of the Crown with those of the Supreme Court judges or by the introduction of some other side issue.

It is hardly necessary to discuss these points—they cannot be termed arguments—further than to say though that Canada can well afford to pay, and should pay, more equitable salaries to its Prime Minister and to the Dominion Ministers of the Crown, and also to the judiciary generally. These questions are not relevant to the one at issue, the necessity of ensuring the future dignity and strength of the highest court in the Dominion by the payment of a salary large enough to permit the best equipped men to accept appointment to it.

A Montreal lawyer, whose name cannot be here inserted, but who, though a young man, is recognized as a man of brilliancy and power, in conversation with a couple of business men a day or so ago, expressed himself about as follows: "I suppose to some members of Parliament the present salaries of the Supreme Court judges are quite large enough. Yet it is the fact that I could not afford to take a seat on the Supreme Court bench. My practice, though a growing one, is not as big as that of many lawyers I could name. But it is large enough to make the sacrifice necessary to accept an appointment to the Supreme Court more than I would care to make."

In all probability if the proposed increase were made the difference would be sufficient to attract such men, whereas they could not to-day be secured. And it is such men that ensure the stability of our laws and the dignity of the Supreme Court.

Few men in Canada are in a better position to know the needs of the Dominion from a commercial man's point of view than Mr. F. W. Thompson, managing director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited. He stated to a representative of this paper that he was heartily in accord with the article written by Hardware and Metal on this subject. He believed the whole judiciary were underpaid to a criminal extent. This same principle applied to the Premier of the country, to the leader of the Opposition, and to all leaders of public offices of great trust. Their salaries should be commensurate with the responsibilities. Every man should be thoroughly independent, and by that he did not wish to imply that there were any men in the judiciary or the political leadership who had the slightest flaw upon their reputation or character. Both political parties should be in perfect unison on this matter. No prejudices should be allowed to step in to interfere with so serious and important a question. It was self-evident that the judges of Canada were more poorly paid than those of the other countries. The very opposite should be the case by reason of the increasing development of the country. He could not conceive of any fair minded man with any business qualifications who would offer to stand in the way, however sectional he might be in his ideas, to assist in applying immediate correction to this lamentable state of affairs. Salaries should be such as to encourage the bringing into public life the strongest and best men of the country. He complimented the MacLean papers upon the work they were doing and he felt sure that business men at all interested in this great country's development would be only too glad to hear of an advance in the salaries of the judiciary.

THE EVIL OF STRIKES.

With the advent of Spring and the quickening of trade and the increased activity on all sides, it is lamentable to see a revival of the striking instinct, coupled with its attendant evils. Just at a time more than any other, when employers and employes should be working hand in hand, striving for each others good, a rupture takes place, a strike, or a lock-out resulting in stagnation in that line.

In ordering a strike or a lock-out, there is a third party which forms the greater majority of those affected and whose interest is neither consulted nor taken into consideration. It is the consumer. He must bear the annoyance without expressing himself and wait calmly by and let matters take their course.

Unionism has done much to elevate the status of the workmen, and by its means they have received concessions otherwise unobtainable; but a union that is antagonistic to its employers, that seeks by fair means or foul to gain advantage, that assumes a dictatorship intolerant to all fair-minded people is a hindrance to our social advancement. Where firebrands or hot-heads rule, there can be little or no progress. Let a self-imposed walking delegate come along, championing the cause of the workman and he is listened to with feverish eagerness. His word means everything and his very suggestion is a command. "Why?" one may ask. It is only natural since he has, or pretends to have, their interest at heart. Let the workmen be educated to know that theirs and their employers' interests are one and the same. Let the employers take the same interest in the men as does the walking delegate. Let the two realize that the one is indispensable to the other. Let them get closer together and discuss matters in common. Let these things come to pass and our labor difficulties will no longer be what they too often are now, a source of bitterness and antagonism and disruption between employers and employes.

WHERE THE FAULT LIES.

IN answer to "Now and Then's" letter to The Grocer of last week, the provision houses of Toronto are unanimous in saying that although the blame for the large receipts of poor butter rests with the merchant, his position is such as to render any material improvement in the dairy situation almost a matter of impossibility. The grocer has his price set, and from the nature of his business must pay the same for good, bad and indifferent butter.

A farmer's wife offers him good stock and he willingly pays the price; another woman with poor butter cannot be refused the same price, or she takes her trade elsewhere. Thus the merchant finds it difficult to turn down a customer, no matter how inferior the produce offered may be; at any rate, trade is usually given, and a profit is made on the transaction, even though provision dealers pay for butter on its merits.

It is not probable that a dozen receipts for butter-making would effect any marked improvement in poor grades of butter, although they might in medium or higher grades. There is no excuse nowadays for the making of poor butter by any farmer's wife. She is in close touch with dozens of good butter makers, and their recipes are at her command. Inferior butter is the result only of carelessness and lack of desire to do better. At the same time, for the benefit of those who err through ignorance, The Grocer will at some near date in the future publish a recipe from Professor Robertson of the Dairy Division of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Regarding the advantages of uniform sized rolls and boxes, the suggestions in "Now and Then's" letter are certainly good; dealers as a rule, however, express themselves as satisfied with present conditions, in which case no remedy is likely to be attempted. The majority of rolls are quite uniform in shape and size, as are the prints.

The thirty-pound boxes suggested would facilitate handling, although the present conditions under which butter is shipped keep the rolls in good condition, in spite of rather rough handling. In Winter the rolls are sufficiently hard to withstand the jars, and in Summer butter is sent by express. In the centre of shipping boxes is a receptacle for ice which keeps the rolls in good condition. Boxes are usually of 100 lbs. or less.

The improvements suggested have been agitated for a great number of years, and if adopted would mean more than perhaps appears at first sight, but as long as wholesale dealers are satisfied with the present system, the movement cannot gain sufficient strength to accomplish the desired ends. If merchants could combine to pay for butter on its merits, as is done by the wholesale houses, something might be done. But who is willing to risk his customers' trade, and whose judgment as to the value of a certain roll is to be accepted as final ?

TORONTO GROCERS VISIT PURE GOLD MFG. CO.

ON May 11 the members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association to the number of 50 visited the Pure Gold Mfg. Co.'s factory, King street west, Toronto. This is the third manufacturing firm to be visited by the association within the past seven weeks.

The grocers showed the keenest interest in the different processes carried on in this big establishment, all of which were ably explained by the managing director, R. A. Donald, and spent a considerable portion of their time in watching the coffee bean scoured, sized, roasted, cooled, ground and distributed as souvenir packages while they waited, along with Japanese novelty packages containing samples of "Pure Gold" products.

Other interesting features were the baking powder and jelly powder departments, spice rooms, extract laboratories and jam and catsup departments, all of which were in full operation.

The president, F. W. Johnson, voiced the sentiments of all present when, in thanking R. A. Donald, the managing director of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co. on behalf of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association for an enjoyable and profitable afternoon, he said that the Pure Gold establishment compared favorably with any the association had yet visited, and congratulated Mr. Donald on the excellent equipment of the plant. The grocers were unanimous in hoping to see the new factory which Pure Gold are about to build twice as large as the present commodious premises.

Mr. Donald responded briefly, saying that it had been a genuine pleasure to receive the members of the association and show them through the Pure Gold establishment. Mr. Donald was formerly a grocer, and expressed a desire that he might be considered a grocer always, as he had spent some of the happiest years of his life in the trade. The retail grocery trade was one which any man might well be proud to belong to. In conclusion Mr. Donald wished every grocer present the greatest possible success in all his undertakings.

In discussing the removal of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co. from their present premises, Mr. Donald volunteered the information that the recent change was purely the outcome of the recent fire in Toronto. His firm had a good offer to sell to the E. W. Gillett Co., and as they had for some time seen the advisability of locating farther from the centre of the city, where the air would be better, and accommodation more commodious, they decided to accept Gillett's offer. The Pure Gold Mfg. Co.'s new plant will be situated in the suburbs, and will be completed within the next few months.

TORONTO FAILURE.

The recent assignment of the Thompson Company, retail grocers, Toronto, has aroused more or less interest in grocery circles, principally on account of the novel business methods employed by the late firm.

The proprietor of the Thompson Company was several years ago the manager of a retail store in Hamilton, which went to the wall about 1897. Five years later he started business in Toronto, establishing four stores, two on Yonge street, one on College, and another on Queen street. Some time ago the business was organized as a limited company, and numerous "get-rich-quick" men were induced to become shareholders in a concern which promised twenty-eight per cent. profits. Cutting of prices followed, and trade flourished like a green bay tree for the time being. This was, however, too good to last; first, the lower store on Yonge street found it convenient to close, and the most recent development was the liquidation of the company, with liabilities stated at $10,000 and assets totalling something over $9,000.

Several wholesalers are believed to be among the creditors to a slight extent; one firm, however, is known to have refused to do business with the assignors except on a cash basis, directly they found out the peculiar business methods employed by the latter.

NEW SAMPLE TINS.

The agents of the Acadia Sugar Refining Co. are distributing specially decorated sample tins for display of their XXX granulated in their customers' sample rooms throughout the country. This firm claim for their sugar that it is refined only from West Indian cane sugar, which fact will undoubtedly meet with general approval in view of the efforts now being made to create a large market in Canada for West Indian products.

Grasp Your Opportunities "Now" "Later On" May Mean "Too Late."

If you cannot believe the evidence of your own sense of taste and hearing—what the cup results are—and what has been done in the way of bettering every grocer's tea trade conditions, then your case is well-nigh hopeless. But, if otherwise, surely this "SALADA" question is worthy of attention.

We have much bona-fide testimony showing where the using of "SALADA" as a leader has sent up sales all the way from 50 per cent. to 300 per cent. increase over any previous alike period.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto May 12, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery trade is reported to be in a healthy condition. Business during the week under review has been good for this season of the year, when the farmers are all getting their seeding operations under way. Collections are said to be fair on the whole. The same remarks apply to the local city trade. Trade in canned goods is brisk, with canned vegetables already in very small compass. The local sugar market is healthy, indications pointing to a large consumption. There is no further advance to record in refined sugar, but the tone of the market is strong. West Indian molasses has advanced a shade, on account of the increased demand due to the New Orleans test, which is still standing fire. The tea market is quiet, with tea for price higher on account of the Budget. Rio coffees are somewhat easier in price for the present. Trade in foreign dried fruits is only fair, and the same remarks apply to rice and tapioca. Peppers are noticeably easier.

CANNED GOODS.

The market in canned goods continues strong, with prices firm, and the market in very small compass, particularly with respect to canned corn, of which very little is obtainable. Good peas are also scarce, and there are just about enough tomatoes to last through until fresh supplies come in. The demand for canned goods, including canned fruits, is brisk. SUGAR

There have been few new developments in the market during the week under review; offerings of raw sugars have been limited, and only small quantities could be purchased at 2 7-16c for basis 96, c. and f. New York, for second half May shipment from Cuba. Sellers' ideasare 2 7-16c for 95 test, and with buyers and sellers apart there is not much business transpiring. Since the large business of the last two weeks at 2 3-8c for basis 96, there have been sales to American refiners of fully 50,000 bags at 2 3-8c for basis 95, thus recording an advance of 1-32 for the week. The tone and tendency of the market favor sellers, and to-day's quotations may be regarded as entirely nominal.

The strong position in Europe has been fully maintained, and the price of 88 per cent. beet has advanced to 9s per cwt. for May-June shipment, basis f. o. b. Hamburg, thus recording an advance of 2 1-4d for the week. Persistent reports of restricted savings in Europe and the mean of recent estimates of the prospective crop, indicate a shortage of fully 650,000 tons, as compared with last year's final outturn. Estimates of the current Cuban crop have been reduced 100,000 tons, or from 1,200,000 to 1,100,000 tons.

The campaign is rapidly drawing to a close, and eleven more central factories have ceased operations, there being 144 grinding, according to cable of May 4, as against 155 at the same time last year, and a maximum of 171 this year. Receipts at shipping ports also show a falling off for the week ending May 4, being only 28,000 tons, with exports 30,800 tons, leaving a stock of 242,000 tons, which is 130,000 tons less than last year.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for the week ending May 4 were 42,692 tons, with meltings 38,000 tons, leaving total stocks of 188,319 tons, or 60,404 tons less than for the corresponding week of 1903. Combined stocks of U. S. and Cuba were 190,000 tons less than last year. It is estimated that the remainder of the Cuban crop still to be marketed is 375,000 tons, or just about ten weeks' supply for U. S. refiners on present basis of meltings; but as we are just approaching the large sugar-consuming season it is probable that this stock will disappear much faster than is estimated above.

Coupled with the estimate of reduced production in Europe and Cuba there is noticeably an increase in the consumption of sugar. This is especially marked in continental countries, following on the reduction in the home consumption taxes and consequent cheaper prices to consumers ruling in these countries.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,326,319 tons, against 3,490,464 tons last year, and 3,722,480 tons on January 1, 1904. The decrease of stock is 164,145 tons, against a decrease of 116,798 tons last week, and an increase of 209,885 tons January 1, 1904.

There is no further advance to record in refined, but the tone of the market is very strong, in sympathy with raws, and U. S. reports indicate an eventual advance in New York.

The local demand for sugar has been healthy, and indications are favorable to large consumption. Refiners seem disposed to follow the New York market closely, and thus it would seem good policy to keep well covered against all contingencies.

The advance which took place in Canadian prices just as we went to press last week was not evidenced in quotation prices. We now make the necessary revisions.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The situation in the syrup and molasses market shows a tendency towards higher prices this week in West Indian, Barbadoes stuff, etc., largely on account of the uncertainty of the New Orleans market and the resulting increased consumption of the former. Considerable business on the street in West Indian molasses is reported for the week. Practically nothing is doing in New Orleans, some shippers have withdrawn altogether from the market until the test difficulty is finally settled, others will give quotations on guarantee of duty paid price, but they are so high that there is no profit to be made on New Orleans goods in this country at the present time. TEAS.

The tea market has been exceedingly quiet during the week under review, with very little to record and last week's quotations practically unchanged. There has been an advance in lower grade teas, attributable entirely to the English Budget. High-grade teas have been exceptionally fine value. The price of new crop Japans has advanced steadily since the opening of the market, and on account of bad weather receipts have only been 5,000 piculs, against 15,000 piculs last year.

Latest London reports show that there has been an active market for Indians on basis of the advance noted in last reports. Teas up to 7d, especially leaf grades, continued in most request; a satisfactory feature, however, was the more general bidding for medium to fine kinds, which at the sale immediately following the Budget met with very languid support. Now there is practically no sweet common leaf with fair appearance selling under 6 1-2d. Mail advices indicate a great want of moisture and that the growth has been checked; hail is reported to have done some damage, although so far it does not seem to have been very serious.

In Ceylons, competition was again keen for leaf kinds up to 7c per lb., which sold at firm to rather dearer rates, only a few lines of low grade Pekoe Souchong out of garden invoices being obtainable under 6 1-2d per lb. Medium grades for the most part were steady, although Broken Pekoes ruled a little irregularly. Many arrivals showed desirable quality, and such were in request at full quotations. There were brought forward during April 61,800 packages which averaged 7 5-8d per lb., as against 71,200 packages for the same period last year, averaging 7 3-4d per lb.

Clearances of all teas on which duty has been paid from London warehouses, as per official returns, from April 1-20, 1904, were 16,767,725 lbs., as against 13,487,718 lbs. for 1903. We quote the following prices:

COFFEES.

Firm prices still rule in the coffee market, and there is a seasonable demand for milder coffees. Mexicans are coming in in fine quality; up to the last six months these coffees have been too acid altogether, but the flavor of new arrivals is exceptionally desirable.

Brazils have eased considerably, although whether this condition will continue long is hard to say. Brokers attribute the change to the increase in the world's visible supply and the manipulations of speculators. The parity in Brazil continues higher than New York, the latter of which is the price paid locally with 1-2c per lb. added for freight and insurance. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Trade in dried fruits is only fair, as usual at this season. The demand for prunes continues good. A decline of 2c is reported in raisins at the Pacific coast; the demand for Californias is fair within a small compass. California growers are not predicting as to the size of the raisin crop as yet. Quite a lot of Valencias are moving. We quote the following prices:

Spanish peanuts are on the market this week for the first time, the reason being the shortness in the Virginia crop this season, which warrants the importation of stocks from Spain. Fresh cocoanuts are arriving on the market. Grenoble walnuts are scarce. We quote the following prices:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

Supplies of eggs have been very backward in appearing in any quantity, but of course the demand stays up. During the past week there has been a little improvement in receipts, but so little as to have no effect on prices. With eggs at present prices, dealers do not find it profitable to pickle, and consignments are used exclusively for supplying local demand. Just now should be the height of the pickling season, but prices must come down two cents before exporters will risk putting eggs away for export. There is a ready sale for all that is being sent in, and it is likely that pickled stocks will be lower than usual. Should really warm weather come on immediately, the effects of such a late season might be little felt in the future, the present and past high prices being the only result. Prices are unaltered from last week. We quote:

BEANS.

The bean market is nominal at the present time. Green Fruits.

The green fruit market has been active during the past week. The demand for oranges is fair. Valencias 420s have advanced 25 to 50c, and large Valencias 50c. Mexican oranges are out of the market. Lemons show a tendency to advance. During the week prices advanced, but they are down again to last week's level. Jamaica grape-fruit is out of the market. The demand is brisk for bananas, ruling prices being higher relatively than last year. A few Almeria grapes are seen in the market, and are quoted at $7. Limes are 15c easier. Stocks of cranberries are getting pretty well cleaned up. Strawberries are 2 to 3c easier, and in big demand. Supplies are coming very freely. We quote the following prices:

Vegetables.

There is a brisk demand for all kinds of roots, all of which are difficult to obtain, especially potatoes. It is believed they are within very small compass. It is usually found desirable to open up root-cellars before undertaking farming operations; this year farmers are at their seeding, but visible supplies of roots are scanty. Potatoes are very firm, and will advance in price; some dealers have increased prices already to $1.40 and $1.50 per bag. Green stuff is more plentiful than last week, and most imported vegetables are easing in price. There is a ready market for green vegetables. Our quotations are as follows:

Hides, Skins and Wool.

The market is sharp and a good demand for all lines is reported. All grades of veal skins have advanced 1c per lb., and lambskins have advanced 10c apiece. QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, May 12, 1904.

Groceries.

BUSINESS was fair this week. The arrival of the first ocean steamers boomed things along a little and activity marked most departments of trade. Collections are improving from the country and there is a steadily increasing demand for all kinds of groceries. Sugar has maintained its advance and has jumped up another 5c. American and Canadian refiners are, it is rumored, enquiring for beet sugar. This can be understood by the Americans because of the closing of the Cuban crop prematurely. Reports from abroad show there will be a very small total reduction in the new beet sowings. Cane sugars are very active and the refined market is strong for centrifugals. Tea is exciting considerable interest, inasmuch as the reports from Japan show a steady advance of a quarter to a half a cent over last season for particular basket fired teas. A special cable from Japan reports that the backwardness of the season and the lack of transportation facilities are blamed for the advance. Latest advices just to hand report Japan tea market opened practically on same basis as last year.

Coffee has fluctuated slightly, but no changes in prices are to be reported. Dried fruits are attracting considerable notice and, owing to the reported further advances in currants from Greece, higher prices are expected. There is an unusual calm overtaking sultanas, yet there is no modification of the unfavorable crop prospects which were evident two weeks ago; reports from the pro-

Foreign Dried Fruits.

There is generally a quiet time prevailing. Currants are interesting and from Greece advances are reported. Otherwise nothing is notable in the market. Firmness and steadiness are characteristics.

Messrs. Watt, Scott & Goodacre report: Currants—This is about the only article of dried fruits that is not in an uninteresting rut. Further advances in Greece are reported and still higher figures expected. In the Greek Chamber of Deputies there is a new bill pending, which is said to be more practicable than the bill of 1903, although the latter had a decidedly beneficial effect in maintaining prices. Sultana Raisins—The most conservative shippers are now conceding that the coming crop will be much smaller than that of last year. Spring frosts have been followed by dry and prematurely Summerlike weather, greatly to the detriment of the vines. Shelled Walnuts—The sharp decline following on serious liquidation of stocks in Bordeaux has been checked and a reaction of 5 per cent. from the lowest point has set in. Shelled Almonds—The approaching scarcity in Malaga, coupled with unfavorable condition of the trees, has resulted in the expected advances in both Valencias and Jordans. Filberts—The report from Messina is to the effect that export demand for prompt and near shipment is very light. Holders, however, show no anxiety in carrying their stocks. Future delivery of new crop attracts no attention, although by this date considerable contracts are usually placed. We quote:

Green Fruits.

The warm weather has had its effect on the green fruits, which have been steady all the week. However, trade has been quieter than usual for the time of year. Lemons have been in good demand and a few limes have sold at good prices, while apples remain at very high prices. The anticipated arrival of the Mediterranean boats keeps the market in a state of more or less timidity. Florida oranges are no longer on the market. Egyptian and Bermuda onions rule the market as there are no longer any Spanish and French available. California celery is out of the market. The drop in strawberries has had the effect of sending them out very freely, as the price of 16c to 20c makes them easily within the reach of all classes. We quote:

Fish.

All kinds of fish are plentiful. Halibut is coming from the east in much better condition than that from the Pacific Coast. Haddies are arriving freely and kippered herring are also coming in more freely. Smoked herrings in small boxes are higher, owing to scarcity. Haddock and cod are plentiful. Fresh trout and white fish are expected next week as navigation has opened on Lake Superior. The demand for salt fish is, as usual, very quiet. Blue fish are available at 9c to 12c, and shad are selling at from 25c to 50c. Small lobsters continue to sell readily at 10c to 12c, the large ones retaining better prices. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The demand for eggs has been good and the arrivals are coming in freely, as may be indicated from the fact that 1,840 cases arrived on Monday and 1,459 on Saturday. The reason eggs are so strong in price is because the supplies are not sufficient to cover the local consumption as well as the demands of the packers who are putting them away. It will not be surprising to see eggs advance in price if the supplies do not increase very rapidly. There was no trouble in maintaining 15c a dozen.

BEANS.

Not the slightest change has taken place in beans and business is very quiet. Jobbers report choice primes selling at $1.45 to $1.50 a bushel. Primes in car lots at $1.40. Car lots of choice primes were $1.40 and $1.35.

HONEY.

Honey remains featureless, with white clover at 13½ to 14c. Extracted white clover remains at 8½ to 9c in 10 lb. tins, and 7 to 7½ in 300 lb. kegs. Buckwheat remains at 6 and 7c.

POTATOES.

Potatoes are holding a firmness quite unusual owing largely to the small receipts and the very strong demand. Car lots were sold at from 95c to $1 a bag ex track, and in a jobbing way at $1.05 to $1.10 a bag ex store.

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Flour dropped 15c yesterday, which leaves Manitoba Spring wheat at $5.10 and strong bakers at $4.90. Most of the flour merchants are just awaiting events and state that flour may go up or down at any moment. The decline is said to be in sympathy with wheat, but this cannot be verified by the big millers. We quote:

TRADE CONDITIONS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Special Correspondence of The Grocer.

Vancouver, B.C., May 6.

WITH big orders for northern shipment awaiting the granting of through bills of lading from here to Dawson, the wholesale men are anxiously looking for signs of opening navigation on the Yukon River and the lakes and streams of its headwaters. All advices received from the north indicate that the opening is not far off. In fact, it is practically the opening now, as long stretches of the river are free of ice. The ice on Lake LaBarge is melted all round the edges, so say the latest arrivals from White Horse, who reached the city on the steamer City of Seattle on Tuesday afternoon. The ice on the lake is so bad that no traffic of any kind had been attempted for a week or more. A strong wind would break up the lake and the ice would then move out and possibly begin to run in the river. The weather has been warm and Summerlike for nearly two weeks.

The early break-up of Winter transportation prevented the transportation across the ice of a lot of early supplies which were sent up for that purpose. Many shipments were of perishable goods, and unless the weather keeps warm and the river opens right away, there will be a big loss for some of the "scow-men," as the dealers are called who take in goods and have them on scows at the head of navigation, ready to follow the ice down the river. These scows are usually dragged across the ice of Lake LaBarge to the head of the river, and then sent on from there when the ice breaks up. This time they will have to wait till the lake is free of ice before being towed across, and that means that they will not be able to follow the ice as it clears down the river.

So far as meagre advices from the north go, the conditions in Dawson are very commonplace. There is no marked shortage in any of the staple lines of food supplies. Mail advices will not be forthcoming for a week or so now, as the stages have suspended, and no mail will come out till the river is open.

The wholesale trade here will be well able to supply all the requirements of the Spring trade to the north in most lines. The stocks of canned goods, especially vegetables, are large enough for filling all the orders which are being held subject to through shipping. The demand for potatoes and onions, which is one of the first of the opening season, will be met promptly this year. There are liberal supplies of Ashcroft potatoes available, and lower Fraser Valley stocks are large also. The former is the favorite with the northern trade. The supply of dried onions is well kept up with the importations from New Zealand and Australia. There will be 100 tons more received on the next steamer to arrive from Sydney.

The union journeymen bakers of the city formed a co-operative union bakery reecntly to supply bread. The bakery trades union was in a somewhat demoralized state in the view of union men, and to assist the bakers who were union men the idea of starting a bakery which would have union help and also union patronage was set on foot. The business is to be capitalized at $10,000 in five-dollar shares. Many unions, as well as the Trades and Labor Council and the Building Trades Council, have taken stock in the company, though the issue of shares is not limited to union men, as the intention is to run the bakery purely as a business venture and investment.

The grocery markets here are fairly interesting as to prices now. Evaporated apples, both from Ontario and California, are quoted higher, and the tendency of other dried fruits is also up. Evaporated pears, which come from California entirely, are away up now for some reason, the price being quoted here at 13 1-2c. Apricots are firm at 11 and 12c. Other fruits are about the same; prunes are still 4 1-2 to 7c, according to size. The tendency is to order the evaporated apples from Ontario as the price is not higher, and so long as there is no big advantage in favor of the California article, the trade here favors the Eastern Canada supply.

Canned goods are stocked freely, as explained above. The dealers have been ordering very little, in most cases having had their stocks in since last Fall. Prices are held firm and a little higher. The fact is that no large orders will be filled for single firms at the prices now being asked. Though this is the feeling of dealers, it does not indicate that there will be much necessity of re-ordering unless for sorting orders. Prices now quoted are $1.20 for corn and beans, peas $1.15, and tomatoes $1.50. No California canned tomatoes have been imported this year.

Flour has dropped back 20c per barrel, though there has been no definite explanation of the cause, the price of wheat being about as it was in eastern markets. There has been a good deal of Oregon and Washington flour imported into this market, and that may have had some influence on the local quotation, which is now $5.80 per barrel for all the standard makes.

In produce there is still a light stock of butter. A car or two of new early creamery from the east is expected in next week. It is to be quoted at 22 1-2c, so it is said, but there is none on the market at that price now. The cheapest is 26 and 26 1-2c for some old eastern creamery. There is some small quantity of Washington and Oregon creamery being brought in and selling at about the same price. A little of the last stock received from Australia is still offering, but it is quoted at 28c and 29c. Local creameries are turning out rather more liberal quantities lately. The price is still firm at 30c, and not much danger of it going lower. The local creamery supply is so limited that it is almost a fixed quantity, and there is a certain demand here for it, which ensures the sale of the whole stock at almost any price put on it in the springtime.

Eggs are still scarce. There are, of course, none from the east. Oregon and Washington supply the importations, and the price this week is quoted at 26 1-2c and 27s. There was a slight drop owing to some dealers getting a little nervous and for a week no eggs were brought in. The stocks disappeared and the price went up. The local supply is very limited and irregular. The price is firm at 30c, though the New Westminster market last week was lower in sympathy with lower quotations on the Oregon eggs.

Cheese is not moving very freely yet. A car to be divided among the trade is due here in a few days from Ontario. It is new make, and quoted at about 12 1-2c to the trade here. The cheaper price given from the east on this cheese is taken to indicate that it is not stock which would do for the Old Country export trade, of which your eastern cheesemaker is very careful.

In fruits, strawberries are new this week. They are from California, of course. The wholesale price is $4.50 per case of 15 boxes. The supply is limited yet, and as the retail price is 35c the demand is likely to be no greater than the supply.

Oranges are somewhat firmer in tone. The top of the market for choice navels is $3,25, and from that down to $2 the fruit is still quoted. A feature of the stocks is the form of shipping, some being in half boxes, and even in quarter-oxes. The low price needs such taking devices to aid in working off the stock.

Apples are quoted at $2.25 for such as are in the market. At present the variety is mainly Ben Davis, and the supply comes from Washington and Oregon. There is one car of Coldstreams to arrive from Lord Aberdeen's ranch in the Okanagan, and that will close the stock for this season. Bananas are scarce this week, and run from $3 to $4. Pineapples imported from Mexico via California are quoted at $4.50 per dozen.

The Australian and New Zealand onions, which have been stocking the market for the past two months, are moving off well. There will be a quantity to arrive next week on the steamer Miowera. Most of this will go north. Ashcroft potatoes are quoted at $25 per ton, with lower mainland stock at $18 to $20. Fresh vegetables are nearly all local supply now, except asparagus, cabbage and green peas. Prices are beginning to drop considerably too.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, May 11, 1904.

FOR the past week business has been good and jobbers report all around trade in the city quite satisfactory. Throughout the country things are a little quiet. There are still a number of farmers in Western Canada who are waiting patiently for their watery farms to resume a fit condition for seeding.

Sugar—The market remains firm. Montreal granulated is quoted at $4.90 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, and yellows $4.25.

Canned Vegetables—The market is firm and corn, which is rather high, is quoted at $2.50 to $2.65 a case.

Butter—The demand for choice butter is heavy and the market quotes fresh creamery at 25c and rolls from 16c to 19c.

Eggs—The market is easier and the demand is strong. Eggs are now jobbing at 13c.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are firm. The market quotes evaporated apples at 7½c a lb. Oregon prunes are still very cheap in large sizes, 70 to 80 at 5½c, 60 to 70 at 6c, 50 to 60 at 6½c, and 40 to 50 at 6¾c.

Cornmeal—The market still quotes cornmeal at the advanced price of 90c per ½ sack, and $1.75 per sack.

Flour—The market still holds the price of No. 1 patent firm at $2.55.

Canned Fruits—The market is quite firm since the advance in prices on all lines on the 25th of last month. Pineapples, which are now on the market, are being quoted 2 lb. whole pineapple $3.75 a case of 2 dozen, 1¾ lb. sliced $3.75 a case of 2 dozen, 1½ lb. sliced $7.20 for a case of 4 dozen, 1¾ lb. grated $7.60 a case of 4 dozen.

Rolled Oats—The market is now firm and quotes 80 lb. sacks at $2.25, 40 lb. at $2.30, 20 lb. at $2.35, 8 lb. at $2.65, and 5 lb. at $2.85.

Green Fruits—The market is a little firmer. Strawberries are quoted at $5.50 a case, tomatoes at $4 a case, oranges at $3 to $3.50 a case, cucumbers $2 a dozen, and rhubarb at 5c a lb. Bananas, which are still very scarce, are holding their prices strong at $3.50 to $4 a bunch. The market quotes XX apples at $4 a barrel and XXX at $5 a barrel.

Cured Meats—The market remains firm. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, picnic hams at 13¼c, shoulders 8¾c, breakfast backs 11½c, long spice rolls 11¼c, short rolls 10¾c, long dry clear 9c, and dry salt backs 10c.

Lard—The market remains quite firm with pure lard in 50 lb. tubs quoted at $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 5 lb. pails $6.60, and 3 lb. pails $6.65, compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

STARTING FOR THEMSELVES.

TWO men of experience and capability, A. Fortier and F. Monette, have combined under the firm name of Fortier & Monette, to enter the produce business, and have opened a suitable store at 604 St. Paul street, Montreal. For fifteen years Mr. Fortier has been actively engaged in the produce business, and for thirteen years was confidential clerk of the late firm of C. Langlois. Mr. Fortier has established the reputation of being an expert at his business, and his opinion is known to be reliable and correct in the lines in which he deals. His partner, F. Monette, is also thoroughly posted in his business, having been for nineteen years confidential clerk and buyer for J. A. Vaillancourt. Their premises are equipped with fine cold storage for receiving perishable stock, and on account of their excellent business connection they have already carried on extensive operations in the produce business. A large number of interested friends join in wishing them every possible success.

REMOVAL OF WHOLESALE GROCERY.

Lockerby Bros., wholesale grocers, Montreal, who have for many years been located on McGill street, near St. Paul, have removed "lock, stock and barrel" to 152 McGill street, directly opposite Lemoine street, where more commodious premises have been secured.

SWISS MILK CHOCOLATE AGENCY.

THE Canadian Swiss Trading Co., 17 St. John St., Montreal, have secured sole control for Canada of the F. Klaus Improved Swiss Milk Chocolate Works, Le Locle, Switzerland. The F. Klaus milk chocolates have an old-established continental reputation for purity, healthfulness and digestibility. Since the introduction of these goods in Montreal and other eastern cities, most satisfactory repeat orders have been received, and the excellent qualities of the various brands will no doubt secure a good share of Canadian trade. It may be mentioned as an idea of the reception with which these goods were favored in England last year, that the shipments from Switzerland to that country exceeded 3,000,000 francs in value.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. D. Gorman, of Toronto, was introduced on Montreal 'Change Saturday by Mr. A. Chaplin.

W. H. Millman & Sons, Toronto, have been appointed agents for the Old Homestead Canning Co., Picton, Ont.

Mr. C. W. Swasey, manager of the Creamery Package Co., of Cowansville, was in Montreal this week. He said business was booming.

Mr. F. W. Hudson, president of the Canada Brokerage Co., Toronto, was a visitor to Montreal trade this week, and honored The Grocer with a call.

John L. Ranney, an old-time miller on the Welland Canal, died in St. Catharines May 8. He was one of the first millers in Canada to ship flour direct to England in Canadian vessels.

Mr. A. Durocher, commission merchant, Montreal, representing some of the leading French and United States manufacturers, was doing the trade of Ottawa. The Grocer met him hustling in several of the wholesale houses.

Mr. Wm. Goodhue has opened offices at rooms 13 and 14 G. N. W. building, 6 St. Sacrament street, Montreal, where he will carry on a commission business in groceries and provisions. Mr. Goodhue is well known, and his energy and capacity for the work should bring him a large measure of success.

Mr. Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie., Montreal, who has been spending four weeks at Atlantic City, New York and Philadelphia, has returned. A very enjoyable holiday was spent and in Mr. Hebert's view Atlantic City is particularly adapted for a beneficial rest. There is enough of interest on all sides and the music, concerts and exhilirating sea breezes are conducive to a healthy and enjoyable recreation.

Jack Greig, of Surprise Soap Co., and Imperial Cheese, Toronto, was met in Ottawa last week. Jack this time was accompanied by Mr. Wright (not Mr. Henry Wright) and the two gentlemen were busy advising the citizens of Ottawa and Hull, by means of enormous posters, hangers and cards, of the merits of a certain line of goods that "makes child's play of wash-day."

A representative of The Grocer had the pleasure last Saturday of an interview with Mr. John Macintosh, "the Toffee King," in the offices of Mr. Chas. Gyde, Canadian agent, Montreal. Mr. Macintosh, who is thoroughly convinced of the superiority of his goods, has made arrangements for placing them before the public in as thorough a manner as is possible, and an active advertising campaign has been entered on in the United States and Canada.

Mr. J. D. Gill, of Buenhamthorpe, Ont., gave The Grocer a call this week.

Mr. J. Symington, of Brandon, Man., visited the Toronto offices of The Grocer this week, en route to Ireland. Mr. Symington has been a valued subscriber to The Grocer for fourteen years, and says he finds his "Grocer" indispensable. He is having an extra copy sent to him every week while he is in the Old Country.

TEMPORARY QUARTERS

After a successful business career of a great many years, the tea firm of W. D. Stroud & Sons, Montreal, have found their old premises inadequate to the demands upon their business. They have given out contracts for the erection of handsome new offices and warehouses on St. Paul street, opposite the Coristine Building. As they have had to vacate their old premises on St. Sacrament street they have removed to temporary offices at the Hamilton Chambers, 17 St. John street, occupying the suite of offices Nos. 11, 13 and 15.

ANOTHER NEW FIRM.

The commission house of D. Rattray & Sons, Quebec, have decided to open premises in Montreal. D. J. Rattray was in the city last week making arrangements for suitable quarters in Montreal, which will be completed this week. Mr. Rattray has recently returned from Europe and has there established stronger connections, so that in every way their house will be equipped to carry on a continually growing commission business in the grocery and provision lines.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N. B., May 9, 1904.

NOW that the Winter port business is closed, we are able to take a comprehensive view of the season's business. We find the same number of sailings as last year, viz., ninety-six. The tonnage represented was, however, 50,000 more. The exports show an increase of about seventeen per cent., the total export this year being valued at $15,870,000, of which say $10,150,000 was Canadian goods and $5,720,000 foreign, chiefly United States products. The increase over last year was $2,793,700. The most valuable cargo was taken by the steamer Montezuma, valued at $486,056. There were four steamers cleared for Africa, their cargoes being valued at $772,727. It is estimated that $200,000 was spent by the steamers, besides a very large amount indirectly. It is easy to see the great value of this business to St. John.

This Summer will see more export and import business of this nature than ever before, as we are to have quite an increased number of regular steamer sailings. In business some report it quiet, but it is the time of bad roads and busy farmers. The state of business will depend, of course, largely on the markets, and there are many bears. However, millers talk of quite firm prices.

The feature of the week has been the cut of some two cents in the coast price of California seeded raisins. The molasses market is still of great interest. As yet it is very one-sided, at least in the quantity received, as one local importer has so far had the only direct goods arriving here.

Oil.

In burning oil prices are unchanged and seem quite firm. A large tank steamer arrived this week. In lubricating oils dealers are busy. Prices are held firm. Paint oils have a large movement, while there is no change in linseeds, the market being weak. Turpentine holds firm.

Salt.

In Liverpool coarse salt the market is well supplied. Prices are held firm. In Liverpool factory filled the sale of late years has shown a falling off, Canadian fine being largely used. This is the busy season in this line.

Green Fruits.

Dealers are very busy. Green stuff is having increased attention as prices get lower. The quantity of cabbage, cucumbers, rhubarb and strawberries coming in from Boston increases with every steamer. Some splendid rhubarb has been received. In oranges the sale is not so large, as bananas are now the big line. Valencia oranges are higher. Californias, of which but a limited quantity have been sold, are unchanged. Lemons are still low. Apples have but little attention. Pines are slow sellers.

Dried Fruits.

The cut in California seeded raisins of over two cents on the coast, as well as a big cut in loose muscatels, particularly Four Crown, has somewhat upset the raisin market. Our dealers had fair stocks. Prunes are still easy. Demand is not large. Fine 40 to 50s are offered low. In dates the foreign market is firmer. Currants are rather higher. Evaporated apples are firmer. In onions the trade find the situation different from what they expected, as prices are higher. Dealers have been selling very low. The high price of Virginia peanuts has caused French and Japan nuts to be offered. The supply of Japan proves very small. The French are a meaty nut but shells are small.

Canned Goods.

There is little of interest. All lines seem firm. Salmon packers advise that they look for a short pack and expect higher prices than last year. Meats did not show much advance. In domestic fish packers are beginning to put up sardines. In vegetables, the coming season has attention. It looks as if there would be quite a large pack outside the association.

Sugar.

Prices are again higher. While the advance has been light each time, it continues upward with considerable regularity. It causes increased sale of foreign sugars.

Molasses.

The situation is unchanged. One local importer holds about all the new Porto Rico here and is very firm in his price, quoting well above the price asked for the stock imported indirectly. It is a matter of much interest if he can maintain his price, as he has set out to do. Barbadoes is offered low.

Fish.

Fresh fish are quite plentiful. The catch of gaspereaux so far is not large, and full prices rule. A few shad are seen and an odd salmon. In dry codfish and pollock supply is light and will be for some time. Pickled herring are scarce and smoked are a very light stock.

Flour, Feed and Meal.

In flour, while dealers here are bears, the market seems quite firm, particularly Ontarios. Feed is quite freely offered. Oats are low and not selling so freely. Oatmeal is firm at full prices. Cornmeal is unchanged. Beans are dull at rather easier figures. Barley and split peas are a light stock. In seeds the sale has not been very large, which is rather a surprise, as prices were low.

AN EXCELLENT REPORT.

Without exception, the 1903 report of the Board of Trade of Toronto is the best ever published by that institution. This excellence is largely due to the illustrated description of the city, placed at the beginning of the report. Excellent pictures of the striking features of the city, together with condensed descriptive matter, make up an admirable introduction to the reports and membership lists which follow. President J. F. Ellis' annual address takes up ten pages, and contains considerable valuable information. There follow the secretary's, treasurer's and section reports, the book being completed with a list of the members.

Association News.

The First Step Satisfactory.

REGARDING the federation of Montreal associations, another practical move was made at a recent meeting of the Boot and Shoe Association. Advantage of the occasion was taken by the secretary of the federation delegates, Mr. Beaudry, to present to the meeting the newly formed constitution, which the delegates had previously drawn up. After considerable discussion the constitution generally was approved. The boot and shoe men were the only ones from whom any objection was anticipated, and now that the doubt has been removed, the completion of federation is looked forward to as being comparative easy.

Montreal Monthly Meeting.

THE Montreal Grocers' Association held their monthly meeting last week and decided upon several important matters. They first of all accepted the constitution for federation as submitted by their special delegates and which was accepted similarly by the boot and shoe men last week. In regard to trading stamps they passed a resolution asking the city council to enforce the law. The resolution, as well as trading stamps generally, formed a part of the agenda for the business of the day at the first meeting of the council this week.

The grocers have fixed July 15 as the date for their annual picnic. This year it will be held at Delorimier Park, which will give abundance of room for a fine sporting programme and, it is thought, will serve as a much more convenient place for the picnic.

Toronto Retail Grocers Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association was held on May 9, in the rooms of the association, Elm street, Toronto.

It was unanimously decided to hold the annual excursion to Buffalo, N. Y., on July 20, via the Niagara Navigation Co. The following gentlemen were elected as members of the excursion committee: H. Kelly, R. Van Loon, R. W. Davies, F. Thom and T. Clark.

Two weeks ago the wholesale fruit dealers of Toronto announced their intention of leaving unchanged for the coming season the regulations for fruit delivery which are in force at the present time.

MONTREAL GROCERS' PICNIC.

THE annual grocers' picnic which has been such a success in past years will not be held outside the City of Montreal this year. Formerly there has been a large excursion to some point within a hundred or more miles of Montreal, patronized at great expense by hundreds of grocers and their families. After some deliberation it has been decided to hold the annual picnic at Delorimier Park, some time in July. New plans and bigger and better features are promised.

JAPAN TEA ADVANCING.

JAPAN tea is advancing and there is every indication of a very decided improvement in the situation reported at the opening of the market. On Monday Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, of the Central Tea Traders' Association, Montreal, stated that he had just received a cable to the effect that the price of Japan tea was advancing steadily and that the crop was 4,500 piculs shorter than last year. When it is remembered that the picul means 133 lbs., the shortage must be considered as quite worthy of note. Mr. Nishimura was of the opinion that the advance occurred owing to the lack of railway facilities, as he was told by cable that only two trains a day were available for the tea service. That would mean a serious blow to the big tea men, as in the old days before the war there were at least twenty trains a day, so that the losses of active transportation would have a very noticeable effect upon the tea trade of Japan this year. He was quite unable to explain whether the war was the cause or not, but one thing was sure, Japan tea was lower than it was last year at the same time.

PEANUTS FIRM.

"The peanut market is firm, with supplies exceedingly light, both in second and primary markets," says the New York Journal of Commerce. Reports from Virginia state that combined stocks of Spanish in that state and North Carolina are but 15,000 bags, against 40,000 last year. It is also reported that there are a few Japanese peanuts on the way, but that the Japanese Government will allow no further shipments on account of the war.

In regard to Africans, it is too late to import them for speculative purposes. These so-called African nuts have an odor which is not pleasant and which tends to hinder confectioners and the trade generally from using them. In Europe they are ground for oil principally, the oil being used in soap-making.

Fruit Steamers for Montreal.

THE following fruit steamers direct from Mediterranean ports have been reported direct for Montreal: s.s. "Fremona," s.s. "Jacona," and s.s. "Bellona." The first two steamers have loaded full cargoes of lemons and oranges. The "Bellona" will take a general cargo at Leghorn and other places, calling at Messina, Catania and Valencia, in order to complete full cargo.

The following are reports of cargoes received to date:

"Fremona,"	31,250	boxes	Messina lemons.
"	37,185	"	Sorrento oranges and lemons.
"Jacona"	37,500	"	Messina lemons.
"	10,000	"	Palermo lemons.
"	9,500	"	Sorrento oranges and lemons.
"Bellona"	10,000	"	Messina lemons and oranges.
"	6,500	"	Sorrento oranges.
"	3,000	cases	Valencia oranges.

The s.s. "Fremona's" cargo will be offered at auction about Wednesday, May 18, and the s.s. "Jacona's" about Saturday, May 21.

Giant Pineapples.

THE culture of the "Smooth Cayenne Pineapple" in Jamaica is re-reported to have been attended with such extraordinary success that the plants have produced mammoth fruits weighing as much as 20 lbs. each. It is said that these giant pineapples frighten the buyers in the English markets, whose idea of a salable pine is limited to one of 6 lbs. to 8 lbs. each. The popular St. Michael pines now coming in for the present season range from 3 lbs. to 6 lbs. in weight, and meet the wants of the English dealers. Still fruits of 20 lbs. should command a large and profitable sale for shop window show purposes alone. In one district it is stated that 80 per cent. of the plants will, on account of the richness of the soil, produce monstrosities in pineapples heavier than the weight named. The soil contains six times the normal quantity of nitrogen and to this fact the remarkable vegetable exuberance is attributable. The soil of Jamaica suits the orange as well as the pineapple. Giant Mandarins cultivated in this colony are selling in England first hand at 7s per case of 64 fruits, which is nearly at the rate of 1s 6d a dozen. These are fancy prices, 100 per cent. more than is paid for Spanish Mandarins. The Jamaica Mandarin oranges as marketed lately are the finest of their class which have ever been imported into the United Kingdom.

The Greek Currant Trade.

AT a recent meeting of the Ionian Bank, London, Eng., the chairman spoke of the general prosperity of Greece, due to an abundant crop of wheat, wine, oil, tobacco, and currants, especially the staple crop of currants, than which there was no more uncertain crop in Greece or in the whole world, suffering as it did from such vicissitudes and from such unaccountable fluctuations in price within such short periods. Since the monopoly scheme, owing to the opposition of the British Government, has not been persevered with, it will probably be in the direction of this local industry, and in the efforts that are being made by the Greek Government to prevent extension of production, that the remedy will be found for what has been termed "the currant problem." To help forward the solution of this question the proposal has been made that the banks connected with Greece should become consignees for currants in England.

New Fruit Destroyer.

A new species of scale has been discovered in the vicinity of St. Catharines by T. Beattie, San Jose scale inspector. It was found on a lilac bush, and when examined under a magnifying glass was found to be different from the San Jose scale, being more elongated, while the effect on bush and tree is the same as the San Jose scale on fruit trees. Samples have been forwarded to the Ontario Agricultural College.

California Orange Industry.

THE orange industry of California just now is in a bad situation. Where a few years ago a smaller crop paid the growers of the state $15,000,000 in profits, this year a much larger crop will pay only $4,000,000 at the outside, and possibly less than that. Under these circumstances it is only natural that there should be dissatisfaction with prices and also with methods of selling.

The unfortunate controversy which is now raging in California promises to make some difference in the orange industry before the beginning of another season. Instead of selling in auction rooms in the East, it is proposed to sell at auction in the growers' own districts or virtually return to the old system of f.o.b. sales, as they were termed. It is believed that this would be fairer to all concerned and that the entire trade from grower to consumer would be largely benefited. The California crop this year will be about 12,000,000 boxes, the largest ever known.

Currant Growing in Australia.

Although Australia is far from being self-supporting in currants, yet the production is annually increasing, and South Australian growers are fully awake to the importance of this industry. The Angaston District is rapidly increasing its annual production of currants, but the season has hardly been favorable for dryers. Wind, dust, and rain have made it necessary for dryers to be on the constant look-out whilst their fruit was on the trays, but, nevertheless, a good quality currant has been produced. At the present rate of increase South Australia at least should be able to supply her own wants in currants in the course of the next few years. In Mildura the unusual rainfall made the fruit swell and crack, so that the average quality will be somewhat lower than usual.

West Indian Fruit Exports.

A return has just been issued by the Colonial Office, London, Eng., showing the amount of sugar and fruit exported from the British West Indies in the two financial years, 1899-1900 and 1902-3, the latter term being influenced by the service of Canada and the Jamaica banana service to this country. Shipments of fruit in 1899-1900 were estimated to be worth £872,100 and in 1902-3 had risen to £1,362,300.

New Fair for Toronto.

A new fair, to be conducted on the lines of the Guelph Fat Stock Show, will be held in Toronto in November next. It will be known as the Fruit, Flower and Honey Show. One of the rinks will be filled with fruit and honey, the other with flowers, while the machinery and appliances used in these three industries will be shown on the grounds.

The Government will assist the show to the extent of $1,000, the amount having been passed in the supplementary estimates.

RICH BUSINESS MEN AND THE POOR.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB'S Summer haven for poor children on Staten Island, which he has built, will be ready when the first breath of hot weather strikes New York. The Happy Day, the fine new boat built with all the machinery encased in glass, will make daily trips to the island, carrying all who care to go free of charge. The philanthropy is typically American. It is designed to help children of all classes and no questions asked. Black, white, Christian, Jew and heathen will be alike welcome. There are thousands of children above the age of 12 on the eastside who have never seen a cow or a pig. There are many who have never even seen a tree. To take them into the country for a few weeks is as transporting them into a fairyland where every natural object is a fresh wonder. More and more in New York the importance of providing children with means and leisure to play is being recognized. Froebel's dictum, "Let the child play if you want him to develop," has become a rule to be followed. The city child of to-day has no games that can be played within the limits of the space open to him. With the establishment of recreation places such as the one provided by Mr. Schwab experts in child study see the solution of one of the most pathetic complexities in city life. Over on the eastside the workers along these lines are very optimistic. They say that rich men are learning to give money away in directions where it will do some substantial and immediate good. The fact that men of wealth are devoting themselves more to the art of giving than to the art of getting, they say, is due to a sense of social responsibility recently accelerated by many splendid acts of genuine philanthropy. There is a public sentiment which declares that the man who gets without giving has not realized the responsibilities of his position.

THE TEA DUTY.

THE grocery trade generally has shown a more or less lively interest in the recent addition to the tax on tea entering England. The history of the tea-duty is as follows: The first advance, which occurred some time ago, was from 8 to 12c; the latest addition brings the tea tax to 16c, double what it was four years ago. At the present time the British tea merchant is paying one hundred and thirty-three per cent. on the price of common tea and one hundred and ten per cent. on the average value of tea.

A recent memorial of the Indian and Ceylon Tea Associations, London, Eng., states that for sixteen years previous to 1900 the increase in the consumption of tea averaged four and one-half million lbs. per annum, and that since that date consumption has practically remained stationary. The natural increase in consumption due to the normal growth of the population in these last two years should have been three and three-quarter million lbs., so that it is evident that Englishmen are consuming less tea per head than formerly, which is no doubt due in a large measure to the raising of the duty to 12c and latterly to 16c.

The immediate effect of the new duty in England has been to increase the demand and price of lower grade Indian and Ceylon teas, while medium to fine teas, on the other hand, have passed irregularly with a downward tendency. It is thought that this tendency will continue to become marked.

TRADE WITH SOUTH AMERICA.

At a recent meeting of the Nova Scotia section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in Halifax, the feasibility of establishing direct trading connections between Canada and South America was discussed. There appears to be no reason why Canada should not endeavor to secure a share of South American trade; the initial difficulty, however, is that of transportation. The matter is being investigated by the Nova Scotia section for the benefit of Canadian manufacturers producers and shippers.

NOVEL BUSINESS CONCERN.

A company known as the Farmers' Wholesale Buyers' Association has been formed in Winnipeg, for the purpose of selling groceries and general merchandise direct to the consumer at wholesale prices. The total present capitalization is placed at $100,000.

The plan of operation, according to a statement of the promoters, is to establish large wholesale warehouses in Winnipeg and to open branches at various points in the country, to which goods will be sent direct. One of the important departments of the company will be a general commission business. Farm produce will be accepted from clients of the company and resold at the big city stores. For the present the company will only erect a warehouse in Winnipeg, but as soon as the volume of business warrants they intend opening a departmental store. The field of operations will extend over the whole of Manitoba and the Territories.

ST. JOHN AS A PORT.

"EVERYTHING points to us having a new dry dock at St. John, N.B.," said Mr. George Robinson, formerly Mayor of that city and at present M. L. A., while chatting about many things at the Windsor, Montreal, the other evening. He is president of the Imperial Dry Dock Company, and they are likely to start work there in about a month. He referred to the winter port business and said that it had been very satisfactory, as the exports had been larger in volume than any previous season. The tonnage of ocean craft reached 50,000 tons. The number of ships was about the same as the previous year, but they were much larger and the aggregate was higher. The total export trade for this year reached the magnificent sum of $15,000,000, as against something less than $13,000,000 in the corresponding period of 1903.

CABLE FROM JAPAN.

A cable from Japan has been received to the effect that the war in the East will not affect this year's tea crop. Teas are coming to market slowly on account of bad weather, settlements to May 4 being 3,250 piculs. The market is five per cent. under last year, and active.

NEW COMPANY.

A new company, known as the Brantford Produce & Cereal Company, has been formed in Brantford to manufacture and deal in cereals, coffee and foods, leather dressings, grocers' supplies, and the products of the farm and the dairy. The capitalization is $40,000, and the incorporators are: A. E. James, J. Denning, W. H. Hammond, H. V. Hutton, W. Grierson and W. A. Russell. The provisional directors are: A. E. James, W. H. Hammond and H. V. Hutton.

NEW PARTNER.

J. W. Bickle & Greening, brokers and commission merchants, Hamilton, Ont., have admitted to partnership J. A. Henderson, for many years associated with Balfour & Company of the same city. The business will be carried on under the same firm name as heretofore.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Manitoba Seeding in Full Swing.

LATEST reports from Manitoba say May 12 will see the completion of wheat-seeding if the weather continues favorable. G. V. Hastings, manager for the Winnipeg offices of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, estimated that at least 50 per cent. of the seeding would have been finished by Saturday last. Manitoba is several days ahead of the Territories in seeding, especially in the higher lands.

The crop is going in under most favorable circumstances, and unless there is an unusually severe drouth or excessive rain during the growing season the crop cannot fail to be a heavy one. In spite of the heavy floods which followed the breaking up of the Winter season, there has been but little loss or damage from this source.

It is estimated by harvest experts that the area under wheat this year will be little different from last. Last Fall it was expected that there would be an increase of from ten to fifteen per cent., but the late season has delayed Spring work to such an extent that this expectation cannot be realized. This area, however, will be put into other crops, so that the total area under cultivation will show an increase of at least ten per cent. over last year. This increase will be chiefly in coarse grains.

Complaint Against Bread.

LONDON, Eng., just now is exercising its mind on the subject of bread. It is charged against London bread that it is short in weight, sometimes adulterated, and often contaminated. For a long time past the Public Control Committee of the London County Council has been in communication with the bakers of London, and the negotiations have resulted in a proposal to repeal the Bread Act of 1822. This statute still controls the sale of bread, and it is suggested that a measure more in keeping with modern conditions should be drafted. This new measure would provide that all bread, except fancy bread, should be sold in loaves of one, two, four or six pounds, and that the weight should be impressed upon the loaf in large figures. It would also impose a penalty for selling short-weight loaves unless it were proved that the deficiency came from the fact that they had been kept for forty-eight hours. It is also proposed that the inspector of weights and measures shall have power to test the weight of loaves either when on sale in the shop or in the course of delivery.

Fall Wheat Winter Killed.

The wheat crop of Wentworth County, Ont., will be very short this year; presumably not more than half of last year's crop, owing to the severity of the late Winter. A number of farmers have already ploughed in their Fall wheat, and will sow Spring wheat instead.

——

"100 Million of Wheat."

ONE hundred million bushels of wheat is the anticipated output of the great Manitoba wheat fields for this season. Such was the estimate put upon the reports and observations of the western situation by a leading grain man who has established connections with the Northwest. He went on to remark upon the acreage of last year, which was three and a-quarter million, and this year there would be four millions of acres under cultivation. Estimating at twenty bushels to the acre, which was a very modest one, he believed that by adding twenty millions to that reckoning it would easily reach the hundred million mark. Up to date the weather had been most favorable.

——

Wheat Samples from Peace River.

SEVERAL samples of grain raised in the Peace River district have just been received by Commissioner Smith of the Immigration Department at Winnipeg. These come from the Roman Catholic mission at Smoky River, 200 miles northwest from Edmonton, and compare most favorably with the best samples raised in Manitoba or the most favorable localities in the Territories.

The samples of White Russian and Red Fife wheat are remarkably hard and clean berries. They are hard and plump and from the appearance would go well over 60 pounds to the bushel. They are not as good a color as some of the prize samples raised in Manitoba, but this is probably due to lack of proper facilities for harvesting.

Samples of black and white oats were also sent, and a thorough search of a number of grains failed to find a false seed. They are heavy for the bulk and are bright and free from foreign seed.

To Stop Food Adulteration.

The superintendent of food exhibits at the World's Fair, St. Louis, says the food exhibitions there will be of significance in so far as they will show the importance of pure raw materials and of the careful manufacture of the same. There will be illustrations of what has been done in the matter of adulterating foods, and of the means by which the adulterants may be detected. The processes of preparing the different foods properly will also be presented in an educational way.

Indian Crops.

The Indian wheat crops of the past seven years are thus returned: 1904, 37,000,000 qrs.; 1903, 36,000,000 qrs.; 1902, 28,000,000, qrs; 1901, 31,000,000 qrs.; 1900, 23,000,000 qrs.; 1899, 29,000,000 qrs.; 1898, 31,000,000 qrs; average, 30,714,000 qrs. This year's crop is considerably above the average, and if India's average shipments are about 3,000,000 qrs. an exportable surplus of 9,286,000 qrs. would seem to be disclosed. Nobody, however, expects India to ship that quantity, for the farmers of that country are a careful race, and the dry climate enables them to store wheat. Indian wheat shipments from the 1st of August to the 31st of March are cabled at 3,735,000 qrs., as compared with 1,300,000 qrs. in the same period of the previous shipping year. This large increase has been almost entirely in shipments to the United Kingdom.

Wheat Exports and Stocks on Hand.

BRADSTREET'S weekly reports of exports of wheat show that during the four weeks ending with April 28 Canada and the United States shipped only 5,724,503 bushels of wheat, flour included, an amount less than half that shipped during the same period a year ago, one-third that of 1902 and one-quarter that of 1901. This contraction in export business is reflected in a decrease smaller than usual at this time of year in stocks held in Canada and the United States. For instance, the supply held on May 1 this year in both countries was 47,385,000 bushels, a decrease of 4,726,000 bushels for the month of April, against a decrease of 15,496,000 bushels in April a year ago and 22,731,000 bushels in 1902. Following will be found the stocks held on the first of each month for five years past:

May 1, 1893	95,710,000	3,537,000	99,247,00

The stock held on May 1 this year, it will be seen, is the smallest held, with one exception, on that date in twelve years. This latter fact, of course, goes to explain partially the failure of exports to show up any larger than they do. The fact is that because of smaller stocks and high prices at home, with large supplies available from all other countries, the wheat trade of the North American Continent has been brought to a situation as regards export trade seldom equaled of recent years. It might be added that all indications favor a gain in European stocks during April fully enough to offset the small decreases in America, the outlook therefore being that the world's visible supply during April will show a fair increase.

End of Western Grain Rate War.

After many futile attempts the western railroads of the United States have settled the grain rate war between Missouri River points and Chicago. All have agreed to make proportional rates from Kansas City. Heretofore the rate from the former points was two cents a hundred pounds higher. The St. Louis differential rate is reduced from five cents to three cents a hundred pounds, which affords the eastbound roads a better chance to compete with the Gulf roads. Present rates—five cents on wheat and four cents on other grain—will remain in effect until the new rates are checked off, and the latter will probably not go into effect until June.

Movement of Grain in Northwest.

F. O. Fowler, secretary of the Northwest Grain Dealers' Association, has issued a report showing the movement of the 1903 crop to May 1, 1904. According to Mr. Fowler's figures, there is now in the farmers' hands only 160,974 bushels, though he states that he is satisfied there yet remains to be marketed between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 bushels. The total marketed to date is 36,130,000 bushels.

Home From the West.

Mr. B. H. Blakeslee, a representative of the Frontenac Cereal Company of Kingston, called at the Toronto offices of The Grocer this week. Mr. Blakeslee has just completed a transcontinental trip in the interests of his firm, extending from Glace Bay, Cape Breton, to Victoria, B.C.

Naturally enough, Mr. Blakeslee is enthusiastic over Western Canada, which is making such phenomenal strides at the present time. He says the business activity all along the line is simply marvellous, and what is more, western business men have no longer an eye for the small things; to suit them everything must be on a colossal scale. Emigrants of the most desirable class are pouring into the West. Every Pacific liner leaving Vancouver carries large consignments of Canadian goods destined for eastern markets. Mr. Blakeslee is a firm believer in the virtues of goods "made in Canada," and predicts a splendid future for Canadian manufacturers, who are just awakening to a sense of the possibilities of Canadian trade.

Cereal Notes.

The acreage of wheat in Great Britain was nearly 150,000 less in 1903 than in 1902.

The Columbia Milling Company of Enderby, B.C., are reported to be making arrangements for the erection of a forty-thousand bushel elevator at Lethbridge, Alta.

Tobacco Tax in England.

ACCORDING to the newly adjusted tobacco tax in England, the consumer pays an additional duty of 6 cents per lb. on all tobacco manufactured out of strips, while the duty on leaf remains unchanged.

The manufacturers in England will also be allowed to use 32 per cent. of water instead of 30 in their tobacco. This increase of 2 per cent. is said to be equal to 4 cents per pound, so that manufacturers will be benefitted to that extent; that is, the consumers of Black Roll tobacco, who are the poorer classes, will not only have to pay 6 cents extra duty but 4 cents more for water on that class of tobacco. This kind of tobacco is made very largely in Ireland, hence the name of "Irish Roll," although it is made extensively in Liverpool and Glasgow. It is out of the 32 per cent. of water that the manufacturer has to pay for the tobacco and the cost of manufacture, as he sells it to the wholesaler at 75 cents per pound, which is the duty he pays on tobacco in perfectly dry condition, but sells it with 32 per cent. moisture added at 75 cents a pound. The consumer pays 6 cents per ounce, or 96 cents per pound. In the higher grades of tobacco the moisture does not form so important a factor in the cost or selling prices, as they are made in dryer condition. Water is the only ingredient allowed to be put in tobacco—neither licorice or flavoring being permitted.

The object of the English Government in placing 6 cents per pound on strips is, no doubt, that they consider it as partly manufactured tobacco. By allowing the duty to remain at 75 cents on leaf, the result will be that British and Irish manufacturers will be compelled to employ a large number of people to stem tobacco, thus giving employment to thousands of women and girls, instead of the leaf being stemmed in other countries and sent to England in strips. The additional duty has already caused the discharge of about one thousand stemmers in Henderson, Kentucky.

Tobacco in Russia.

The beginnings of tobacco culture in Russia are of recent date, as during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the smoking and snuffing of tobacco were forbidden. The growth of the cultivation of tobacco during the second half of the nineteenth century is shown by the following figures :

Year.	Area in Tobacco. Dessiatinas.	Product. Poods.
1865	32,691	1,840,700
1870	49,362	3,363,100
1885	51,180	3,302,600
1896	56,131	5,016,100

Tobacco production is carried on chiefly in the southeastern governments of Russia, such as Chernigov, Poltava, the Kuban District, the Crimea, Voronezh, etc. The size of tobacco plantations, except in the Kuban District, where the better grades of tobacco are cultivated on a large scale, is rather small, the average size of the plantation being below three acres.

The Finest Snuff Box.

At a recent sale held by Christies at London, Eng., a snuff box of the eighteenth century, which is without doubt the most magnificent of that period, was sold for $32,000. The sides, top and bottom are formed of panels of enamel, ornamented with paintings of various flowers by Hainelin, signed and dated 1758. The frame work of the box is of solid gold, incrusted with diamonds of the first water.

ONE of the most attractive exhibits in the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair, says the Western Tobacco Journal, is that of the tobacco growers and manufacturers of the United States. Every feature of the industry is treated—the growing plant, the curing of the leaf and its manufacture all being shown by live and well-planned exhibits.

While each state has it individual exhibit, the attractive feature of the whole display is the ornamental effects which have been created through the united efforts of exhibitors. A facade, artistically trimmed in tobacco leaves, extends the entire length of the four blocks occupied by the display. In the centre of the booth thus formed, there rises to a height of fifty-two feet an octagonal pagoda surmounted by a sphere, which supports a ship sailing in a sea of tobacco. The entire structure is covered with tobacco and the weed is used in working out clever decorations and trimmings.

Kentucky is the leading state in the production of leaf tobacco, and has been accorded the first block in which to demonstrate the magnificent resources of its domestic and export tobacco. Here planters and manufacturers illustrate many of the processes of culture and curing in vogue in that state.

Passing from the Kentucky exhibit the visitor next enters the fermenting rooms which are in charge of a United States Government expert who illustrates the manner of treating the Cuban and Sumatra tobaccos. This is an important exhibit and one that has attracted attention, since the industry has attained such remarkable proportions and tobacco raising has been reduced to a science. The exhibit is really a training school for those who desire to cure tobacco by this method.

Next is the attractive working exhibit contributed by the Sanchez-Haya factory, showing the process of making Cuban cigars. On the left Pennsylvania cigar makers, in a space of similar size, are manufacturing domestic cigars of all grades, thus demonstrating side by side the products of both the American and Cuban factories.

Further on are to be seen the cigarette making machines, as well as a considerable number of special exhibits, showing the finished product from Cuban factories.

Around the dome, which ornaments the pagoda, North Carolina, Virginia, New York and other tobacco producing states show the varieties, character and quality of leaf grown in the respective states, together with manufactured products from the same.

Perhaps the most interesting exhibit is the sales warehouse, wherein is shown not only the piles of tobacco ready for the auctioneer, but around the walls and under glass is to be seen the leaf tobacco grown in each of the tobacco states. This feature will prove of special interest to the foreigners, because it enables them to compare the products of the states and study the blending of tobacco that they may better meet the demands of their home market.

Further on the States of Georgia, Texas, Connecticut and Tennessee are vieing with each other in presenting the advantages claimed by each in the production of fine leaf for both home and foreign consumption. The Connecticut display is confined almost exclusively to the showing of fine cigar tobacco. Tennessee has erected in the centre of its space a typical field curing barn, which is in common use in all territory where bright and mahogany tobaccos are grown.

Extensive displays are also made by the manufacturers of machinery, tools and appliances used in the cultivation of tobacco. The large space allotted to this industry has in fact given ample opportunity for a thorough exploitation of every branch of the tobacco trade.

Color Line Drawn in Havana.

The race issue has been raised in Havana by the Havana Tobacco Company. Heretofore negroes, mulattoes, Spanish and creoles have been employed indiscriminately, both men and women. But recently a number of negro and mulatto women were dismissed from several of the larger factories, and their places were filled with Spanish girls.

Egyptian Cigarette Manufacturers Combine.

A London report states that an English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of eight of the leading cigarette manufacturers of Cairo, Egypt. The promoters of the syndicate are not known, neither details of the deal.

1903 Sumatra.

Prices in 1903 Sumatra leaf are high, principally owing to the prospective demand. The general opinion seems to be that desirable domestic wrapper will be scarce, and that consequently there will be a run on the Sumatra. A feature on the market this year was the exceptionally high prices paid by some of the German houses for leaf of particular quality.

As regards quality, it is thought that the crop was a satisfactory one, and that the yield will be good, though as yet it is hardly possible to speak with certainty.

Tuckett's Factory Reopened.

The Tuckett Co. resumed operations at its Hamilton factory as well as at its Montreal and London branches on May 3, when the majority of workmen returned to work. It is reported that the decision of the local union not to press its demands was arrived at as a result of the visit of former President Strausser, of the Cigarmakers' International Union, to Hamilton.

New Brand of Cigars.

A new cigar brand "Symbol" has been placed on the market by T. J. Horrocks, Toronto. All "Symbol" cigars are packed in Cuban cigar boxes, edged and labelled with handsome lithographic designs.

Tobacco Notes.

The annual convention of the National Cigar Leaf Board of Trade, which met last week at Atlantic City, New Jersey, was rather more slimly attended than usual. One reason given for the falling off is the disappointment of many delegates who had hoped the place of meeting would be St. Louis, and when the convention was changed to Atlantic City refused to act. Many local boards are reported to have failed to elect delegates altogether.

A CHILLIWACK MAN.

MR. J. H. ASHWELL, manager of Ashwell's department stores, Chilliwack, B. C., was in Toronto last week en route for the World's Faie at St. Louis. He is making his journey by easy stages. Before reaching the "Queen City" he spent four or five days in Winnipeg. Mr. Ashwell is one of the most progressive business men in the west, and although he works hard he believes that it pays in the long run for business men to take an occasional vacation as they not only gain in health but in experience.

Besides their store at Chilliwack the firm also have stores at Sardis and Rosedale, B. C. Their store at Chilliwack has recently undergone some improvements and has now a frontage of 93 feet and a depth of 50 feet. Their Chilliwack and Sardis stores are connected by a private telephone system 2½ miles long, and it has been found very convenient. The system is now being connected with every department at the firm's headquarters.

Mr. Ashwell, to use his own words, is a crank on system. He believes that a business man to be successful must be systematic and have his methods thoroughly up-to-date. He is always on the lookout for up-to-date methods and his system of bookkeeping is of the very latest design. He has recently introduced into business a card system for keeping stock. By this system the firm are able to tell every night just how their stock stands in the particular lines to which it applies and not only does the system enable them to ascertain this but also to check any mistakes which may have been made by a clerk in not entering goods which have been sent out to customers. At present the system only applies to the chief staple lines in the store, but Mr. Ashwell expects in time to have it so extended that it will include every line. He is so far very enthusiastic over the results obtained.

Speaking of business in his neighborhood during the past Winter he says it has been fairly good, although the weather had been more severe than usual. The outlook for the future he considers good.

"Seeding was well on the way when I left home," he said, "and the apple trees and cherry trees were in blossom."

Within the last year or two a couple of creameries have been started in the vicinity of Chilliwack, and Mr. Ashwell said that one of them last year made 176,000 lbs., which had netted the farmers an average price of 23c. The butter from these creameries retails in Chilliwack at 30c, and in Vancouver at 35c per lb.

"These creameries," said Mr. Ashwell, "have been a great benefit to us and have solved for us the problem of rank butter. Now nearly all the farmers take their milk to the creamery where it is made into good butter."

The Ashwell firm is one of the pioneers in that part of British Columbia, they having been in business for 33 years. The father of J. H. Ashwell was the founder of the business and he settled in Chilliwack about 40 years ago.

BLENDING OF COFFEE.

"THE desirable blending of coffee is a matter of discovery," says the Interstate Grocer, "and this in turn must be made by mixing the various growths of coffee, while the only test is in the cup.

"In making up blends, it is safest to blend the same growth of coffee, but it is not always possible to get the same results from the same growths.

"From what is known as the washed species of Mexican, Salvador, Hawaiian, Porto Rico, Costa Rica, Caracas and Guatemala are obtained the largest growth in the coffee bean. The most popular of these are Guatemala, Salvador and Mexican. None of these coffees will blend one with the other. It causes a conflict which seems to destroy the distinctive flavor of each. Tests made with only coffee grown under the rule of the United States Government have not proved satisfactory.

"Coffee with blights or quakers in them are not favorites, but many a good drinking coffee has been turned down on account of quakers and a poorer one taken that is free of quakers; when, as a matter of fact, tests prove that these quakers act as an absorbent for any rankness which may be in the coffee, especially Rio and Santos. A mark of Santos which has 25 per cent. of quakers may, upon testing, show up to be a very fine drink.

"Large bean coffees, such as Santos, aside from the washed qualities that have just been described, are found to be what is called a 'woody' flavor. This is frequently encountered in the very old crop, large beans, and it is a fact acknowledged by planters that the overgrowth of these coffees is liable to take in the 'woody' taste of the tree, which is caused by over-development. In Santos, also in Rio, may be included Maracaibos, Natural Mexican, in fact most any unwashed coffee is liable to take on that flavor for reasons mentioned.

"The medium-sized plump bean, full, fat, and well developed, is always the best. By this is not meant that all large bean coffees are 'woody.' If they get to be two or three years old, however, they will become so to a greater or less extent. This was brought out very clearly by the crop of 1901 and 1902, which is known in Brazil as the 'Bumper Crop.'"

How long does it take the people to recognise and appreciate a good thing?

This question has caused every manufacturer some very anxious moments when first placing some new product on the market. To such we would say: It all depends on the merit of the goods in question.

Look at the sale of Postal Orders. First year, 1881, only six hundred and forty-seven thousand were sold. Second year, 1882, four and one-half millions were used.

LEES & LANGLEY'S WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE

was only placed on the market last year and our sales in the last month have been more than the combined sales of the first year.

The people soon recognise and appreciate a good thing.

German Concentrated Grape Wine Vinegar is imported direct from the celebrated Rhine Wine District of Germany. Recommended by the highest medical authorities of Europe. Requires merely the addition of pure water—ready in two minutes.

1—This is an absolutely pure product of Grapes, made in the famous Rhine Wine district of Germany.

2—It contains no Alcohol, consequently will not form the very objectionable vinegar eels, or "mother."

3—Being put up in concentrated form, no freight is required to be paid on Water and heavy barrels.

4—It will not freeze, consequently can be shipped at all times, and dealers need not stock in the fall for winter's trade, as is now done with ordinary Vinegars.

5—When diluted according to directions it is cheaper than other Vinegars.

6—For pickling purposes it is unequalled as it makes the pickles firm, and imparts a delicious flavor.

The foregoing are a few of the leading advantages of using Grape Wine Vinegar.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

CANADA AND THE PREFERENTIAL TARIFF

VIEWS OF BUSINESS MEN AND PUBLIC MEN.

CANADIANS of all classes and of both political parties are united in their opinion that the preference granted to British goods in 1898 has been a move in the right direction.

The preference itself has been of undoubted benefit to the British people. Imports into Canada, which had been slowly falling off in volume prior to its adoption, have been largely on the increase ever since.

The preference has received and is receiving the support in Canada of public men on both sides of politics, of business men from Atlantic to Pacific and of the manufacturers of the country.

The preference has been granted voluntarily by the Canadian people and as an expression of good will towards the Mother Country. To say that Canadians regret their action is untrue.

Notwithstanding this there are some influential men and newspapers in England who are deliberately misrepresenting Canada's position in this respect.

In order to state the case for the preference in as plain and forcible a manner as possible, it will be necessary to explain its provisions and to adduce evidence to show the universal support it receives in Canada.

The Scheme Proposed.

A British mechanic, a leader in trades union circles in Sheffield, England, and a wholesale grocer and president of the Board of Trade in Toronto in the late eighties, independently arrived at the same conclusion, that a customs tariff giving mutual preferences to British goods would be not only most advantageous, but would be absolutely necessary for the future existence of the British Empire. Others may have held similar opinions, but they gave no public utterance to them.

Mr. Morgan Gregory, a file forger, and a thoughtful, intelligent workman in the employ of Thomas Jowitt & Sons, Sheffield, England, and at one time the president of the combined trades unions of that city, speaking at a meeting of trades unionists, advocated a closer union between the United Kingdom and her colonies, as a means of benefiting the great masses of the working people. Such a scheme, he said, must necessarily "impose conditions of trading such as will induce us to take each other's productions in preference to those of foreign nations." He suggested a duty on all goods grown outside the United Kingdom and her colonies, commencing at ten per cent. and increasing yearly until it reached fifty per cent.

Mr. Gregory's proposals were so well received that he issued them in pamphlet form in 1889.

Mr. John I. Davidson, in his annual presidential address in 1900 and again in 1901, advocated a preferential tariff for the Empire, and the Toronto Board of Trade unanimously adopted it. Mr. Davidson is a Scotchman, was brought up on free trade literature, and believed thoroughly in free trade principles until he learned from actual experience in the New World that, while such principles were right in theory, in modern one-sided practice they were unprofitable. He therefore called his policy "Fair Trade."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier of Canada, favors the principle of a preferential tariff within the Empire and has offered to recommend to Parliament that Canada give the United Kingdom an additional preference on lists of selected articles, provided Great Britain adopts the principle.

The First Steps.

In 1891 the Toronto Board of Trade promulgated this resolution: "That this board is of opinion that the time has come in the interests of the Empire when closer trade relations should be entered into between Great Britain and her colonies, and that a duty imposed by Great Britain on the food products of other nations with tariffs against her own productons will not enhance the value of the food products of the Empire, but will materially increase the production therein and place her in an independent position for her food supply in the near future."

That same year this resolution was followed by a resolution passed unanimously by both Houses of Parliament in Canada praying the British Government to denounce the German treaties in order to make it possible to bring about a preference.

Then came another resolution which was also passed unanimously by both Houses in Canada providing that if, and when, Britain gave her colonies preferential treatment in the home markets Canada would do the same for British goods.

These were passed under a Conservative Government. The Liberals came into power in 1896. Below is recorded how they went still further in favor of a preferential tariff and how they were supported by the leading business organizations, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and by the people of Canada generally.

Nature of the Preference.

The British preferential tariff, which was introduced in the budget of the Hon. W. S. Fielding in 1897, provided that beginning on 1st August, 1898, all imports from Great Britain, should come into Canada on paying a duty of customs, twenty-five per cent. less than that levied on goods from foreign countries. It also provided that West Indian products should be admitted at the full reduction of twenty-five per cent. with a similar provision for any other British colony or possession, the customs tariff of which is on the whole as favorable to Canada as the British preferential tariff is to such colony or possession; provided, however, (a) that unmanufactured articles admitted under such preferential tariff are bona fide manufactures of a country or countries entitled to the benefits of such tariff, and (b) that such benefits shall not extend to the importation of articles into the production of which there has not entered a substantial portion of the labor of such countries. Wines, malt liquors, spirits, spirituous liquors, liquid medicines and articles containing alcohol, tobacco, cigars and cigarettes are not included in the preference.

By the budget of 1900, the preference was increased from 25 per cent to 33 1-3 per cent. from July 1, 1900.

Upon the introduction of the preference, the Government press and Government supporters throughout the country were loud in their praise of the measure. The Opposition press and the Opposition supporters veiled their approval behind criticisms of generalities. On the whole, the Canadian people were well pleased. This approval has continued until the present day and any opposition to the measure is purely sectional and by no means national.

The aims of Canadians are, however, towards the securing of reciprocal treatment from Great Britain and the other parts of the Empire. Owing to the fact that she herself has already granted a preference, Canada can consistently advocate a preferential policy within the Empire. Her spokesmen have been her statesmen at colonial conferences, her boards of trade, as represented at the Congress of Chambers of Commerce, and her public men, as occasion has arisen.

Resolution of the Montreal Board of Trade.

Prior to the meeting of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire in Montreal, in August, 1903, the Board of Trade of that city prepared a resolution on the subject of preferential trade within the Empire which was duly presented to the congress. It illustrates the general tenor of opinion of the business men of Canada on this important subject and is reproduced as follows:

"Whereas in the resolution adopted by the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, held in London, June, 1900, it was stated that an advantageous commercial bonds is one of the strongest links in national unity, and that the maintenance and strengthening of trade is the keystone of a nation's successful development;

"Whereas, it is the opinion of this Congress that it is in the interests of the Empire that some practical steps should be taken towards consummating such an arrangement;

"Whereas, the British colonies are admittedly rich in natural resources, possessing as they do vast areas of arable and mineral lands as yet undeveloped;

"Whereas, the colonies are even now producing in rapidly increasing quantities, grain, flour, live stock, wool, sugar, fruits, cheese, butter, etc. as well as the yield of fisheries, forests and mines, all of which are continually required by the British consumer;

"It is therefore resolved, that this Congress is of opinion that Great Britain can best serve the interests of the Empire by giving a preference in her markets to the products of the colonies as against the products of foreign countries, it being believed that such preference would (1) benefit Great Britain by largely freeing her from dependence upon foreign countries for her food supplies; (2) stimulate reciprocal trade within the Empire; (3) develop colonial enterprises, and moreover serve to make the colonies attractive, not only to the large number of British subjects emigrating annually from the British Isles, but also to the surplus population of other countries; and

"It is further resolved, that this Congress hereby urges the Imperial Government to appoint a Royal Commission composed of representatives from the United Kingdom and the colonies to investigate conditions and to suggest such preferential treatment of trade within the Empire as would insure the fullest benefit thereto."

Resolution of the Winnipeg Board of Trade.

The Winnipeg Board of Trade, speaking for the commercial interests of Western Canada, likewise introduced a resolution to the Congress bearing on the subject of preferential trade. It stated that:

"Whereas, the granting by Canada of a preferential tariff on British imports was done with a view to inaugurating a policy which it was hoped might be taken up by the other parts of the Empire, especially the Mother Country, and that in time a certain measure of reciprocity might be looked for, with a consequent knitting together of the commercial interests of the whole Empire;

"And, whereas, at present one country not enjoying this preference has discriminated against Canadian products, while so far no official favoring discrimination has been shown by those who have received the preference;

"And, whereas, the natural result of this state of affairs will be the creating of a feeling that this giving of a one-sided preference cannot be continued;

"Be it resolved, that this Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire places on record its opinion that every effort should be made to continue, and enlarge on, the policy of preference to be given and received within the Empire, thus strengthening the commercial interests which bind the colonies to each other, and to the Mother Country, and adding that very powerful factor to the sentimental and patriotic tie which so closely knits them together."

Library in the Chamberlain Residence at Highbury.

Residence of Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain at Highbury.

Following up this general declaration of opinion, the Winnipeg Board of Trade at its general meeting on November 25th last, resolved "That in view of the fiscal policy advocated by the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain of tariff preference within the Empire, this board again expresses its opinion that the best interests of the Empire would be served by the adoption of such changes in the fiscal policies of the several parts of the Empire as would encourage preferential trade."

Resolution of Toronto Board of Trade.

The Toronto Board of Trade at its annual meeting held on October 30th, 1903, adoped the following resolution:

"Whereas, it is generally recognized that an advantageous commercial bond is the strongest link in national unity and that the maintenance and strengthening of trade is the keystone of a nation's successful development;

"And whereas, the existence of an empire is largely dependent upon the material prosperity of its people,

"It is resolved, that in the opinion of this meeting the bonds of the British Empire would be materially strengthened and the union of the various parts of His Majesty's dominions greatly consolidated by the adoption of a commercial policy such as was outlined by the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain at Glasgow on the 6th day of October, 1903, and that the Board of Trade of the city of Toronto supports that policy."

Resolution of the St. John Board of Trade.

To illustrate the opinion of the business men of the Maritime Provinces a resolution adopted by the St. John, N.B., Board of Trade at a meeting held on 3rd November, 1903, is set forth as follows:

"Whereas, the vast natural resources of the British colonies are rapidly becoming the stay and security of the Empire, and,

"Whereas, in Canada especially, the increase in railway construction, the enormous agricultural development and the unprecedented immigration since 1900 have assured her commercial future, and, whereas, the strengthening and maintenance of colonial trade is the keystone of the Empire's stability;

"Therefore, resolved, that this Board of Trade is of the opinion that Great Britain will best serve the trade and labor interests of the United Kingdom and her colonies by establishing a reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire, whereby, at all British ports, British goods would be admitted at a lower rate of duty than foreign goods;

"And further resolved, that this board appreciates the far-seeing and courageous statesmanship of the ex-Colonial Secretary, Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, as shown by his efforts to secure from the British electorate a mandate to negotiate for such preferential arrangement within the Empire."

Resolution of Vancouver Board of Trade.

At the monthly meeting of 6th May, 1902, the following was adopted and forwarded to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, viz.:

"Whereas, in the opinion of this board it is of the utmost importance to the principle of the Imperial Unity of the Empire that there should be an interchange of the products of the different portions of the Empire and that this end can only be satisfactorily attained by a mutual interchange under a system of rebate of the customs duties being allowed on products coming from other parts of the Empire, as against similar products from foreign countries; and

If the Imperial Government are prepared to adopt the preferential policy and give our products exemption from the duties now imposed or hereafter to be imposed on foreign goods, we will be prepared to grant some further preference, subject to certain conditions —Hon. W. S. Fielding, Finance Minister of Canada.

"Whereas, the Dominion of Canada has already put this principle in active operation by allowing 33 1-3 per cent. rebate of the customs duties on articles being the product of the United Kingdom, British India, etc., and

"Whereas, the Commonwealth of Australia and the African colonies are large consumers of lumber and fish, both of which are among the chief products of the Province of British Columbia, and both of which can be supplied in sufficient quantities to fill the demand of these colonies and this at no greater cost than from a foreign country;

"Resolved, that in the opinion of this board, the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, at the meeting of the premiers of the different colonies expected shortly to take place in London, England, should urge the claims of Canada to a preferential treatment of its products alike in the United Kingdom and the colonies, and should endeavor to obtain the same by proffering similar concessions on the part of the Dominion.

Canadian Legislatures Favor the Preference.

The Legislative Assemblies of New Brunswick in the east and of Manitoba in the west have passed resolutions expressing their confidence in the value of the Canadian preferential tariff and the advisibility of establishing preferential arrangements within the Empire. The passing of these resolutions was naturally accompanied by a display of party spirit, so far as the wording was concerned, but in both cases it was apparent that the vital issue was a national affair and above the realm of party politics.

The resolution of the New Brunswick Legislature is couched in the following terms:

"Resolved, that this House believes that the adoption of the principle of preferential trade throughout the British Empire would greatly stimulate commercial intercourse, and by promoting the development of the resources and industries of the several parts strengthen the Empire. That this House has watched with great interest the progress of the discussion of this question in the United Kingdom, South Africa and throughout Canada, and desires to express its hearty sympathy with every effort made to accomplish by constitutional methods the commercial organization of the Empire on the basis of such preference.

"This House also desires to express its approval of the voluntary action of the Government and Parliament of Canada in extending a preference to the manufacturers and products of the Mother Land, which was a great stride forward along the line of Imperial unity, and afforded most striking proof that the poeple of Canada were heartily in sympathy with the movement in favor of inter-imperial trade preference, which in the opinion of this House will be productive of most beneficial results not only to the Mouther Country but to all parts of the Empire."

The Empire League's Statement.

The British Empire League, an organization which has at heart the welfare of the Empire and can be relied on to express an unbiased opinion on Imperial affairs, has branches in all parts of the British dominions. On March 16 last, the Canadian branch met at Ottawa. The attention of the branch was directed to the prevalence in Great Britain of the opinion that Canada repudiated the preference already granted and was not in favor of the preferential policy. A strong resolution, denying this charge was moved by the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, M.P., a prominent French-Canadian ex-Minister and seconded by Benjamin Russell, K.C., M.P., a prominent Liberal, and unanimously carried. The resolution reads that:

"Whereas, the Canadian Parliament in the session of 1897 gave Great Britain a preference which is now 33 1-3 per cent. in favor of her products in the Canadian market;

"And whereas, in 1898 the Canadian Parliament gave a preference to West Indian sugar;

"And whereas, at the Imperial Conference of 1902 the Canadian Premier in order to carry out the principle of mutual preferential tariffs, offered in addition to the present preference to recommend to Parliament an additional preference on lists of selected articles, (a) by further reducing the duties in favor of the United Kingdom; (b) by raising the duties against foreign imports; (c) by imposing duties on certain foreign imports now on the free list;

"Therefore this league expresses its regret that the assertion should be made in Great Britain, that Canada is not in favor of a mutual preferential tariff."

The Manufacturers.

One would naturally suppose that if there were any opposition to the present preference to Great Britain and to preferential tariffs in general, it would emanate from the class likely to be most seriously inconvenienced — in other words, the manufacturers of Canada. Such, however, is not the case. Taking the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, an organization comprising over 1,400 manufacturers in the Dominion, as the mouthpiece of the industrial interests of the country, it will be found that no more outspoken supporters of the preference are to be found in the land. The association annually reaffirms its confidence in the usefulness and value of the preference to the people of Canada.

At the last annual meeting of the association held in Toronto in September, 1903, the resolution of the preceding year was again carried without opposition. It is worded as follows:

"Resolved, that in the opinion of this association the changed conditions which now obtain in Canada demand the immediate and thorough revision of the tariff upon lines which will more effectually transfer to the workshops of our Dominion the manufacture of many of the goods which we now import from other countries;

"That, in any such revision the interests of all sections of the community, whether of agriculture, mining, fishing, or manufacturing, should be fully considered, with a view not only to the preservation, but to the further development of all those great natural industries;

"That, while such a tariff should primarily be framed for Canadian interests, it should nevertheless give a substantial preference to the Mother Country, and also to any other part of the British Empire with which reciprocal preferential trade can be arranged, recognizing always that under any other conditions the minimum tariff must afford adequate protection to all Canadian producers."

An incident occurred during the progress of the convention of Canadian manufacturers which illustrates their firm support of the preferential proposals. During the afternoon session of the first day of meeting word arrived that the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the exponent of the preferential policy within the Empire, had resigned from his office of Colonial Secretary in the British Government. A telegram was immediately prepared and forwarded to Mr. Chamberlain, expressing in the following terms the sentiments of the association at this crisis:

"The Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, London, England. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in convention assembled, desire to express our deep regret that your withdrawal from the British Cabinet has been rendered necessary. This association has followed your proposals with the greatest solicitude, and hopes your efforts to adapt Great Britain's fiscal policy to existing conditions will continue to be vigorously prosecuted."

Public Men.

Sir William Mulock, Postmaster-General in the Laurier Ministry, speaking at the meeting of the British Empire League in Canada on March 16, 1904, stated that, "The great mass of public opinion in Canada would welcome reciprocal trade between Canada and Great Britain and between Canada and the other parts of the Empire, satisfactory to the various contracting parties, and when opinion in Great Britain is sufficiently crystallized to enable representatives to negotiate terms, there will be found to be a hearty response from those who will represent Canada on that occasion."

Sir William then moved the adoption of a report in which was the following: "Mr. Chamberlain has resigned from his position in the Cabinet and has gone out to fight the great battle for the consolidation and preservation of our Empire before the public at the polls. He has entered upon the fight with extraordinary energy and ability. He has established a propaganda of great strength and power. He has brought the question into the fore-front of British politics, to the exclusion almost of all minor questions. The newspapers, magazines and weekly journals are teeming with articles and letters pro and con. Books are being published on both sides of the question, and public attention is keenly aroused. The league in Canada is in earnest and hearty sympathy with Mr. Chamberlain in the spirited and disinterested efforts he is making, to carry into effect what we in Canada have for so long been striving."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, an ex-Premier of the Dominion and the Conservative leader in the Senate of Canada, speaking at the same meeting, in seconding the adoption of the above, remarked, "Canada will be prepared to make great concessions in order to bring about the desired result (e.g. reciprocal trade relations) and Britain must meet us in the same way."

Sir Mackenzie Bowell's latest deliverance on this subject was April 14th last, when preferential trade in the Empire was the subject of brief discussion in the Senate. It arose over the alleged anti-preferential remarks of the Canadian Emigration Commissioner in regard to preferential trade. During his remarks Senator Bowell said: "My own view upon that question in a very few words is that if we ever expect to obtain preferential trade between the Mother Country and the colonies we must be prepared to make certain concessions perhaps in some respects further than we have made. I might elaborate that idea, but I do not propose to do so now. Everyone knows that ever since I have been in public life I have been a very strong advocate of what is termed a protective policy. Whether right or wrong, the older I get the more I am convinced of the correctness of that policy in a country like this; but for the sake of knitting together and creating a stronger bond between the Home Government and ourselves, I would be quite prepared to go a certain distance further, provided it did not destroy the industries of Canada."

> For the sake of knitting together and creating a stronger bond between the Home Government and ourselves, I would be quite prepared to go a certain distance further (i.e in giving a preference), provided it did not destroy the industries of Canada —Sir MacKenzie Bowell, ex-Premier of Canada.

Causes of Erroneous Opinion.

Much of the erroneous opinion which exists in England with regard to Canada's attitude towards the preference, arises from two causes. In the first place English opinion has been influenced harmfully by the statements of certain enemies of the Imperial policy in Canada, who have misrepresented the sentiment in this country. In the second place the statements of friends of the preference have been perverted to suit the interests of those persons in England who are anxious to place a false face on the question.

To illustrate what is meant by these statements one need but refer to two instances of recent occurrence. A certain British journal sent a staff correspondent to Canada to investigate the preferential question and incidentally to enquire into Canada's abilities to supply wheat to Britain. He was referred to a gentleman whose word bears great weight in the Old Country, but who is decidedly hostile to Imperial interests. This gentleman on hearing his errand, immediately advised him to go to Minneapolis, the centre of the United States flour industry, and make enquiries there.

An instance of the second method of biassing English opinion is supplied by another gentleman favorable to the preference, who was likewise interviewed by the correspondents of two anti-Chamberlain newspapers in Britain. Instead of allowing the gentleman to do the talking, the journalists proceeded to take matters into their own hands. The result was the interviews appeared in the British newspapers, but so expressed, as to be entirely misleading.

A Further Preference Offered.

It has been contended in Great Britain that Canada has already given the utmost preference possible to British goods and that she is not prepared to go any farther. This opinion, which has unfortunately gained credence in the old land, is entirely erroneous. Canada made distinct advances at the conference of colonial premiers.

In the words of the Hon. Mr. Fielding, one of Canada's representatives at the conference: "Not only was the subject discussed again and again in the conference, but we had frequent opportunities of discussing it with the British Ministers individually, and particularly with Mr. Chamberlan and Mr. Gerald Balfour, the president of the Board of Trade. We contended, as appears in the blue book containing the proceedings of the conference, that the preference was not only of sentimental value but also of great material value to the Britsh to the lady of the house when entertaining her friends in a cup of Coffee, to have the satisfaction of knowing that she is presenting them with one of the choicest and most popular brands of goods now being sold throughout Canada!

Its strength will surprise you; its perfect flavor and aroma delight you; it will save you many a disappointment by handling these goods; there is nothing that detracts from the pleasure of the breakfast table so much as a remark that the Coffee is very poor. This difficulty will never occur when MECCA COFFEE is used.

These goods have had to line up and take their stand side by side with all the popular brands now offering to the public; and what has been the result? MECCA stands to-day as a Giant whose popularity is the envy of rival competitors, the admiration of all lovers of this cheering cup.

Our experience of many years has taught us that there will always be a demand for high-grade goods.

John Smith, of Tonawanda, can endorse anything from a baking powder to a horseless carriage without injury to himself and without much help to the article endorsed; but when hundreds of the foremost grocers of Canada to-day are sending us orders for MECCA COFFEE we feel that we have in our possession a brand of goods that we can sincerely recommend as a leader to all grocers who delight to please their customers.

You cannot procure any commodity in your line that will be productive of so good results as MECCA COFFEE.

We respectfully await your solicitation for a sample, which we will have pleasure in forwarding with despatch. These goods are carefully packed and sealed in 25-pound tins, and always fresh, as we roast every day. This will always guarantee you fresh goods.

trader and manufacturer. While we contended that the preference already granted was of more value to Great Britain than the British officials had been disposed to admit, we told them that if the Imperial Government were prepared to adopt the preferential policy and give our products exemption from the duties now imposed or hereafter to be imposed on foreign goods, we would be prepared to grant some further preference, subject to certain conditions which were clearly laid down."

A Warning.

Before concluding this article, which has been primarily intended to prove that the vast majority of the Canadian people are in favor of the preferential treatment of British goods and would gladly welcome reciprocal arrangements throughout the Empire, a note of warning must be sounded. Though Canadians are at present intensely pro-British in their sympathies, and though the Imperial spirit is strong, a continuance of this state of mind cannot be taken for granted for long. A national spirit is growing in Canada, fostered by an intense pride in the vast resources of forest, sea and mines, with which she has been blessed. A change of attitude towards Britain is far from impossible, and, on the question of the preference, Canada may prove intensely sensitive. In the words of Hon. Mr. Fielding in his last budget speech, "Putting aside other considerations, if the British Government and people do not show any appreciation of the value of the preference, then so far as the British Government and people are concerned, they cannot complain if we see fit to modify or change that preferential tariff."

Though reciprocity with the United States is practically a dead issue, today, its revival is by no means a remote possibility. Were the United States to take it into its head to offer favors to Canada the former might become a strong rival to Britain in this country. Then, without reciprocal treatment from Britain, Canada might be led to turn from the Mother Country to her neighbor to the south. The danger to British interests is by no means as impossible as it may seem at present.

RIGHTS OF FOREIGN CREDITORS IN BANKRUPTCY CASES.

(From United States Consul Monaghan, Chemnitz, Germany.)

FRANCE.

THE laws of France do not require that foreign creditors shall be represented before the courts by an attorney. This procedure is not alone superfluous, but also dangerous, for the attorney's fees are not regulated by law when dealing with foreign creditors and can be very much in excess of that prescribed by the French law.

In France it is customary and advisable, in a case of bankruptcy, to appoint a local executor; most of these men belong to the commercial courts. These officials look after the interests of foreign creditors with a great deal of care, and, as a rule, obtain very good results. The usual method of procedure in such cases is for the foreign creditor to receive an official notification of the failure from an executor wherein he offers his services. If one has no regular representative at the place of failure, it is wise for him to accept the executor's offer and sign the power of attorney which he always incloses.

RUSSIA.

The laws in Russia pertaining to bankruptcy are very severe. A merchant in Russia can be declared bankrupt if his liabilities exceed 1,500 rubles ($772.50) and he has not the ready cash to meet the same. He can be arrested and his retention depends on the good will of his creditors. It is claimed that this law has a very good effect on the business world, for it destroys the opportunity of a certain class of business men to shirk the responsibilities which they have toward their creditors.

A creditor who enters claim against a bankrupt must deposit 75 rubles ($38.63) for the cost of court. All foreign creditors must make claim within twelve months after date of failure, otherwise their claims are void.

In Russia the court publishes the fact of the bankruptcy, but gives no official notification to the creditors; for this reason foreign creditors know nothing of the existing conditions until it is too late.

For the above reasons it would be wise for exporters to keep a watchful eye on their outstanding debts in Russia.

ITALY.

In Italy creditors have the right to demand 6 per cent. interest on all debts not paid when due. Regularly accepted drafts which are not honored at expiration can at once go to protest, but must pass through a notary's hands. The court executor can perform this duty, but the law demands several days' grace before the belongings of the debtor can be sold.

All business men in Italy are compelled to keep two account books, and each and every transaction must be entered in each of these books. When a page is full a Government official comes and examines the same, and, if he finds it in order, stamps, numbers, and signs it.

In case a merchant is pressed for payment by a creditor and he can prove by his account book that his resources are greater than his liabilities, the court will grant the merchant six months' time to settle up with his creditors. During these six months his business is watched over by an official from the court and a representative of the creditor or creditors.

In the case of bankruptcy, creditors must send in their claims to the official who has charge of the case. All claims of foreign creditors must be attested to in order to show correctness of the creditor's demands.

TURKEY

All cases of debt between Turks and foreigners are dealt with in the local courts. In such cases a consulate's dragoman is present to protect the interests of the foreign creditor and to see to it that the court proceedings are in keeping with the law. In Smyrna foreign creditors have a still greater protection; for, apart from the dragoman, there are two other consular representatives at the court.

In case plaintiff and defendant are of different nationalities, the court is held at the consulate of the defendant. It is claimed that it is very hard to get justice, on the ground that the sympathy of the court (consulate) is usually with the defendant, and under these conditions the costs of court are very high.

Foreign merchants who find it necessary to bring suit against insolvent Turkish firms will always do better to compromise rather than bring the matter to court, for as a rule there is but little left for the creditor.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN.

In these countries the only thing for a creditor to do is to send in his claims and make sure that the same are recognized. After this has been done he has the right to refuse to accept the propositions offered by the bankrupt, and can insist upon court proceedings, in case he believes the bankruptcy was brought about with dishonest intentions.

BRISTOL AND THE CANADIAN EXPORT TRADE

LIVERPOOL has always been regarded by people on this side of the Atlantic, as the "Mecca" of Britain's trans-Atlantic trade, and that splendid port has certainly absorbed a great proportion of the traffic with America. But a rival has arisen. The port

MR. F. B. GIRDLESTONE
Secretary and General Manager Bristol Docks of Bristol is now bidding for a larger share of the ocean trade and her pretentions are well supported.

Especially towards Canada does the ancient port look for the fulfilment of those dreams of greatness which her business men have been indulging in. And it would not be surprising if the future should witness the establishment of an enormous traffic between Bristol and Canada.

The present dock system within the port of Bristol comprises a dock of 19 acres at Avonmouth on the Gloucestershire side of the mouth of the River Avon with a lock 485 feet by 70 feet, and one of 12 acres with a lock 444 feet by 66 feet at Portishead on the Somerset side, and a floating harbor 70 acres in extent in the heart of the ancient city, all fitted with commodious sheds and modern appliances for the quick and economical handling of goods.

Owing to the considerable expansion taking place in the Canadian trade at Avonmouth and the greatly increased and increasing size of vessels employed therein, the corporation are constructing a new dock at Avonmouth at an estimated cost of two millions, connecting with the present dock, having a lock 850 feet in length by 100 feet wide, which vessels of the largest type afloat or building will be able to enter at practically any state of the tide.

The port of Bristol, situated as it is at the head of the great estuary of the Bristol channel which runs up towards the middle of the southern half of England, possesses excellent docking facilities, accommodation for very large vessels at Avonmouth and Portishead and for moderate sized vessels at Bristol—thus affording great advantages for the economical distribution of seaborne commodities among the thickly inhabited mining districts of South Wales and the large industrial and agricultural centres in the midland and western counties and for the export of minerals and manufactured goods.

General View Avonmouth Dock, Bristol.

With its excellent geographical and maritime position and direct railway and canal communication from the ship's side to all the leading centres of commerce, Bristol possesses great advantages for the distribution of imported goods and the collection of export traffic. It is the natural port for the import of Canadian and American produce, being 32 miles nearer to New York than Liverpool and 26 miles nearer than Southampton, and four of the largest systems of railway, viz., the Great Western, Midland, London and South-Western, and London and North-Western companies have access to the docks. By means of special trains which are run over the two former lines, dead meat and perishable goods are delivered direct ex liners into the Central London Meat Market in four hours, and into Birmingham in three hours after being loaded up at Avonmouth dock.

The management of the docks is in the hands of a docks committee, who have entrusted the active control to the hands of Mr. F. B. Girdlestone, secretary-treasurer of the committee. To give some idea of what has been accomplished since Mr. Girdlestone became general manager, we may mention that the capital of the united undertaking has risen from £1,500,000 to £2,750,000, and the revenue from £105,000 to £326,000; while the foreign tonnage has increased from 591,000 net register to 925,000 tons, and the weight of merchandise handled annually has gone up from 339,000 tons to 1,200,000 tons.

The Export Pear Trade

By W. A. MacKinnon, Chief of Fruit Division, Ottawa.

THE following varieties of pears are most in demand in Great Britain, Bartlett, Duchess, Comice, Bosc, Anjou, Easter Beurre, Louise Bonne, Keiffer.

Picking.

The most important point to be observed in picking pears for export is the degree of ripeness which they have attained. As a rule pears should have attained almost their full size, but not have turned to the ripening color. Bartlett should be quite green and firm when picked. Especial care is required in selecting Clapp's Favorite, as this variety is apt to decay at the core, or "go sleepy," while appearing quite sound. This is one of the chief reasons why it is not recommended as an export variety. It need hardly be added that great care should be exercised in picking, to see that the fruit is not bruised to the slightest extent. It would be well to have pears always picked into canvas-lined baskets.

Handling.

Pears should be handled even more carefully than eggs. On the journey to the packing house they should be carried in a spring wagon so as to avoid unnecessary jolting. Export fruit which is to go forward in cold storage should be placed in a cool packing house or cellar immediately after picking and should remain there loose in the baskets until it can be wrapped and packed. These latter operations should never take place while the fruit is in the sun or is still warm, but not more than 24 hours ought to elapse between picking and storing.

Grading.

In grading pears for export it is necessary to leave out all diseased, overripe or damaged fruit, and all undersized specimens. Bartlett pears measuring less than 2 1-4 inches across the core are not recommended for export. It may be argued that a 2 1-4 inch Bartlett pear is a very good and attractive fruit; but it should be borne in mind that the British purchaser is accustomed to very large and uniformly perfect specimens of this variety, coming from France and California. In the inevitable comparison between Canadian pears and those of the same varieties coming from other sources, the small-sized Canadian Bartlett or Duchess is sure to suffer. It is a well known saying that the Duchess is worthless if it weighs less than four ounces; while this may not be strictly true, it is undoubtedly a fact that a small Duchess is not wanted in the British market. The Duchess is normally a large pear and should measure at least 2 1-2 inches, preferably more, in order to be selected for export. Any ill-formed or mis-shapen specimens should be rejected in grading. The operation of grading may be summed up by saying that its purpose is to secure a number of packages uniformly filled with perfect specimens of good size.

W. A. MacKinnon,
Chief of Fruit Division, Ottawa.

Wrapping.

Every pear which is shipped to Great Britain should be wrapped separately in paper. The ordinary tiuue paper, or light weight manilla, has proved very satisfactory, though good results have been obtained by a double wrapping, the inner being of waxed paper. The paper used should be more than large enough to enclose the specimens in order that there may be no danger of its slipping off. Moreover, the additional paper helps to prevent the pears rubbing against each other or being bruised against the sides of the case. It is the universal opinion of the leading British importers that no pears should be sent from America without wrapping.

Packing.

The fruit should be closely and neatly packed with the stems turned all one way if possible, and so arranged as to completely fill the package without the addition of any excelsior, or paper shavings. If packing material is necessary, only so much should be used as will prevent the fruit from rattling in the case. If the pears have not room to rattle about individually, the package may be considered tight enough, even if by shaking the entire mass may be made to shift slightly in the package.

It is a common practice in Ontario to use one of the narrow sides of the half case as a lid; but in British markets one of the broad sides is removed to expose the fruit. It would therefore seem advisable to adopt the Californian method which is to lay the case flat to be packed, using one of the broad sides as the bottom. This is removed when the fruit is exposed for sale, showing a carefully prepared and regular surface.

Packages.

The half-case, as used by California shippers, or the variation of it used by Grimsby and Burlington shippers, is most favored in Great Britain. Some importers go so far as to say that it is the only proper package for Canadian pears. This package, which is commonly made of pine, holds about 20 pounds, net, of fruit. The ends are of 5-8 inch, or thicker, and the sides of 3-8 inch material. The inside measurements are approximately as follows: 4 1-2x11 3-4x18 1-2 inches.

A case holding a number of trays, each divided into compartments similar to those in an egg-case, is sometimes used for exporting very high grade fruit. If this case is used, special care should be taken to see that the fruit is made to fit the compartments snugly. This may be done by the use of small quantities of paper shavings, or of ample wrappers for the fruit. If this is not done, the pears will be more or less injured, and even blackened, by rattling about in the compartments.

A box holding about 40 pounds, net, of fruit is sometimes used with success, but this package should be adopted only when the pears have unusual firmness and carrying quality. If tender pears are shipped in a large package the weight is too much for the bottom layers and the difficulty of cooling is greatly

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder yields a greater profit to the grocer in proportion to the number of cans sold than cheaper and inferior powders.

The profit per cent per can on cheap baking powders may look big—but if you will stop a minute to estimate the total profits on an equal number of cans of Royal, you will sell Royal every time.

Royal Baking Powder gives greater satisfaction to the housekeeper because it is pure and healthful and always sure in results.

You seldom have complaints about the flour, eggs, butter, etc., from a housekeeper who uses Royal Baking Powder. Why is this?

When you sell Royal you not only please your customers but maintain your reputation for selling only reliable goods.

This increases trade and swells your profits.

You profit doubly when you sell Royal Baking Powder.

increased. It need hardly be said that pears should never be exported in barrels.

All cases should be protected by half-inch strips of wood running across the ends, so that when the cases are piled one above another the weight of the upper ones will be borne by these strips and not allowed to rest upon the fruit of the lower packages. These protecting strips also serve the purpose of separating the packages sufficiently to allow a circulation of air about them.

Marking.

As the object of marking a package is to advertise the kind, quality and origin of the goods, these three facts should be indicated clearly, neatly and prominently. The marks on a package should be as few and distinct as possible. They should appear on both ends of the pear case, and should indicate the grade and variety of the fruit, as for example, "No. 1 Bartlett Pears"; the name and address of the shipper, as for example, "J. C. Thomas, Niagara"; and the country, "Canada." With the exception of the word "Canada," the Fruit Marks Act, 1901, requires every closed package to be marked as above. In addition, owners would do well to give every packer a number, which will appear on every package put up by him, thus serving to identify his work.

Shipping.

Early and tender pears such as the Bartlett, should be shipped in cold storage at a temperature not above 40 degrees. If there are facilities for gradually warming the fruit when it is taken out on the other side it might be carried at 32 degrees, at which temperature pears keep longest; but as, in most cases, the fruit will be taken immediately from the cold storage chamber on board ship to the open air, it is not recommended to have it carried at a temperature lower than 36 degrees. Sudden and great changes of temperature are injurious to the fruit. Care should also be taken to see that spaces are left, in order to facilitate the circulation of air about the packages.

The later and harder varieties of pears, such as the Duchess, may, if the weather is reasonably cool and the fruit perfectly firm and green when shipped, be sent forward in cooled air chambers. The current of cool air is supplied by powerful fans which keep up a continuous circulation. The temperature is not as low as that in cold storage chambers, but is very satisfactory if the fruit is in perfect condition.

Firm pears have been carried successfully in ordinary well ventilated compartments on board ship. This method may be found quite safe during the late Autumn months, but if the fruit is at all ripe or in any way damaged, it will not stand the journey.

It should always be borne in mind that the function of cold storage chambers and cooled air compartments on steamers, is to retain the chilled fruit at a relatively low temperature. It is unfair to expect these compartments to perform the work of cooling large masses of warm fruit. If, therefore, the weather is inclined to be warm when the fruit leaves the packing house, it should be shipped in refrigerator cars to the sea port, and there transferred without delay to the cold storage or cooled air compartment.

Storage.

It is not, as a rule, a satisfactory experiment to endeavor by storage to place fruit on the market long after its season is past. Storage may be employed to tide over periods of congestion or to lengthen out the seasons, but not to invert them. Recent experiments have shown that pears will keep best if they are (1) Entirely free from bruises or other injuries; (2) if they are packed when they have attained nearly full size, but have not begun to "ripen"; (3) if they are placed in cold storage immediately after picking, and (4) kept at a temperature between 32 and 34 degrees.

Summary.

The exporter of pears must never lose sight of the fact that in the British markets he has to compete with the best fruit in the world; that the French exporters have attained almost to perfection in their system of grading and packing; that the Californian exporters place upon the market annually thousands of cases filled with practically perfect fruit, of large size and excellent appearance; and that, therefore, only the most rigidly exclusive grading will result in the selection of such Canadian pears as will win a place in the esteem of the public, in competition with the shipments already familiar to them. One further fact is of importance, namely, that pears are sold individually or by the dozen, after passing through the hands of the importer and wholesaler; that each individual pear which comes from Canada is scrutinized first by the retailer, before being placed on show, and then by the consumer when it is purchased. The presence of a few pears in unsatisfactory condition reduces the retailer's profit, and as a consequence renders him less anxious to repeat orders for fruit from the same source. The Canadian exporter should therefore grade carefully so as to have only one size in a package, and to exclude rigidly all under-sized or defective fruits. He should also exercise care in packing in uniform packages, plainly marked with the name and address of the shipper, the variety and grade of the fruit, the word "Canada" always occupying a prominent position.

British Columbia Packers' Association.

GEORGE I. WILSON, now general manager of the British Columbia Packers' Association, is a native of Banffshire, Scotland, having come to Canada in early life. He lived in New Brunswick until 1887, when he removed to British Columbia, and has been resident there ever since. Long engaged in commercial and financial matters in this province, he became identified with the salmon industry on the Fraser River a number of years ago and since that time he has always taken a leading part in its development.

He was one of the owners of stock in the Brunswick Canning Co., which owned several canneries, the Pacific Coast Packing Co., and Allan's Canning Co., and took direct charge of the affairs financially, for these two companies. The Alliance, one of the best known canneries on the Fraser River, he also owns entirely. In the disposition of the annual pack of the canneries in which he was interested, Mr. Wilson for years acted as sales agent, so that he has had long experience in the commercial side of the salmon canning industry. He is also well versed in the practical work of putting up salmon, having taken active part in the management of his own cannery, the Alliance, and of the others in which he was interested. His financial ability and keenness of insight are evident in the success which has attended the commercial affairs and enterprises in which he has been engaged.

He was largely interested in the formation some years ago of the Fraser River Canners' Association, a body which comprises all the canners and those interested in the industry on the Fraser River. Their work consists largely in dealing with general matters affecting the industry as a whole, for purposes of mutual benefit rather than for commercial enterprise direct. Mr. Wilson was a member of the first executive of this association and is still a member.

At the inception of the British Columbia Packers' Association Mr. Wilson was elected one of the first board of directors, a position he still retains. When the organization was completed, he was elected secretary-treasurer of the new company and held that position until the annual meeting in November, 1903. Then, upon the retirement of Mr. H. Doyle from the general managership, Mr. Wilson was offered and accepted the position. Undoubtedly, the affairs of the big corporation are sure to be well administered in his capable hands. Still a comparatively young man, Mr. Wilson has identified himself with public affairs in the city of Vancouver and in the province ever since he has been a citizen. Though he has never accepted public office, choosing rather to render service to the people in a private capacity, there has been more than one occasion when strong representations were made to him to induce his acceptance of office, notably that of Mayor of Vancouver, a position to which the people at one time urged him to look.

R. J. Ker, who was recently appointed to the important position of secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Packers' Association, is a young man, whose whole business career practically has been in connection with the salmon industry on the Fraser River, and who has long been held in high esteem among the men who control the industry. His record, moreover, fully warrants the confidence reposed in him. For years he has taken his part along with much older men in the management and direction of affairs in connection with the salmon packing of the Fraser.

Mr. Ker dates his first connection with the salmon fishing 20 years back. As a mere youth he accepted the position of bookkeeper for the old Deas Island cannery, one of the very first to be established on the river. It was started by Mr. Deas, from whom the island takes its name, and who shares the honor of beginning the packing of salmon in British Columbia. When Mr. Ker went to the river, where he spent a season at the cannery, Findlay, Durham & Brodie operated the Deas Island cannery. Later it was turned over to the British Columbia Canning Co., which that firm organized, and for which they still act as agents.

Returning to Victoria, Mr. Ker continued in the office of Findlay, Durham & Brodie, having charge of their cannery business for a number of years. Later he joined the firm of R. P. Rithet & Co., taking charge of the business that firm transacted in connection with the various canneries owned and operated by them. He thus became acquainted with the industry on all the rivers of British Columbia where salmon canning is carried on. In 1897 he was appointed manager of the Victoria Canning Co. and was for four years in active touch with the packing on the Fraser River, spending a good deal of time during the season at the canneries. He also made frequent trips to the northern canneries during the packing season, gaining thereby valuable experience. He is one of the best posted men in the province on prevailing conditions on the rivers and other coast points where salmon run.

The Victoria Canning Co. was one of the concerns absorbed by the organization of the British Columbia Packers' Association, and on account of his company having retained heavy stock holdings in the new organization, Mr. Ker was appointed a director and second vice-president, a position he still holds. The Victoria Canning Co. also at one time owned traps in Puget Sound waters, maintaining a station at Richardson on San Juan Island, and fished a number of traps there. These interests were afterwards sold out, after the company had operated the traps several seasons. While the company operated these traps Mr. Ker had direct supervision of them, so that he has an insight into how that sort of fishing is conducted.

Now that he has accepted the secretaryship of the British Columbia Packers' Association Mr. Ker has severed his connection with the firm of R. P. Rithet & Co., with whom he had been for 15 years. In that time he has acquired not only general experience in the management of salmon canning business, but has also had to do with the disposal of the pack, and with other branches of general business, the firm of R. P. Rithet & Co. having conducted a very large wholesale general mercantile business and been heavy importers of groceries, liquors and English goods. They also have interests in nearly all the leading industries of the province, saw and flour mills, etc. An additional branch of their office work is marine and fire insurance, so that a man with Mr. Ker's long experence in such a firm has had an excellent opportunity to acquire a wide business training. Mr. Ker's fitness for his new position shows he has made the best use of his opportunities. The building up of the reputation of the famous Maple Leaf and Horse Shoe brands of canned salomn has largely been under the care and attention of Mr. Ker, who managed the canneries in which this brand is manufactured.

EXPORT TRADE IN APPLES.

By W. B. Stringer.

THE development of the apple export trade in Canada is largely due to the enterprise of Canadian shippers. They have catered to the wants of consumers abroad in endeavoring to place on the market an article which will meet the requirements of foreign trade.

The Canadian Government assisted the export trade in passing the Fruit Marks Act of 1901, and subsequent amendment. Considerable opposition was aroused when this bill was first introduced. Those, however, who objected most strenuously are now among its staunchest supporters. The Act deals entirely with packing and grading and has been the means of establishing a confidence between shipper and buyer, a confidence which must exist when expansion of business is the object in view.

The past season has witnessed a large export of apples taken at good prices in foreign markets. Short crops in Great Britain, Germany and France left dealers to depend largely on imports. The number of barrels exported from Canada and the United States during the season 1903-4 total 3,496,348 barrels, box shipments figured into barrels, and exceeded the exports of 1896-7, which was the next heaviest season, by nearly 1,000,000 barrels. The scarcity of barrels was the reason of many boxes going forward, and results have shown the advisability of regularly shipping large fancy apples in boxes. Reports state that some shipments of fine fruit have been spoiled by barrel bruises.

In addition to grading and packing the carrying quality of apples is a consideration. Many different kinds vary as to their keeping qualities and should be landed on the market accordingly. It is unprofitable to export December apples in February or March, since an apple fully matured or spent is not wanted.

Good storage on steamers is essential to the landing of Canadian apples in good condition. At the present time the Canadian Government is being asked by shippers to improve the present system by having inspectors pay particular attention to the location of the apples on shipboard. The importance of this is at once seen as the care exercised by a packer prior to sailing counts for little if apples are stowed in a warm compartment. They should always be cool and well ventilated. The Government so far have aided the industry and shippers may rest assured of their continued co-operation.

The Canadian apple export trade will increase, new markets will be found and existing ones developed. In order to insure desirable returns to exporters, apples must be carefully picked, packed, graded, shipped in proper cars to seaboard, and carried quickly to destination in boats adapted for apple storage.

WEST INDIA TRADE.

A REVIVAL in the cane sugar trade between the West Indies and London is now taking place. It will be remembered that at the beginning of last century this trade was of such great importance that the West India docks were specially constructed for its accommodation. In the year 1810 as much as 150,000 tons of sugar were imported from the West Indies and warehoused in London docks. The trade was in the latter part of the century seriously crippled owing to the operation of the sugar bounties, which drove the West India sugar to other markets. So much had it diminished that in 1903 the amount of sugar from the West Indies discharged in London was only 23,000 tons.

Owing partly to the abolition of the bounties and partly to the treaty between Cuba and America, which gives preferential treatment to Cuba sugar, a large amount of the cane sugar grown in the West Indies will now find its way to London. One London firm who have not imported any sugar from Jamaica for twenty years, anticipate that they will receive several thousand tons from that island this year, and it is expected that the whole of the production of Trinidad and Barbadoes will come to London.

For the same reasons that are leading to this diversion of trade to London, a large proportion of the world's production of Muscovado sugar will in future be consigned to London, including large shipments from Java. It is stated that one important London consumer, who has not used cane sugar for eighteen years, has just bought a cargo of Java sugar for refining purposes.

Nova Scotia fishermen are looking forward for an increased catch this Summer and dealers are preparing for an increased trade in finnan haddies with the upper provinces.

By Personal Introduction,

We want to interest Canadian manufacturers, who seek a market for their products in Great Britain, in our system of introducing goods to the trade and public.

We have a powerful organization, both advertising and travelling, with an extensive connection among the grocery and kindred trades, and are prepared to undertake the introduction, in Great Britain, of an article of daily household use or family consumption,—proprietary articles not subject to market fluctuations.

We carry on in the name of our clients all business between the manufacturer and the public, from the time the article leaves the former until it reaches the latter; and also guarantee and collect, for a definite or indefinite period, all accounts opened with the trade, furnishing weekly full detailed particulars of results, and ultimately handing over the business created to any resident representative, who may be eventually appointed; or will, if desired, undertake British Agency.

Have introduced the following into many parts of Great Britain:

ROWNTREE'S COCOA,
CLARKE, NICKOLLS & COOMBS' COCOA,
PEEK, FREAN & CO'S BISCUITS,
HORNIMAN'S TEA,
HOVIS BREAD,
ERASMIC SOAP,
MacFARLANE, LANG & CO'S BISCUITS,
WELSBACH BURNER,
BROOKE, BOND & CO'S TEA,
ETC., ETC.

During the introduction of an article, we will undertake to create a demand from the public and the trade, in any or every city in the United Kingdom on the basis of a fixed inclusive monthly charge; and, subject to the arrangement, will undertake not to handle a similar article during that time, nor for an agreed period after.

The means employed invariably bring about a sale to every third family, on an average, in any town opened up, besides securing accounts with every wholesale and retail trader in the locality, providing the article is one of consumption or household use.

Firms, desirous of experimenting for British trade, are offered an unique opportunity without the liability or necessity of a large initial outlay, or the increase or disorganization of their present staff. The expenditure is of necessity instantly productive, as our records of actual working of methods employed show returns in sales to the public and trade as each dollar is spent, even where the preliminary sum allotted to a trial is based on a minimum outlay. After general advertising it is consequently more productive, as the article is already stocked by the trade.

We are confident of our ability to build up a bona-fide trade quicker and cheaper, taking immediate results into consideration, than by any other known system; and our trustworthiness, reliability and energy will be certified by some of the largest commercial houses in Great Britain.

Correspondence from substantial firms, wishful to extend their business, is invited.

HINTS TO EXPORTERS

THE following hints have been taken from the weekly bulletin of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, Ont., which contains reports of the various foreign commercial agents of the Dominion Government on trade conditions existing in those countries. It is hoped that the same may prove to be of value to Canadian exporters who desire to establish themselves abroad.

Dairies Should Have a Brand.

If Canadian exporters of butter intend to compete against the Danish product, they must be careful with the brands. There is no use in trying to sell goods indiscriminately. The export from every dairy should have its own brand, and should be known by that brand. When Englishmen buy Danish butter they know that they buy from one dairy only, and thus they are always assured of uniformity in color and quality.

The plan at present adopted by some Canadian exporters is as follows: One shipper say, takes "Peerless" as his brand. Probably he buys butter from twenty or thirty different dairies, and marks them "Peerless." As a consequence, when a shipment of butter arrives in England, buyers there have no way of knowing whether they will get ten or fifty bozes, or any quantity, uniform in color and quality.

Barley.

The barley imported by Leeds and Hull, England, is principally from north Germany, Montana and California, U.S.A. There is no reason why Canadians cannot grow such barley as the first and second countries mentioned, and at least they are able to grow any quantity of the cheaper and lighter barley which is much in demand in England. Canadian farmers can firmly rely on a ready market for all the barley they can produce at remunerative figures. Montana barley is a feature in the English market; why not Canadian barley?

Tobacco.

The various tobacco manufacturers of Australia in connection with some foreign firms have pooled their interests and began by advancing the prices. A further advance is feared, and dealers are concerned as to the future. As a result there is demand for other lines. A Canadian house tobacco which has recently been placed on the market, and is in good hands, should secure a good trade if it is in a position to supply the market.

Preferential Freight.

Not only do British ships carry European goods to New Zealand cheaper than they do British goods, but a cut in the rates from New York has also been made. Goods are taken from New York to England and there transhipped to New Zealand at from five to ten shillings per ton less than the rate charged on British goods. These special quotations show the prime necessity of securing the best freight rates on the part of Canadian exporters.

Canned Goods.

There is an increasing demand for Canadian canned goods such as canned tomatoes, canned tongue, canned fruits, fruits in pulp, but without any coloring matter; also a ready market for any quantity of raspberry jam. Canadian manufacturers of these goods would do well to place themselves in communication with firms and brokers in North England.

New Zealand Preferential Trade.

After June 30 next, full foreign duties will be charged on all Canadian goods entitled to the benefit of the New Zealand preferential tariff unless every invoice has endorsed thereon the following declaration:

I, (full name), of the firm of , do hereby certify that this invoice amounting to £ , for goods exported to New Zealand on account of (name of person or firm to whom invoiced), is true and correct, and that the goods specified therein are bona fide, the produce or manufacture of (name of the part of the British dominions in which the goods have been produced or manufactured).

(Signature).

Dated at , this day of , 190 .

Special attention should be given to the following requirements of the Preferential Act:

(b) All British and foreign goods must be invoiced separately, and packed in separate packages.

(c) Where such goods are imported in packages, such packages shall not contain any goods other than those specified in the invoice, and if any other goods are found in any such package they shall be forfeited.

If above instructions are not carefully carried out the onus of proof that the goods are the produce or manufacture of any part of the British dominions, is on the importer.

Canned Trout

Small Norwegian trout, lightly smoked by a special process and preserved in olive oil, are meeting with increased favor in France and already 3,000 cases of 100 tins each are sold yearly in France. Any Western Canadian manufacturer who would undertake to can small Canadian trout in a similar fashion would be in a position to avail himself of the opportunities offered by the other European and world's markets, and build up an important new industry.

At the present time British Columbia, Manitoba and the Northwest Territories are the only provinces of Canada where the fishing of speckled trout, river trout or sea trout for export purposes is allowed.

Cheese.

Large quantities of cheddar cheese are imported by Norway. Considerable of this is of Canadian manufacture, but reaches Norway indirectly through English commission merchants in Liverpool and London. At present a direct import of cheese from Canada does not exist, although much more Canadian cheese would be sold in Norway if Canadian manufacturers came in direct touch with the importers. Last year the Canadian agent had an inquiry from a Norwegian importer for 500 Canadian cheeses. The cheese wanted is of the flat round shape of medium thickness, not too compactly made. In fact a porous cheese is much preferred.

Canadian Eggs in the Lead.

The quality of the eggs coming from Canada is much better than that of eggs coming from any other country. They are larger, more even, and better in color; they come splendidly packed, and there are very few losses in the way of breakage. The only thing I am asked, says a Canadian commission agent in England, is "Why don't you send us more of them?" Enormous quantities of eggs can be taken by produce dealers in England.

Must Pack According to Taste.

If Canada wishes to export to Great Britain she must pack her goods according to the tastes of the buyers. The need for discrimination in the matter of packages cannot be over-emphasized. Everything shipped to England should be carefully done up. More care should be taken in the finishing of all packages, particularly in fruit and butter.

Pork and Lard.

The Royal Hungarian Commercial Museum, Budapest, Hungary, has requested the names and addresses of Canadian firms exporting pork and lard. There would seem to be an opening at present in Hungary for Canadian trade. Prices are high, and a war in the Balkan peninsula is not improbable.

Cider.

A very large trade can be done in Canadian cider in England, and especially the Leeds and Hull districts. Englishmen expect that as Canada has such an enormous quantity of apples, she naturally should make a large amount of cider. It would be in the interests of the Canadian cider men if they would put themselves in communication with the Canadian Government agent in England.

How Butter Should be Packed.

One thing detrimental to the sale of Canadian butter is the way in which it is packed. The English trade are accustomed to buying and selling butter by the hundredweight (112 lbs.) and half hundredweight (56 lbs.), and the packages are made accordingly. They prefer their goods in casks. The Irish send their butter in 56 lb. and 112 lb. casks, and the Danish people all in 112 lb. The casks are beautifully made with a half-round hoop, the same as was used in Canada in days gone by for pork packing. The use of such by Canadian exporters is to be highly recommended. The packages will cost a little more, and probably may increase the freight a trifle, but the extra money the butter will command will adequately compensate for any additional expenditure on packages. This would not be with the idea of selling Canadian butter as Danish, but in England they are accustomed to seeing choice butter done up in that way, and they will pay a bigger price for goods so packed.

AN APPRECIATIVE LETTER.

APPRECIATION is always welcome and especially is it so when it comes from a man qualified to give a candid and unbiased opinion. Such is undoubtedly Mr. M. G. DeWolfe, ex-president of the Maritime Board of Trade, who writes appreciatively of The Canadian Grocer. He says :

"As a charter member of the Maritime Board of Trade, I have been much impressed with the great interest The Grocer has taken in our work from its inception, and also the support given to all Canadian boards of trade. This feature of The Grocer must appeal to every live business man, be he merchant or otherwise. As a rule your remarks about the average board of trade as outlined in the issue of April 8th are too true, but generally we do better in Nova Scotia and most of our boards meet quarterly. No doubt, if the local boards of trade would see that the municipal council did not neglect their duty, it would tend to build up the various towns; in fact, the two associations working together would be a strong factor in any section, and I hope The Grocer will keep up the agitation for better work all along this line.

"Re the Export and Spring Grocer, I think this is one of the strongest features of the year's work, reaching as it does so many parts of the Empire. The four yearly numbers already sent out have done much to let the world know what Canada can produce, and that this Dominion can feed millions. Your motto seems to be to make Canadian products known to the world.

If the export number can induce more people to come out to this Canada of ours, it will be doing a great work. The need of Canada to-day is more men and women to build up happy homes. In the Annapolis and Cornwallis Valley we have sent to Great Britain this season 500,000 bbls. of apples, returning to us $1,000,000 in cash; and we have exported to Cuba potatoes by the steamer load, besides other farm products to other markets. There is room here for lots of men and women at good wages who could soon save enough to have their own homes. To the man of moderate means, or with capital, this valley offers one of the best chances. It has climate, soil, markets, and a population above the average in intelligence and progressiveness. Market gardeners, greenhouse men, farmers, carpenters, painters, laborers and house servants, etc., all can find employment at good wages.

"I hope your staff will use their best endeavor to keep the advantages of the Maritime Provinces well to the front in the export number. This great Dominion of ours would be better known if we could have more export numbers such as are sent out by The Canadian Grocer. For nearly 20 years The Grocer has worked for the interests of the Dominion, and I feel sure has the appreciation of its readers and patrons.

"Although we are pleased at the expansion of the great West with its boundless prairies waiting to be cultivated, still there is a richer promise in the soil and surroundings of the Cornwallis Valley, and advantages that would soon add greatly to our export trade. Give all the information you can and let the world know we are ready to supply their needs, and also offer them better homes. Although your export number is intended to confine itself to information about Canada's food products, still there is other information that would be in order.

"I have not the least doubt but that the appreciation of your readers and advertisers will repay the great efforts you have expended on this special number, and I have no fear but that it will be a worthy number and keep The Grocer in the lead of all other such publications.

" 'Canada for the Empire' would be a good feature in all our plans, and to make it a success let us keep Canada always to the front—including The Canadian Grocer."

MARKET FOR FRUIT PULP.

A large Canadian export trade in fruit pulp may be developed if a basis of trade can be adopted to suit the English importer, without in any way affecting the status of the Canadian exporter.

A proper basis would be for a fully responsible reliable firm to be in touch with the makers, who would first obtain satisfactory information of the firm. They could then sell for the makers on commission, or become firm buyers themselves, and in the latter case they would only pay a proportion of cash against B. L., say 60 or 70 per cent., and the balance after inspection of consignment.

WAR AND THE MARKETS.

The Forum.

THE reason why an international war should have a far-reaching effect on financial values deserves explanation, because it is very imperfectly grasped by the community at large. To most people the matter seems simple enough. In ordinary comment on such events there will be found a prevalent inference that the securities of a given State, in time of war, rise or fall according as that State is victorious or unsuccessful, because success in the contest will make for national adversity. Security values are affected simply and solely because of the enormous expense of war, which leads to sales of new securities, whereby the general level of values necessarily is lowered. The underlying principle of war markets is that the enormous costliness of war, particularly in modern times, makes absolutely necessary very large borrowing operations by the contending governments. Estimates of recent wars indicate that even a small war cannot be fought to a finish except by an average expenditure of fully a million dollars daily. French statistics have lately reckoned that a conflict in Europe between two first-class continental powers would cost each of them in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 a day. These estimates may or may not be exaggerated, but they show what financial requirements may be involved in such a conflict.

Now, no government possesses a fund of money sufficient to wage such a war for any long period; nor is it possible for any government to introduce new taxes such as would raise from its people the sum required. Hence it must have recourse to the accumulated capital of the world's money market. But since the resources of the world's capital have some limit, it follows that such sudden and enormous demands will necessitate withdrawal of invested capital from its previous location.

HOW COTTON ROSE AND SULLY FELL.

World's Work.

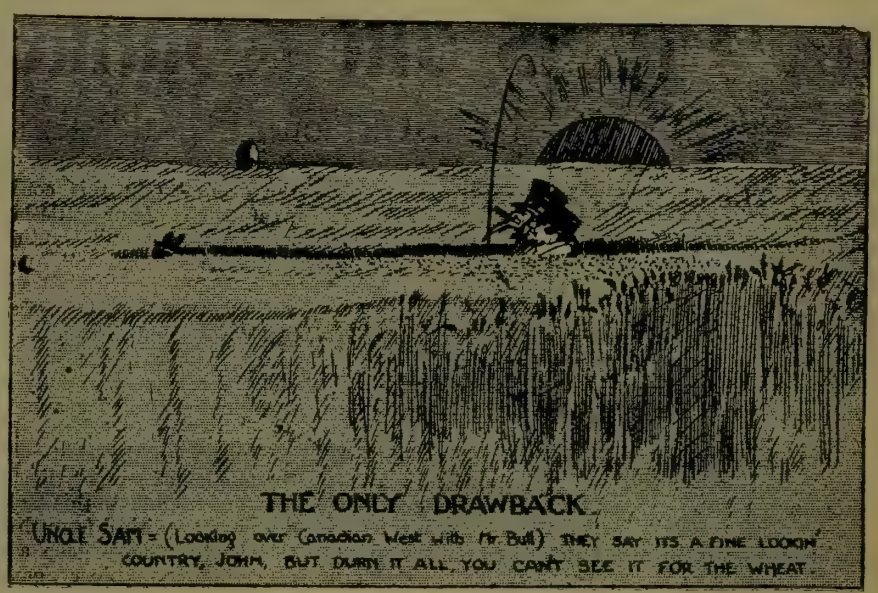
FIVE years ago, at 4¼ cents a pound, the South lost money on every bale of cotton marketed. But prices kept on increasing. A bale of cotton is now worth one-third more than a year ago. Three speculative campaigns led to the present high prices. Theodore H. Price was the first "bull leader." He pushed cotton up to 8½ cents and retired from the market. Then Daniel J. Sully appeared. He had served for fourteen years in a Providence, Rhode Island, cotton house. Later, in the South, he had seen the cottonseed oil mills springing up on every hand until this by-product was yielding nearly $100,000,000 annually. An inferior quality of seed was being saved for the next year's planting. Mr. Sully thought that poor seed would mean a small future yield. Indeed, in 1902, with 3,000,000 more acres cultivated, the production fell off. Sully forced cotton to 9 cents, and then came into the open as a buyer. He had strong backing. In May he had raised the price to 11 cents and added $130,000,000 to the value of the crop.

Then Sully stopped, whereupon W. P. Brown, of New Orleans, came to New York with a record of having made $2,000,000 in a "squeeze" in the New Orleans market. He at once drove 11-cent cotton upward until he had contracted for 200,000 bales of the July delivery, and was ready with the cash when settling time came. Then one day he bid 13 cents for 1,000 bales of August cotton, and not a bale was offered. He had bought four times as much cotton as was in the country. Then in September Sully returned to the market. His estimate of the Government crop report was within 24,000 bales of the official figures, and prices went skyward. Finally cotton dropped and Sully failed.

CONTRABAND OF WAR.

Macmillan's Magazine.

BY the Declaration of Paris in 1856, the principal nations of Europe bound themselves to respect certain principles. The first and most important has been expressed in the jingle, "Free ships, free goods." The early practice of nations had been to seize their enemies' goods where they could get them. Sometimes they confiscated the neutral carrier as well; occasionally they went so far as to prohibit all trade with the enemy at all. The leading innovation of the Declaration of Paris was, accordingly, the protection of the property of belligerents when on board neutral merchant vessels. Clearly the new rule, "Free ships, free goods," protected the neutrals' carrying trade; for under its operation belligerents could safely put their goods on board neutral carriers without fear of capture; and, moreover, the vexatious ancillary incidents of stoppage, search, and adjudication, were gone. On the other hand, neutral property still remained safe on belligerent ships; the converse rule, "Enemy's ships, enemy's goods," was unrecognized, and neutral goods, which could have been confiscated if lying on an enemy's wharves, were safe at sea under his flag. The Declaration,



THE ONLY DRAWBACK
UNCLE SAM = (Looking over Canadian West with Mr Bull) THEY SAY ITS A FINE LOOKIN' COUNTRY, JOHN, BUT DARN IT ALL YOU CAN'T SEE IT FOR THE WHEAT

however, has never been signed by the United States, Spain, or Mexico; and Japan and Russia can accordingly seize each other's goods on United States' ships, though they are not in the least likely to do so.

MERCANTILE SUPREMACY OF BRITAIN.

Quarterly Review.

A HOST of recollections and a dim crowd of shadows of the "might-have-beens" are conjured up by the reminder that in 1860 the United States owned a larger amount of ocean, lake, and river tonnage than the United Kingdom, and, indeed, owned nearly as much as the whole British Empire, as it then existed, put together. It is a remarkable illustration of British progressiveness in at least one direction that, reckoning only vessels of over 100 tons, the British Empire now owns 15,500,000 tons of ocean craft, and the American Federal Union even when lake and river vessels are included, only 3,500,000 tons. In the first half of the nineteenth century, however, America developed in maritime affairs almost as much as in the second half she developed in industrial pursuits. She found use for the magnificent harbors with which nature had endowed her; and within eighty years after the Declaration of Independence she was the largest shipowner in the world—as, indeed, she may once more be, long before another eighty years have passed.

In 1860 the mercantile marine of the United States was, as has been said, equal to our own. Hawthorne writes of America disputing "the navigation of the world with England." Returning from his mission to England, Buchanan publicly declared that "our commerce now covers every ocean; our mercantile marine is the largest in the world." On the eve of secession, Alexander H. Stephens said, in a speech delivered before the Georgia Legislature: "We have now an amount of shipping, not only coast-wise but to foreign countries, which puts us in the front rank of the nations of the world. England can no longer be styled the mistress of the seas." On the eve of the Civil War the United States shared the carrying trade of the world with Great Britain, which was gradually losing the predominance even in her own ports. The outbreak of war in the United States, however, altered these conditions. In the ten years from 1860 to 1870, British tonnage in British ports nearly doubled, and foreign tonnage showed scarcely any increase. Trade was transferred to neutral vessels free from capture; but the advantage thus given to British shipowners was as nothing to that caused by the substitution, about the same time, of iron for wooden vessels. Great Britain instituted and retained a virtual monopoly in the construction of iron shipping, and thus regained and assured her supremacy.

THE BARGAIN COUNTER.

Everybody's Magazine.

THAT women really enjoy a scrimmage with each other, when no men are by to see that they are not living up to their blue china reputation for tenderness, is beyond doubt. Witness the bargain rushes when women make an onslaught on a counter of shirt waists. Are any of the virtues—the gentleness, the tenderness, the sympathy for the weak and needy—for which woman is so justly famed, exhibited on such occasions to women older, feebler, poorer, and more in need of bargains than herself? Nay, verily. It is a brutal struggle to get the best, in which the feeble are trampled under foot, gowns are torn and hats smashed, a struggle in which women of stature and grip do not hesitate to snatch a bargain out of the hands of another woman and bear it off in triumph. In the peculiar creed of ethics that governs woman's conduct toward her sister woman, it is considered perfectly legitimate to covet your neighbor's garments, or her cook, and to get them away from her if you can.

THE HUMORS OF ADVERTISING.

Atlantic Monthly.

AND so it chances that many a commercial proclamation leaps from the advertising column to the realm of popular humor, and is there repeated free of cost. A proletarian vaudeville audience will laugh at the merest mention of Heinz's pickles or Dr. Munyon's inhaler. In "A Chinese Honeymoon," Miss Toby Claude, with a marvelous horizontal pigtail, becomes in the lines assigned to the leading comedian, "Sunny Jim's sister,"—and the joke, so profitable to the manufacturers of Force, brings a burst of uncontrollable merriment. A newspaper jokesmith contrives that Mrs. McBride shall say, "I can't coax my husband to eat any breakfast;" to which Mrs. Oldwife rejoins, "Have you tried Force?" Whereupon Mrs. McBride exclaims, "Madam, you don't know my husband!" All my advertisements, I have determined, must thus reverberate.

Better yet, I am fixed upon it that whenever possible, they shall go capped and gowned in academic dignity. I remember a little affair that occurred some years ago at a venerable New England college. It was Commencement Day. A brilliant audience had assembled. On the platform sat the distinguished faculty and trustees of the ancient institution of learning. Several youthful orators had successively striven for appreciation, till at last appeared the putative candidate for the prize, "for the best appearance on the commencement stage." A handsome lad he was, and a really impressive figure as he strode across the platform in his flowing Oxford gown. He bowed smilingly and then said with radiant amiability, "Good-morning! Have you used Pears' Soap?" With that he paused—seconds, but hours it seemed—while a shudder of scandalized horror ran through us all. I could have sunk into the very depths of the earth. The learned faculty were beside themselves with mingled rage and mortification. The audience gasped. But after the dreadful pause came the ringing exclamation, "This is the advertisement that stares us in the face, turn where we will! Do you read the advertisements in the daily pauers? You ought to." And then followed an eloquent address on the economics of advertising,—an address so vigorous and sane and convincing, and delivered with such ardor and measure that the terrible youth covered himself with honor, and triumphantly bore away the prize. There you had a self-repeater worth talking about.

EXPORT TRADE IN STARCH.

The quantity of starch, including farina, potato, flour and dextrine, imported into Great Britain for 1903, amounted to 165,481,712 lbs., of the value of $4,224,139, and of other farinaceous preparations, $163,320,640 lbs., of the value of $4,210,620, and this amount, with the exception of a small quantity from Germany, Austria and France, was supplied by American manufacturers.

The commercial agent of the Dominion Government residing in Manchester, Eng., reports that English importers of starch and glucose have dealt in these articles from Canada only in small quantities, because, as a rule, the price is a trifle higher than the United States product and the quantity offered for export is very small. One Manchester firm can handle 10,000 bags a month, and if Canadian manufacturers are burdened with an over-production, or desire to increase their output, they can find easily an outlet therefor. Shipping facilities by the Manchester liners from Montreal, St. John, or Halifax are afforded them, and the Manchester Ship Canal enables them to lay the goods down almost at the door of the importer.

GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS | SAVINGS DEPARTMENT AT ALL BRANCHES

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

BANK clearings for March in the United States have been the smallest since 1901, and bank failures the heaviest since 1897. Especially has this been the case in the West. Following up the decline in stocks, commodities are now beginning to recede as well, making the cost of living cheaper for the wage-earner. The fact that at length prices are declining is proof, as in the stock market, that decline is a necessity at last and must go further, unless there is to be a revival of trade, which seems impossible. That the old level was abnormal and that the new level is more reasonable may both be admitted without making the marking-down process painful to sellers. In plain English, commercial classes are about to experience something of what Wall street has already passed through.

THE thirty-fourth annual report and list of shareholders of the Royal Bank of Canada has been issued in the form of a handsome booklet. The report exhibits a satisfactory increase in the business of the bank during 1903. Deposits have grown considerably. Both the paid-up capital and the reserve fund have been increased to $3,000,000 and the balance of profits carried forward exceeded the same balance in 1902 by nearly one hundred per cent. The assets of the bank exhibit a corresponding increase, being now well over $25,000,000. Altogether the report is a most satisfactory one.

In addition to the list of shareholders, with their holdings, several pages of statistics about the Dominion of Canada are appended, supplying in concise form much useful information.

SOME writers, in this country, have been making very favorable criticisms on the great advances made by the Canadian banking institutions. Taking 1st January, 1903, as a basis, comparisons have been made of the Dominion and Australian banking systems.

Thus, the Canadian banking returns—approximately—compare as follows with those of the Commonwealth :

	Canada.	Commonwealth
Note circulation	£13,485,117	£ 3,128,184
Deposits	79,725,886	88,543,660
Specie	2,578,447	19,413,191
Government notes	4,946,115	631,068
Paid-up capital	15,679,746	16,914,280
Reserves	10,074,817	5,783,689

The comparison is an interesting one, as it clearly shows the difference between the two systems of banking.

* * *

A pretty little desk calendar has just been issued by the savings bank department of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. It begins with April, 1904, and runs to March, 1905. Appended is a statement showing the general healthy condition of the bank.

* * *

ONE of the results of the disastrous fire in Toronto on April 19th was to facilitate a movement which has been smouldering in New York for some time, in regard to insurance rates and regulations. The day following the fire the New York insurance men held a meeting to discuss ways and means of classifying risks, suggesting regulations in regard to the construction of buildings and other kindred matters. No definite conclusions appear to have been arrived at, but it is evident that the movement will be productive of some results.

IT is a bull argument that both in England and on this continent money appears to be very plentiful. One sees the rate for call money in New York constantly quoted below 3 per cent., and we hear also of long time loans being made for 4 per cent. and even lower. In England the position with regard to the supply of money is very clearly demonstrated by the action of the Bank of England. They have reduced their discount rate twice within a short period of time, an unusual thing for them to do. The reduction is from 3½ per cent. to 3 per cent., and this is the lowest it has been for more than a year past.

* * *

IN their review of the stock market, under date of April 22, Aemilius Jarvis & Co., Toronto, say : "Money locally appears to be gradually working easier. It is not unlikely, however, that there may be a temporary check in this direction as the result of the heavy sums the insurance companies will be called upon to pay to the owners of buildings destroyed by fire here. It is too early to express a very definite opinion as to whether this fire may have any serious effect on our local stock markets. None has been evidenced so far, and it would appear to us probable that none of the companies affected would be the owners of any considerable quantities of the stocks ordinarily dealt in on our exchange. In the absence of any forced liquidation, the financial situation is sufficiently easy to justify our feeling that the call of loans by fire insurance companies should not materially affect prices."

ON April 22 the Toronto Board of Underwriters ratified the schedule increasing fire insurance rates in Toronto by 75 per cent. The schedule reads : "Extra rates and tariff changes operative on and after 20th inst., for all business, new and renewal.

"Congested District—On all mercantile, schedule and other specially rated risks, building and contents, except dwellings, add $1.00 to rate. Where three year policies are permitted, the extra to be added to the three year rate.

"Outside District—On all risks, building and contents, except dwellings, add 50c to rate. A reduction of 25c may be made on residential store risks in outside district, with the usual warranty. Where three year policies are permitted, the extra to be added to the three year rate.

"Sprinklered risks and fire-proof buildings—Half the foregoing extras to be added to rate, buildings and contents.

"Co-insurance—A reduction of 15 per cent. from rate on building, and 10 per cent. on contents may be allowed for the 80 per cent. co-insurance clause.

"New policies—New policies must be issued on all risks affected by these changes."
